Providence Hood River Memorial Hospital is committed to protecting your health and safety. To help reduce the impact of the COVID-19 coronavirus outbreak, here are some of the plans we've launched to care for our communities:

- We are following federal, state and local guidelines for personal protective equipment, visitor regulations and safe patient admission, and the transport and treatment of patients who have contracted the virus.
- We are committed to protecting our patients' privacy and will not acknowledge when we are treating people with COVID-19.

If you think you may have been exposed to the virus, we urge you to call your health care provider or connect to a health care expert through a respected app. Providence Express Care Virtual provides affordable visits with nurse practitioners who can screen, assess, prescribe, and provide recommendations and follow up, all via smartphone, computer or tablet.

Most people who contract this strain of coronavirus will only experience mild symptoms. However, people who are elderly or are chronically ill, or who have compromised immune systems or other health issues should seek medical help if they meet the criteria for COVID-19 exposure.

As a community, we must all take precautions to lessen the spread of the virus. It is extremely important for you to:

- Wash your hands thoroughly and often
- Cover your coughs and sneezes, using the crook of your arm and not your hands
- Avoid touching your face, especially your eyes, nose and mouth
- Avoid crowds
- Avoid shaking hands
