

Mural dedicated in Cascade Locks

Photography by Jason DeHart of DeHart's Images Lindberg is teaching mosaic work to Bell, an expert painter, and the two forms are being blended in new murals at Parkdale and Mid Valley schools, in addition to the one finished last month at the new FISH headquarters on Tucker Road. Inset: Principal Kim Vogel, left, and mural artists Shelley Toon Lindberg and Allison Bell Fox.

On May 5, the community dedicated the Cascade Locks mural, spearheaded by principal Kim Vogel, who is retiring this year. Kids work last month on a new mural at Cascade Locks School, done in conjunction with Arts in Education of the Gorge. It's now in place in the entry way adjacent to the playground. "Sherry Holloway, who runs after school Excel program, spoke to the kids, and asked them 'what makes Cascade Locks unique,?' and they came up with the mural images," said Shelley Toon Lindberg of the arts program. Students worked with artist in residence Allison Bell Fox after school, and parents and grandparents along with community members got to come in and help with the mosaic. Lindberg and Fox have collaborated on a variety of local murals.

WOMEN IN BLACK

Cathy Blair and Ruth Tsu stand in silence for an hour in the weekly vigil by Women in Black – the local expression of an international effort. "We invite other women who share our values of hope for a more compassionate humankind and for a world where violence is not considered a solution to conflict to come and stand with us," Tsu said. Go to www.womeninblack.org for more information on the global network. The vigil happens every Friday from noon to 1 p.m. at Fifth and Oak.
