Shirley Mallon

Shirley Mallon passed away on Oct. 28, 2020. She was born Shirley Jean Van Horn in Loveland, Colo., on Oct. 16, 1931. She was preceded in death by Jim Mallon, her husband of 63 years, and her sister Martha Harshman.

Shirley Mallon

She is survived by her sister Jeanette Down and her husband Bud Down; her four children and their spouses, Terry Mallon and Ellen Bernards-Mallon, Cary Mallon and Carol Cohen, Tami Mallon Hukari and Brian Hukari, and Craig and Marie Mallon; 11 grandchildren, Rachael and Audrey Mallon, Chris Mallon, Becky Mallon Boots and her husband Desmond Boots, Sidra and Shira Cohen-Mallon, Fletcher and Jackson Hukari, Aaron, Charlie, and Jordy Mallon and his wife Kelly; and three great-grandchildren, Cooper and Ivan Alport and Zoe Boots. Shirley was a country girl who lived most of her life on farms or in small rural communities. During her childhood, her family resided in Loveland and Estes Park in Colorado. One of her favorite memories from Estes Park was ice skating on a local pond, though she was ashamed of her black skates when the other girls all wore white ones. Shirley spent her teen years in the eastern Oregon hamlet of Vale. There she helped in the family farming and restaurant enterprises. Times were hard and Shirley was adept at milking cows and waiting tables. She shared a bed with her sisters Martha and Jeanette, using a hot iron to keep their feet warm. Without a nearby body of water, Shirley regretted never mastering swimming. It was while attending Eastern Oregon College that Shirley met Jim. She would say that until he passed away in 2016 that she had never lived alone. After leaving home for college, she either had roommates or was married to Jim. Jim and Shirley started out in the tiny Mt. Hood community near Parkdale and moved on to Lone, Heppner and Vale for short stints before settling in Hood River. Shirley's life's work was in public education. The majority of her career was as an elementary teacher of various grades, but she would say that her favorite assignment was the fourth grade. She also mentored and supervised student teachers for a few years. While no one would have dubbed her a technology whiz, she was part of the team that brought the first computers into May Street School classrooms. Shirley enjoyed her work so much that she continued substitute teaching a good 10 years after officially retiring. Motherhood was the only thing to divert Shirley's career. There was time away from school to raise her four children. That role expanded to include Den Mother and Girl Scout leader as well a chief supporter of Boy Scouts, swimmers, skiers and ball players. Shirley's parenting reached its zenith when she created the Tuesday Club for her grandchildren during their summer vacations. Unable to sit still later in life Shirley, developed new pastimes. She found friends to walk with and completed several Portland Marathon walks. She also pursued she and Jim's genealogy making several fact finding trips with Jim. The result was a family history volume that she passed on to her children. For Shirley, social contact was an unspoken priority. She was solidly in her element when having coffee or on a walk with friends, presiding over a family gathering or hosting friends for dinner. After Jim's passing, Shirley would often express that she and Jim had had a good life. She would mention that her children had been raised well and that she and Jim had built a couple of houses. She was grateful for always being able to find meaningful work and having a comfortable standard of living. She was grateful for her general good health and that of her family. # Master Gardeners postpone 'Seed to Supper' classes

The Seed to Supper classes originally scheduled for April 13 through May 11 have been postponed due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

OSU Hood River County Extension Master Gardeners are currently making plans to reschedule the Seed to Supper classes this fall and will announce the dates when they have been set, said a press release.

Seed to Supper is a free series of five classes where participants learn the process of turning seeds into supper. Topics that will be covered include ways to build healthy soil, how to make a plan for the growing space, planting and caring for your garden and harvesting vegetables in order to prepare healthy and economical meals. Participants will receive a free gardening book to accompany Seed to Supper classes. Classes are taught by OSU Hood River County Extension Central Gorge Master Gardener volunteers. Registration for Seed to Supper is required and being accepted now for the fall session by contacting the OSU Hood River County Extension Service at 541-386-3343 or megan.wickersham@oregonstate.edu. Seed to Supper is a free program offered by the OSU Hood River County Extension Service Central Gorge Master Gardeners and is open to all adults who wish to learn how to grow a garden.

Anderson's open on limited basis in face of COVID-19

By TRISHA WALKER
News staff writer

Anderson's Tribute Center has had to adjust its services in the light of COVID-19.

"We as a funeral home are an essential service; however, we and the families we serve in Hood River and The Dalles are greatly affected by COVID-19 precautions and limitations in hopes to mitigate the spread," said Anderson's Owner Jack Trumbull.

The funeral home is open, but its doors are locked to ensure it does not exceed the mandated limit of 10 people inside at one time. Executive Order 20-12 went into effect March 23.

"The State of Oregon, federal government and Center for Disease Control is not allowing gatherings of more than 10 people," reads the sign now posted on the door of both the Hood River and The Dalles locations. "We as a community, society and funeral home have never had to deal with a pandemic of this nature and with governing agencies limiting what a family can do, we know this complicates your grief, but understand that this is for your health and the health of our community."

When funerals have been possible, Anderson's staff has live streamed the event through its Facebook page, and the website shares photos, videos and life stories; visitors are able to sign a virtual guest book for families. Copies of the services will be available later for those who are unable to watch live.

"I would love to remind our community that, while our friends are not having a formal service at this time, they have a responsibility to reach out and let them know you care — call them, email them or post a message on Facebook or our website," he said. Trumbull said that between meetings and limited services the entire facility is disinfected and cleaned for safety.

Anderson's Tribute Center, Hood River, can be reached at 541-386-1000; Anderson's Tribute Center Celilo Chapel, The Dalles, is at 541-296-2600.
