'TRAILGATE' happens July 11

Celebrate the world of Mt. Hood single track at TRAILGATE hosted by the 44 Trails Association and the Mt. Hood National Forest. TRAILGATE on Saturday, July 11, is a day to celebrate and enjoy the fine single track trails accessible from Forest Road 44 on the Mt. Hood National Forest. There's plenty of great riding and hiking to be had from the Billy Bob SnoPark, including rides for all abilities, even kids.

The event begins at 10 a.m. and includes afternoon food and music all based out of the Billy Bob SnoPark on Forest Road 44. Learn about ride and hike options plus there will be opportunities to learn about 44 Trails Association, meet local USFS rangers, environmental education and demo bikes from Hood River Bicycles (Yeti, Pivot, Giant, Santa Cruz and more).

Sidestreet Reny

White Salmon Art & Wine Fusion

On Saturday, July 25, the 2015 White Salmon Art & Wine Fusion street fair returns. The music stage will be set up outside Everybody's Brewing and will feature acts such as Dirty Revival, Ezza Rose, Sidestreet Reny, Matthew Zeltzer Band and more. Expect soul, roots-rock, Hip-Hop, Urban Blues, Quirk-Folk — there's a little something for everyone.

Printmaker helps celebrate 75 years at Maryhill Museum

An exhibition of 40 prints by internationally recognized printmaker Andrea Rich is set to open July 11 and run through Nov. 15 at Maryhill Museum of Art, which is celebrating its 75th anniversary this year.

Drawing on printmaking traditions as diverse as Albrecht Dürer and Japanese Ukiyo-e, the Santa Cruz, California-based artist creates vibrant, detailed works that are distinctly her own. Three decades of travel have taken Rich to far-flung locales such as Madagascar, New Zealand, Costa Rica, Africa and Europe, to observe common and exotic species of birds and animals. These first-hand experiences are what she draws on to show her subjects in their natural habitats. On Thursday, July 23, at 6:30 p.m. it's "The Art of Woodcut Printmaking: An Illustrated Lecture" by Andrea Rich. Rich will discuss the woodcut technique — its traditions, complexity and process — and also share her own work in the medium. The lecture is free to museum members / $5 non-members.

Maryhill Museum of Art, 35 Maryhill Museum Drive, Goldendale, Wash.; 509-773-3733.

Portland juggler Curtis Carlyle virtually never stopped talking through Wednesday's 45-minute routine of juggling stunt after stunt involving balls, bowling pins, rings, sticks, cups, and more. A crowd of more than 100 children and adults packed the children's area of Hood River Library for Douglas' lively and humorous display. Many wore facial stick-ons resembling Carlyle's impressive moustache. The performance was one of a variety of activities and events planned for the library's Summer Reading program (details on page A8).

Arts Center invites 'writers in residence' to come and hang out

Writers: got an hour or two?

Share your talents and ideas at a new program starting this month at Columbia Center for the Arts called "Writer in Residence."

"We're trying something new at the Art Center. It's a short-term writers-in-residence experiment, and by short term we mean 1-3 hours," said executive director Kerry Cobb.

From July 10-31 (on Fridays, Saturdays, and Sundays) the center is inviting writers or all types to take a turn sitting in the gallery to talk with visitors.

"We are inviting writers of any type — poets, fiction writers, non-fiction writers, cookbook writers, playwrights, how-to writers, and others. You can talk about your writing, show off your books, write them a poem, share a recipe, talk about your play — you get the idea," Cobb said.

Sign up for a 1-3 hour shift any time from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. on July 10-12, July 17-19, and July 24-26 and July 31 by emailing Cobb at director@columbiaarts.org.

"If it's a success, we'll extend the hours into August," she said.

"We are doing this because it sounds like fun. We want to engage our visitors with a little literary talk, show off our area writers, and then see what happens."

The center will provide a chair and small table in the gallery window, a bottle of water, and a window sign that says "Our Writer in Residence is In." Sessions will be posted on social media platforms, too.

Writers in residence are asked "to gently engage with visitors if they approach you, to bring a bio people can read if they wish, and to talk about your work or have a quote to give people or write them a poem — you're creative so we know you'll think of something. You are welcome to silently read or write at your table when not engaged with visitors."

Writers are asked to provide a photo and a link to your website or info about your work if available.

Corrections

The July 1 article on the Cape Horn Overlook should have said that stonemason Michael Byrne is from Parkdale.
