SOFT SHELL CRABS.

They Don't Remain Soft Very Long After the Shedding.

The supply of soft crabs for market is obtained by catching hard crabs and keeping them until they shed their shells.

For this purpose large rectangular floats, made of laths and planking, are employed, and three or four times every day the stock on hand is carefully inspected, all the soft crabs being picked out and packed without delay. They are put into shallow boxes of moist seaweed, from ten to thirty-five dozen in a box, according to the size of the animals.

When the packing is done carefully the occupants may be kept alive from sixty to seventy hours after leaving the water. Crabs have been shipped all the way from the Chesapeake to Canada, arriving at their destination in good condition. In summer, of course, ice is used.

But where soft crabs are concerned it is necessary that they shall reach the market quickly, because their new shells harden with great rapidity. At the end of twelve hours the shells are like parchment, and in three or four days the crab is as hard as ever—hence unfit for use in the form most highly approved by epicures.—New York Herald.

DICKENS AS HE WORKED.

During Long Walks He Evolved the Plots of His Stories.

Every Christmas and every summer for twenty years Marcus Stone, R. A., the English painter, used to visit Charles Dickens at his various homes, especially at Gadshill, near Rochester.

"Dickens," says Stone in his reminiscences, "was one of the greatest and kindest men I ever met. He was imbued with the true Christian spirit. What particularly struck me at Gadshill was the atmosphere of calm and comfort one felt at once on entering the house."

"At 3 o'clock every afternoon we used to have a twenty mile walk in the country round. Dickens spoke but little while walking, and this after a time led me to discover the secret of his amazing industry. He sat only for a few hours at his desk, and I always wondered how he could be so prolific an author."

"Well, owing to his taciturnity in our country walks I began to suspect that it was then he evolved most of the plots of his novels. His brain was active all the time and the task of reproducing on paper the things he imagined and thought about became more or less a mechanical process."

Russian Discipline.

During the review of the army recruits in Vilna some years ago the general in command, turning to one of the new soldiers, asked him, "What is military discipline?"

"It is that a soldier has got to do just what he's told by his superior officer, only nothing against the czar," was the answer. "All right, then. You take your cap, bid your comrades goodby and go and drown yourself in that lake there. Look sharp!"

"Tears glistened in the soldier's eyes. He gazed earnestly and prayerfully at his commander, turned suddenly about and rushed off to the lake. He was on the very brink before he was overtaken and stopped by the sergeant sent to prevent the involuntary suicide."

Result of Intense Emotion.

A young cat was seen to catch his first mouse. As he was carrying it in triumph to the house he suddenly became paralyzed in the hind quarters and for an hour remained stretched on the ground. Then movement returned, but it was observed from the way he knocked himself against the furniture and made no effort to take food which was given to him that he was blind. For two hours he remained in this condition. Finally the blindness suddenly vanished, and pussy was himself again. His was a case of hysterical paralysis, brought on by the intense emotion of his first mouse."

Good Ladies' Horse.

"You told me he was a good ladies' horse," angrily said the man who had made the purchase. "He was," replied the dealer. "My wife owned him, and she is one of the very best women I ever knew."—Exchange.

Not Again.

Hiss (who has been punished several times for malicious mischief, reading on the fire alarm box, "Break the glass!")—"No, no! You can't fool me!"—Ellegende Blatter.

Couldn't Listen Continuously.

"John, you never listen to half the things I say to you," she complained. "Well, dear," he replied, "I have to work part of the time."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Consolation.

"They tell me the baby looks exactly like me." "But babies, you know, often outgrow these likenesses."—Baltimore American.

Rather Strong.

Uncle Billab (who has unwisely sampled the side dish of Roquefort cheese)—By gum! That butter ain't in no trance!—Judge.

Work is not hard. It is the eyes that are afraid of it.
