POINTER FOR COLLECTORS.
Debtor Propounds a Query that Sets One Man to Thinking.

A collector of bad accounts received a lesson from a delinquent debtor a few days ago that has started him to thinking a bit. The collector had been chasing this delinquent for about six months and had become tired of "Call to-morrow," "I haven't it just now," and other excuses of a similar nature, and thought it was time to become "sassy."
"See here," he said the last time he called, "are you ever going to pay that bill?"
"Why, yes," replied the delinquent. "I suppose I will pay it some day or other. But look here yourself, young man, I think I can show you a thing or two. How many bills have you in that bundle?"
"About forty, I guess."
"How long does it take you to visit these people?"
"Generally, I can get over my route in a day."
"Suppose everyone of them should pay up?"
"That would be fine?"
"Oh, it would, would it? What would you do for a living if everybody paid promptly?"
The collector turned the thought over in his mind for a moment or two, and looked blank.
"Gracious!" he said, "I'd be out of a job!"
"That's exactly my point. Don't therefore, be so infernally anxious to collect every cent due to your people at one time. A few collections a day are enough. As for my account, come around some day next week, and I may help you out of business by paying it. Good day."—New York Tribune.

A Filipino Delicacy.
The Filipinos in Manila have been having an unexpected feast. It came to them like the manna to the Israelites, being furnished by a swarm of locusts, which recently flew over the city. To these people the locusts are a great delicacy. The insects are served dry or in a poultice. They are also made into pies and cakes, and in some instances ground into powder and steeped in liquid so as to make a beverage. At times catching the insects becomes a very profitable business. In Manila and the other large cities they sell at $2 a sack, gold. These sacks hold about a bushel. When dried, the locust can be kept indefinitely. The natives never eat the grasshoppers green, but they eat them in every form, dried or cooked. They even carry them in their pockets and eat them as they would candies and other confections. When dried the locust is nice and crisp, and tastes something like gingersnaps. Some confectioners dress the grasshopper in various ways, serving him up occasionally with chocolate trimmings and coats of sugar.—New York Post.

Centerboard Well Was Deep.
There was a new young man on board. He didn't seem to have much to say about the management of the boat, but he wore a lovely yachting suit. The girls were very much impressed. It seemed to give them a sense of protection just to sit near him. One blue-eyed girl was heard to say to him: "I am not the least bit afraid when there are so many good sailors aboard. You know all about sailing, don't you?"
"Not quite," he answered modestly. Just then the captain called to him: "Barry, take the pull and fill up the centerboard well."
Cheerfully the young man went to work and the girls stared.
"How many does it take?" he asked as he emptied the sixth pail; then he added: "What are you lubbers laughing at?"
Then the girls realized that it was the first time the man in the lovely yachting suit had ever been on a sailboat.—Chicago News.

A "Tennessee Lark."
The "Tennessee Lark"—a fresh young singer from Memphis, Tenn.—is all the rage among society people of Washington. She is wonderfully fascinating, and just as chic as any 1901 girl. Mrs. Letter and Mrs. Reginald De Koven and the wives of the cabinet officers are especially interested in her. She recently gave a concert at the exclusive Washington Club, when a tremendous ovation was given her.

Revolutionary War Claim.
A Revolutionary War claim for $400, the special value of which was $40.00, contracted under the act of 1778, has recently been liquidated by the Treasury Department. The interest and principal amounted to $12,906.20.

Phenomenal.
"We have the most wonderful cook you ever saw. You know, we only engaged her as a plain cook."
"Yes?"
"Well, she makes good bread."—Town and Country.
