Dry, moist, scaly tetter, all forms of eczema or salt rheum, pimples and other cutaneous eruptions proceed from humors, either inherited, or acquired through defective digestion and assimilation.

To treat these eruptions with drying medicines is dangerous.

The thing to do is to help the system discharge the humors, and to strengthen it against their re-

The Oldest and Best.

S. S. S. is a combination of roots and herbs of great curative powers, and when taken into the circulation searches out and removes all manner of poisons from the blood, without the least shock or harm to the system. On the contrary, the general health begins to improve from the first dose, for S. S. S. is not only a blood purifier, but an excellent tonic, and strengthens and builds up the constitution while purging the blood of impurities. S. S. S. cures all diseases of a blood poison origin, Cancer, Scrofula, Rheumatism, Chronic Sores and Ulcers, Eczema, Psoriasis, Salt Rheum, Herpes and similar troubles, and is an infallible cure and the only antidote for that most horrible disease, Contagious Blood Poison.

A record of nearly fifty years of successful cures is a record to be proud of. S. S. S. is more popular today than ever. It numbers its friends by the thousands. Our medical correspondence is larger than ever in the history of the medicine. Many write to thank us for the great good S. S. S. has done them, while others are seeking advice about their cases. All letters receive prompt and careful attention. Our physicians have made a life-long study of Blood and Skin Diseases, and better understand such cases than the ordinary practitioner who makes a specialty of no one disease.

We are doing great good to suffering humanity through our consulting department, and invite you to write us if you have any blood or skin trouble. We make no charge whatever for this service.

AN ENOCH ARDEN IN LUCK. Comes Home Rich After an Absence of Twenty-three Years.

Twenty-three years ago Oliver H. Newcomb left Wilkesbarre, Pa., for the far West. He wanted to get luck than Mr. Tennyson's. He has not only come back from the Klondike, but has found his wife still waiting and loyal and his son a manly and strapping fellow, eager to welcome him. Newcomb's story is one of early disappointments. Says he: "I had hard luck for some years, and I got so discouraged that at last I did not write at all. Seemed as if I couldn't write unless I had good news to send.

After a time my luck changed, and I finally managed to make a little money. My pile grew slowly, and when it wasn't so small I thought of writing back home again. 'But,' thinks I, 'suppose my wife thinks me dead and has married again. If she has I ain't agoin' to spoil her happiness by turning up where I ain't wanted."

After he had struck it rich at the Klondike he became homesick, returned to his old home, and found that his wife had lived in the hope of his ultimate return.

WAS ONCE A FARM HAND.

Harlow N. Higinbotham Now a Retired Chicago Millionaire.

Harlow N. Higinbotham, director general of the World's Columbian Exposition of 1893, and a partner in the Beguiling Childhood.

When my little son could scarcely walk, says Rev. C. T. Brady, a Western missionary, I took him to the cathedral one day, when I returned for something I had forgotten after morning service. I left the child in the nave, and when I went back to him he had advanced half way up the middle aisle, and was standing where the sun threw a golden light about his curly head. A tiny object he was in that great church.

It was very still. He was looking about in every direction in the most curious and eager way. To my fancy he seemed like a little angel when he said in his sweet, childish treble, which echoed and re-echoed beneath the vaulted roof:

"Papa, where's Jesus? Where's Je-SUS?"

He had been told that the church was the house of the Savior, and on this, his first visit, he expected to see his Lord. That baby is quite grown up now. Not in the faintest particular does he resemble an angel. The other day. when I rode off to the wars, he astonished even me with this request;

"Papa, if you get wounded, don't forget to bring me the bullet that knocks you out. I want it for a souvenir for my collection." Fortunately for me, if unfortunately for him, I brought him no bullet.

Accounted For. Grace Estelle's future husband is unquestionably one of the ugliest men in Washington. That, however, is not a matter of any importance whatever, for he is good and kind and wealthy, and as he isn't a woman, nobody holds his lack of personal pulchritude against him. Grace Estelle loves him just as dearly as if he were Antinous or Apollo, or a matinee hero, but as she says herself there is no call for people to say such bateful things as Isabel said when she heard of the engagement, and she will never speak to Isabel again as long as she lives. They met at luncheon, and Grace Estelle tidled her back hair with her left hand, till Isabel saw the new ring glittering on it, and made inquirles. Grace Estelle blushed.

"Yes," she said, "I am going to be married." "Who to?" asked Isabel-nobody outside of Boston or a book ever said "to "To Mr. Elimore," answered Grace Estelle, proudly.

"Mr. Ellmore!" echoed Isabel. "Mr. Elimore! Why, is it an election bet?" Some people derive a lot of pleasure from affecting affectation. Wise men feed on fools.

JACK JOUETT'S RIDE.

YOUNG INNKEEPER'S WARNING TO THOMAS JEFFERSON.

Another Revolutionary Hero Who, Like Paul Revere, Kode Long and Hard to Warn American Patriots of the Approach of the british.

Paul Revere was not the only man who rode long and hard to warn patriots that the Bridish were coming, in the days when the present entente between England and America was a thing undreamed of. Worthy to rank with it was the adventure of Jack Jouest, a young Charlottesville innkeeper, who rode thirty miles to save Thomas Jefferson from cap.ure. The story is told in the St. Nicholas by R. T. W. Duke, Jr.

Jack shrewdiy guessed that Tarleton would follow the highway into the main road that led by the country sears, the homes of the gentry. Jack knew a shorter route, an old disused road that would lead him to the river, thence to Monticello, and then to Charlottesville-not a pleasant road to ride or drive, though as picturesque a route as one often sees; for on either side grew great pine trees here, and massive oaks there, while dogwood and sassafras and sumae filled in spaces. The road had once been a buffalo track and then an Indian trail, then a wagon road for a while; but as no one ever worked it or changed the grade, It rapidly washed into a succession of red gullies and became well-nigh impassable. So it had been abandoned many years, and nature had covered up the scars made by the animals and men, and only in a few places could one have known that it had ever been used as a highway. Broom-sedge grew wherever there was an open space: ferns of a hundred varieties clustered in every hollow where water ran; and the wild bramble ran riot everywhere in the shade. Into this old road Jack pushed his horse, and soon was dashing at full speed over hill and dale. It was a dangerous ride, even at a slow gait. Deep gullies lay concealed under treacherously smiling wild flowers. Ground-h g holes offered pitfalls liable to break the leg of his steed; overhanging limbs swept him in the face, and the wild brier ever and anon caught him in a painful and harassing embrace. His face bore for many years the scars left on it by this brier, which, you know, climbs up trees and seems to throw itself from one to another. But Jack bad no time to consider these things. He knew that in a few hours the enemy would be in Charlottesville, and make the Governor and Legislature prisoners, unless he could give them warning. His mare was sure of foot, sound of wind, and no other fox-hunter ever got the brush whe

Jack and she were in the hunt.

000,000 on the "right side of the but oftener cheering her in the race with a merry whistle or encouraging nearly forty years ago. Twenty years word. He had thirty miles to make. ago he entered the employ of Marshall He could have as easily made fifty on a good road as thirty through this wilderness. At one point the disused road entered a field in sight of the highway along which Tarleton's legion was passing, and a few stragglers saw Jack when he dashed into the open. They followed him with loud shouts and a pistol-shot or two, but when he dashed into the woods they abandoned the pursuit. Once his bay mare fell, her foot having caught in a mass of brush and brier and half-rotten logs; but up she scrambled, and away she went, as if she knew that the fate of a commonwealth depended upon her. In two hours Jack rode his thirty miles, and paused in the ford just opposite the little hamlet of Milton, two miles from Monticello. Only a mouthful of water did he allow his gallant bay to sip, and then he dashed up the river bank and on through the streets of the village. stopping not at anxious hails of men and women, but merely shouting: 'The British are coming! The British are coming! In ten minutes he drew rein in front of a quaint brick house on top of the now famous mountain. 'He was a sight, too,' the darkles said. His face was torn and bleeding from the wildbrier thorns, his gay blue suit covered with mud and dirt, his mare covered with sweat and foam and panting as if her heart would burst through her sides. Down from the porch in front of which Jack had halted came a tall, thin man, dressed in a suit of nankeen, lace at his wrists and shirt-front, and with a little sword-cane in his hand. This man had clear, sparkling blue eyes; a thin skin under which the blood almost seemed starting. His hair was thin and curly, and covered with white powder. For a moment he did not recognize the rider. Then, as he drew nearer, 'Why, Mr. Jouett,' he said, 'what brings you here, and with your good horse so well-nigh spent? "Jack could only gasp, 'The British, Governor! Tarleton and his men passed Cuckoo Tavern at six o'clock this morning."

ART STUDENTS OF NEW YORK.

They Live in a Manner Very Unlike That of Piris Stutents. The art schools of New York and the life of the students in them is handled in an interesting manner in the Woman's Home Companion in an article entitled "The Girls' Art Schools of New York." As to how the young women students live the author writes as fol-

"There is no absurd dressing among the art students in New York-at least not after they have attended the classes for a day or two; and the popular notion that all art students live in dingy, barren garrets, cook their own meals by means of their oil-lamps, and live gen- different with an office boy.

erally upon the outer ragged edges, has no ground in fact, so far as the students in New York are concerned. There are some such cases, but they are extremely rare. In the great majority of cases the students, if they cannot afford to pay for the necessities from their own pocketbook, stay away from the city until they can borrow sufficient funds. Many girls with thin purses attend only half-day classes, and work at some commercial occupation the rest of the day. I know of several girls who do enough type-writing in the mornings to pay for their afternoon art lessons and their board besides, while numbers of students work for a salary in the daytime and attend art classes at night only.

"The art students of New York do not seek living-places in any one particular part of the town, as do the students of Paris. The various art schools are in widely separate sections of the city, and as living near to their schools means so much saved in car-fare, the girl students usually live within easy walking distance of their respective classrooms. Possibly 95 per cent of the students board with private families or live in ordinary boarding-houses, where they can secure fair board and seven dollars a week is the average amount charged. The other 5 per cent of the students rent studios of their own, or more often meagerly furnished bedrooms, and take their meals in restaurants; or else three to a dozen of them club together, rent a flat, and hire a servant to cook their meals."

Valparaiso Street Cars Ruled by Fair

Giris of Complacent Nature. The most startling feature of life in the Chilian metropolis that strikes the foreigner is the street-car service. The conductors on the cars are all women, and that in a country where woman has by no means reached the high standing in social and public life of her sisters in the United States.

The girls who run the cars are, with

seems to be little objection to their nover occupation. The male passengers, of course, are pleased, and the few who are not are too polite and gallant to give vent to their sentiments. The fe-

The fact is that Valparaiso's female conductors are exceedingly courteous and obliging. They are usually a strong and robust set, and they sympathize especially with women passengers accompanied by children, whom they help board and alight from the cars.

The fair conductresses deserve every cent of their wages, which amounts to about 50 cents per dag in United States money. For this they collect atl fares and name the streets crossed by the tramway. Nor do they mouth their phrases as do their brothers in New York and Chicago.

On some of the lines leading into the suburbs the conductresses have an easy time. Seats are provided for them in all the cars, and it is not an unsual thing during the dull hours to see them taking it easy, reading novels or the daily papers. They are neatly dressed in black, with white aprons, in the pockets of which they put their money and tickets. They wear broad-brimmed sailor hats.

The bane of their existence are the men inspectors who are detailed to count the pasesngers to see that they do not "knock down" fares. They have nicknamed these men "Judases."

An Amused Foe.

The proprietor of a small store in New York owns a black kitten that cultivates a habit of squatting on its haunches, like a bear or a kangaroo, and then sparring with its forepaws as if it had taken lessons from a pugilist. The telegram tells how the kitten conquered a blg dog.

A gentleman took into the store an enormous black dog, half Newfoundland, half collie, fat, good-natured and intelligent. The tiny kitten, instead of bolting at once for shelter, retreated a few paces, sat erect on its hind legs and put its "fists" in an attitude of defiance.

The contrast in size between the two was intensely amusing. It reminded one of Jack the Giant Killer preparing to demolish a giant. Slowly and without a sign of excitabillity the huge dog walked as far as his chain would allow him and gazed intently at the kitten and its odd posture. Then, as the comicality of the situation struck him, he turned his head and shoulders around to the spectators, and if animal ever laughed in the world that dog assuredly did so then and there. He nelther barked nor growled, but indulged in a low chuckle, while mouth and eyes beamed with merriment.

SURE TO FOLLOW

If the Blood is Impoverished Diseases Which Often Puzzle Doctors are Inevitable.

From The Tribune, Webster City, Ia. Physicians are often puzzled by an ailment that does not yield to the usual remedies, patients are caused much suffering and expense while experiments are being tried upon them, when in many cases the seat of the disorder is in the blood. If this vital fluid is impoverished disease is sure to follow. Build up the blood, the diseased part is nourished and strengthened, and health results. This is the simple history of what often appears to be a complicated case. Mr. Ezra Edwards, the well-known merchant of Webster City, Iowa, passed through sucn an experience. He says:

"I have always believed that my trouble was due to the impoverished condition of my blood. About tour years ago my ankies began to swell and cause me great pain. I am quite heavy and as I was on my feet constantly I suffered intensely. Finally the swelling became so bad that I could not walk and for a week I was confined to my chair or bed. Three doctors treated me but did not effect a cure.

"I first heard of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People through an advertisement in a religious paper. About six months ago I began taking the pills and I felt good results from the first box. I continued taking them as directed for nearly five months. I am now 42 years old and am the picture of health. I am will-ing to tell the world that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cured me and I know they will cure others if they are given a thorough trial.

"Hardly a day passes that I do not tell some one of the benefits I have received from Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, for I think that any one suffering from any disorder of the blood or nerves should give them a thorough trial. Signed.
