BLUFF WON THE DAY.

GOOD AS A LETTER OF CREDIT IN EUROPE.

It Wouldn't Have Worked in America, but in the Little Nice Hotel It Carried Everything Before It—Assurance of a Yankee Tourist.

"Here at home bluff doesn't count for much," said a globe trotter, "but I'm telling you that a good, stiff bluff, with a cheeky American behind it, is worth a lot of money in Europe. When I got around to Nice last year the best hotels were crowded and I had to take up with a small room. On the same floor was a German who was occupying a suite, though not spending much money or putting on any great style. One day there was a great row. The landlord had asked him as a particular favor to vacate for a new-comer, and, of course, the man didn't propose to be turned out. The landlord coaxed and argued, and the German growled and muttered, and I followed them down to the office to see how it would come out. At the desk was an American I had run across in Venice—a buyer for a Chicago dry-goods house. When the landlord and the German began to gabble in chorus the buyer pulled a blank check from his pocket and reached for a pen and said: "All this talk is of no use. I want rooms here. I will buy the hotel and select my suite. Sir, what is your cash price for this hotel?" "You would buy the hotel?" exclaimed the landlord, as he threw up his hands in surprise. "Grounds and all, and I want it today. How much—a million—three or four? And what name shall I fill in on the check?" "Say, now," laughed the tourist, "but you ought to have seen that thing work! The German had determined to be ugly about it, but when he bumped up against a man who had as soon pay four millions as one for what he fancied he felt awed and humbled and ready to quit. The landlord figured that to turn away such a Croesus would ruin his house, and it wasn't half an hour before the bluffer was installed in the suite and the German was chucked out into a dog hole on the top floor. And that wasn't all, mind you. When they sent the buyer a bill based on his supposed millions he got up and threatened to buy up the town and start six soap factories to running, and they cut every item in two and begged his pardon to boot. I don't believe that chap had $1,000 in his name, but he just walked over everything and everybody for two weeks, and it was current gossip that he owned the whole of Chicago and a good share of St. Louis and Cincinnati. Nothing but cold bluff which wouldn't have taken him into an American dance hall as a dead-head, but it was equal to a letter of credit for $1,000,000 over there."

FIGHTING GUY HENRY. Was One of the Bravest Soldiers Who Ever Wore the Blue.

Death mustered out of the service in the country in Gen. Guy V. Henry one of the bravest soldiers and most picturesque characters who ever wore the blue. General Henry more than any other army officer, perhaps, filled the romance writer's idea of a "beau sabreur." During his long army career he was almost constantly with the cavalry, and he was always at the fore front of a charge. At Cold Harbor he led a brigade across an open bullet-swept field. Midway of the charge he was wounded and his horse was killed. He mounted another horse and led on. His second steed was killed just as, in obedience to Henry's spur, it rose to jump over the enemy's entrenchment. The rider fell wounded within the lines of the foe. For this Congress gave him a medal of honor. General Henry fought the Apaches in the early '70s, and a few years later was shot through the head in a battle with the Sioux. He recovered, and later on took the field again against the same Indians. As Lieutenant Colonel, General Henry was in command of the Ninth Cavalry in the field against the Sioux in 1890. His black troopers idolized him. One day under his leadership they had made a forced march of fifty miles from beyond the White River. They had eaten only a little bread and a cup of coffee each. Word came that the Seventh Cavalry was surrounded. Henry looked at his jaded men and asked his junior officers to sound the temper of the troopers. Would they follow him to the relief of the Seventh? When the colored men found out that Henry wished them to follow they sprang to their saddles and rode after him as though, as some one expressed it, they were going to a ball. Henry and his men rode altogether about eighty miles that day, and the Seventh was saved. General Henry wore the army's medal of honor for conspicuous gallantry. He never held any bureau position. He was a fighting soldier pure and simple, being better acquainted with the frontier camp than with the streets of the city of Washington.

WELL-DRESSED MEN'S WEAR. Several Novelties in Apparel Which Have Lately Been Introduced.

Several novelties have lately been introduced in men's wear. In shirts the stripes, which are broad, run up and down. The pattern that will be the craze with fashionable dressers is an up and down stripe with large figures of crowns, lions, or fleur de lis. The colors are bright. In all the best shirts the attached cuff is going out of style and the square corner is returning. Two new collars will be introduced, and extreme dressers will make them popular at once. The "Wun Wing" is a combination collar, having one side of the front cut perfectly straight, while the other has a turn-over wing with the broad end uppermost. The Fabori is a wing collar with the front closely spaced; the wings are cut to a new pattern and have the broad ends uppermost. The high turn-down collar with slightly rounded corners will be the most popular collar this winter. Four-in-hands will be the popular tie, although the puff will be worn. In string ties the butterfly ends will be the rage. In socks, stripes will be the thing, although embroidered socks will be worn by "the" dressers. The suede glove, in light colors, is swell. In kids dark tans will be popular.

WHITE A BRAVE OFFICER. Commander at Ladysmith Has a Most Brilliant Military Record.

General Sir George Stewart White is a holder of the Victoria cross, a grand commander of the Indian empire, a grand commander of the Bath and a grand commander of the Star of India. He has been quartermaster general to the British army since 1898. His career from the time when he entered the army until he started for South Africa had been a most distinguished one.

An Irishman by birth, having been born in the County Artrim in 1835, White was educated at the Royal Military Academy at Sandhurst and entered the army as a subaltern in 1853. He saw active service almost at once. He served during the Indian mutiny with his regiment, the Royal Inniskilling fusiliers, obtaining a medal and clasp for gallantry. Appointed a captain in 1863 and a major ten years later, he went through the Afghan war with the Gordon highlanders and was present at the battle of Charasia, the occupation of Kabul, the expedition to Maidan, the capture of Takti Shah and on the march from Kabul to Candahar.

Afterward Sir George was appointed military secretary to the viceroy of India, and in 1881 became lieutenant colonel of the famous Gordon highlanders. Four years later he was colonel of that regiment. He was sent with the regiment to Egypt, where he and his men distinguished themselves, and in the Burmese war of 1885 he commanded a brigade. For his services in that campaign he was promoted to be a major general and received the special thanks of the government of India. Afterward he conducted the successful expedition into Seboh and from 1893 until last year was commander in chief of the British forces in India.

A Queer Thing. You have probably noticed, if you are a man, that when your tie gets loose it invariably slips round to the left.

This is because you use your right side during a day about five times as much as your left. This movement rebuts on your shirt-collar, causing it and your tie to move in the opposite direction. The muscles on an average man's right side have more than double strength of those on his left side; in fact, so great is the disproportion in development, that by the time a man or woman reaches 40 the right side is, even to the eye, more fully developed than the left, and in many cases this disproportionate growth is highly injurious to health, as it is liable to force the interior organs out of place.

Son's men are of no use until they die, and their life insurance becomes an asset.

GENERAL SIR GEORGE S. WHITE.

GEN. GUY V. HENRY.
