Farm Wagon Deere

John Deere Ironclad Wagons

"Ironclad Where There's Wear"

Careful consideration, when buying a wagon, must be given to material, workmanship and special features. Material and workmanship determine durability and special features

John

Material

Because good hickory is scarce and hard to get, many attempts have sen made to substitute some other wood for hickory in wagen axles. Nothing has been found, as yet, that will compare with hickory for strength and resiliency.

While oak, which is conceded best for hubs, hounds and spokes, is more plentful than hickory, there is a tendency to put woods of inferior grades into wagons, on account of high prices of both hickory and oak. Only selected air-seasoned hickory and oak are used in the gears of John Deere Fronciad Wagons. The supply comes from thousands of acres of hardwoods, maintained by scientific and conservative cutting.

Workmanship

Good workmanship is absolutely necessary. Material alone will not also a wagon durable. Farts must be constructed correctly as well as

Only after a feature has been thoroughly tried out and proven advantageous, is it put on John Doure Ironelad Wagons. There is a practical ason for every part being made as it is.

Patterns and templates are used everywhere in our shops.

Axless must have the right amount of pitch and gather in relation to the dish of the wheels. This insures light draft.

Felloes are connected with dowel pins at the joints. Before any iron is placed on the wheels they are immersed in boilest lineard oil. This fills pores and penetrates joints, making wheel moisture proof.

Painting is done by experienced painters with paint ground and mixed specially for the purpose.

Special Features

Ten Clips on axies (four on the front gear and six on the rear gear) intribute the load evenly. This means strength.

Extra long, heavy and wide wrought fron Belster Plates cunnot come one or break. Not furnished on other wagons.

Wrought Steel Skeins, receiving practically full aim of axion, are set perfectly tight. Skeins cannot come loose.

Patento King Bolt Bushing acts as a pivot for the genr and prevents wear. A great improvement over the oil style.

Solid Reach Box, the Reach that will never year out, Special Ire on the Box and the Reinforced Tongue, are more of the superior Deere Ironclad Features.

Remember, it's quality that gives you satisfaction after years of use.
