All are cordially invited to attend these services. W. B. Young, Pastor. A Profitable Social. On Friday night, October 25th, about 40 members of the Endeavor society of the Christian church gave to their friends a progressive social, and it proved to be progressive from every point of view. They met at the church at 7:30, proceeded up on the Heights in a body and visited five different homes beautifully decorated to represent five different ages. They were fed and entertained until a late hour, when all returned home and pronounced it the best evening that they had spent in many days. When the Endeavorers attempt anything there is always "something doing." Democrats in every state of the Union should organize and prepare for polling a record breaking vote Nov. 5. Be it remembered that no matter how certain victory seems, overconfidence is always dangerous. Is there any reason why the Democratic party should go out of existence simply because Mr. Roosevelt has taken up the Progressive measures adopted by the Democrats eighteen years ago?—W. J. Bryan. Mr. Roosevelt stood as a guarantor for Mr. Taft. Mr. Bryan says, "Now, when Roosevelt has failed so utterly in his judgment of men, I ask can he pass correct judgment on himself?"

TALKS ON PLATFORM OF PROGRESSIVES

An able and forceful exposition of the principles for which the Progressive party stands was given by Rev. J. G. Tate at the Unitarian church Sunday evening. Mr. Tate is chairman of the county committee of the Bull Moose party. In opening his address Mr. Tate called attention to the fact that the characteristic spirit of the age is progress in all lines, political included. This is not a symptom to be deplored, he said, but rather a tendency which is bound to lead to better things. Unable to discuss all the planks of the Progressive platform on account of their number, Mr. Tate declared that there is not a single plank but what is in successful operation in some part of the world. The speaker alluded to what he termed foolish veneration for the courts. He said this should not be confused, however, with a proper veneration for them. He declared that the courts were made for the people and not the people for the courts, and that they must be made to meet the needs of the majority rather than to be used as a means for holding them in subjection. "The platform of the Progressive party places more emphasis upon what is right than upon what is expedient," he continued, "and is intended to be the medium through which a social and industrial readjustment shall be effected." Referring to the plank on review of court decisions, the speaker said that "the people must rule or the law will rule. In no other country in the world do the courts override the legislature," he said, "and reserve to themselves the right to declare legislation by the people unconstitutional." With reference to tenement conditions he said that dark halls and rickety stairs menace both health and morals in the large cities of the country. Conservation with a view to reserving the benefits of the great natural resources of the country for the people was discussed by Mr. Tate. In this connection he said that the two best remaining streams adapted for generating water power were the White Salmon in Washington and the Deschutes in Oregon. He used them as an illustration to show the pressing necessity of preventing such resources from being secured and monopolized by private corporations. "In ten years," he declared "the cook stove that uses gas or other fuel will be almost a curiosity and electricity will be used more extensively than is now conceived of. For this reason the power sites should be reserved for the people, and all other great natural resources as well, so far as possible." In conclusion Mr. Tate paid an eloquent tribute to Colonel Roosevelt, Progressive candidate for President, and read Elihu Root's glowing eulogy of Mr. Roosevelt at the time the latter concluded his term in the Presidency.

At the conclusion of his address remarks were made by several present, including W. W. Rodwell, J. M. Blossom, E. H. Hartwig, W. J. Baker and Frank Chandler.

Some Butchers' Names. A butcher who had some spare time made a study of the New York telephone directory for butchers whose names are out of the ordinary or fit the business. Sam Frankfurter has a shop at 219 East Seventh street and A. Weiner is at 1443 avenue A. John Now is on Third avenue and Frank Then on Amsterdam-avenue. If they formed a partnership Now & Then would sound familiar. Wing Sang is in the poultry business and A. Fox is a game dealer. Louis Rich is on Third avenue and John Richer is in the Bronx. Emil Half is on Amsterdam avenue. George Idler hustles in a market on Webster avenue. John Grab is taking things easy in his shop on Second avenue. Max Warm is on East Houston street. Max Lent of Norfolk street never keeps it. Joseph Hug of West Fifteenth street should be a favorite with the women. For the finish how about Julius Goodby of avenue A?—Butchers' Advocate.

The Fiddle Drill. The "fiddle drill" is one of the oldest stonemasonry tools in existence. It is said to antedate Greek sculpture and is in use today in about the same form as it was 2,000 years ago. As its name implies, its action resembles a fiddle. The drill is of two pieces. In one hand a carver holds the drill stock, which is like a carpenter's brace, except that it is straight instead of having a crank. In the other hand he holds the "bow," which is strung with a brass wire and holding it with his left hand, and with his right he draws the bow back and forth, fiddle fashion. This imparts a rotary motion to the drill stock, and the drill is ground to cut in either way it turns. The fiddle drill is used in the finest work in crevices where the sculptor could not reach with his chisel and hammer without endangering the carving.

Queer, but Correct. Professor Iradner Matheva, in his quality of philologist, said one day in New York: "The past participle, 'gotten,' has gone out in England, though it still lingers on with us. In England, however, 'gotten' is almost as obsolete as 'putten'."

"In some parts of Cumberland the villagers still use 'gotten' and 'putten,' and a pupil teacher once told me of a lesson on these past participles where in she gave her pupils an exercise to write on the blackboard."

"In the midst of the exercise an archin began to laugh. She asked him why he was laughing and he answered: "Joe's put putten where he should have putten put."

Saved by Knowledge. In the cotton picking season in Texas a negro who had gone into the country to work returned very much disgusted. "Didn't yo' git no offahs ter pick no cotton?" asked a friend. "Sech ez dey was. White man done offered me one-third o' wat Ah could pick. Ah done tuk a look at de field an' saw dat when it wah all picked it wouldn't amount ter one-third. So Ah done lit out fer home."

"Yoall was in luck not ter git fooled none." "Yassuh. Ah done went ter school an' studied ridentick when Ah was young."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Quite Deaf. When a defendant in Edgware police court said that he wished to call his mother as a witness the court officer observed that she had been in court all the time and had heard the evidence.

The Mother (from the rear of the court)—Yes, but I'm stone deaf and can't hear a word. The Clerk (in a whisper)—Quite deaf? The Mother—Yes.
