CURE FOR THE BLUES.

HOW TO GET RID OF SPELLS OF MORBIDNESS.

An Absorbing Interest or Occupation is Best Remedy—Victims of "Blue Devils" Are Too Much Taken Up with Their Own Sensations.

Is there anyone of the human family who does not suffer occasionally from that "loathed melancholy" called "the blues"? If such a person exists he is as rare as the great auk.

From whatever cause the blue devils take possession of us, whether from derangements of the liver or nervous system, or from simple ennui, the cure for them is the same, unless, indeed, they are bred by organic disease which has taken vital hold of the system.

And this cure—an absorbing interest or occupation. People who ride their hobbies in season and out of season very rarely have the blues. Enthusiastic collectors are also apt to be aggressively cheerful. If you suffer from depression of spirits, then take the advice of authorities on the subject and look about for an interest in life.

Ursula Gesterfeld, in one of her books handles the blue devils without gloves. She frankly informs the victims that what is the matter with them is not that they are "too fine for earth's coarser uses," and that their delicate natures suffer from contact with the rude, boisterous world, but that they are abnormally selfish, too absorbed in their own sensations to heed the fact that they are enveloping themselves in an atmosphere of gloom which must necessarily depress all about them.

Her prescription is to smile, smile, smile in season and out of season; smile whether you feel like it or not, and gradually the mental state will adapt itself to the bodily expression.

A charming young woman was heard to say the other day: "I am too much in love ever to have the blues." "Too much in love?" echoed her astonished auditors, surprised at this frank revelation. "Yes," she replied, provokingly, "too much in love with myself. I regard myself as a mirror, don't you see, put on earth to reflect all the joy and gladness of the universe, and so I cannot think of letting myself become obscured and dimmed by such ugly clouds as the blues. Ah, never! I am too vain."

Charles Newcomb, that conifer of epigrams, says: "There is no stimulant that is more speedy and thorough in its action than the thrill of joy and gladness. It is a natural tonic, and the entire system responds to its exhilarating vibrations.

Anything that arouses confidence in life, with a larger sense of its use and beauty, increases human energy and prepares the best conditions of success in all undertakings. We are never left in life with an entirely empty cupboard.

There is always some little portion of fat to eat and sweet to drink if we will only go our way and look about us, and not allow the leanness of our grief to absorb our thoughts or tears to blind our eyes and fill every cup with bitterness."

There is a very old story about the famous clown, Grimaldi, who once called in a physician to see if he could offer any alleviation for the depression from which he suffered. "Go and see Grimaldi," advised the physician. "I am Grimaldi," replied the "melancholy Jacques" in the jester's garb.

Poor clown! He was suffering from the reaction occasioned by the constant effort to be funny. He needed change of thought, interest and occupation. "It isn't the 'unting as' 'urts the 'orses, it's the 'ammer, 'ammer, 'ammer on the 'ard 'igh road."

There is an exceedingly bitter tonic that all of us must gulp down sooner or later, and that is that no one cares a straw about our woes. The man who laughs is the man who has friends by the score, whose society is eagerly sought and who is always welcome, but the woman who weeps very soon learns that she must weep alone. "This sad old earth has need of our mirth."—Chicago Record-Herald.

CHINESE EGGED AN ACTOR.

Celestial Edwin Booth Meets with a Rather Forcible Criticism.

The artistic temperament is, perhaps, more highly developed in the Chinese theater-goer than in his American counterpart. It certainly was manifested strongly enough the other night in San Francisco, for Chew Foo, the great Chinese star who recently went to that city after winning the highest praise from the critics of the Chinese press in New York, was pelted with decayed eggs and then made the target of innumerable light firecrackers, all because he failed to dress the part he was acting in a proper manner.

Chew Foo stands in practically the same light to the Chinese play-goer that Edwin Booth stood to the English-speaking public. Yet there were occasions in the career of that great actor, when he played "Hamlet" arrayed in a long frock coat, his head covered with a silk hat in place of the raven hair of the mad Danish prince. There is, however, no record that the audiences did not make all allowance for delayed trains and washed away bridges, which were the causes of the lack of costumes.

Hundreds of instances might be cited of indulgences shown by American audiences to actors who failed to dress the parts they were playing as they should be dressed. These are instances right in this city, says the San Francisco Call, where—but never mind, these cases have nothing to do with the riot which took place in the Washington street theater because Chew Foo wore the dress of a young man when he should have worn that of an old man.

Sergeant Conboy was there. He is always there when any trouble arises in Chinatown, but he cannot tell the cause of the row. He saw Chew Foo on the stage. For a moment no one in the audience moved, and then pandemonium broke forth. There were yells and catcalls in Chinese and then a fusillade of Chinatown eggs began. The eggs that a Chinaman will throw away are beyond description. Just plain, ordinary stale eggs they eat and profess to like. These had got beyond that stage and were only fit to be thrown away. Chew Foo got about a bushel basket of them. After that the men in the audience began to throw lighted firecrackers on the stage. To those outside the theater it sounded like half a hundred men engaged in pistol practice and word was sent to police headquarters that half of Chinatown was engaged in battle, murder and sudden death, and that the war of the Tong had finally broken out in real earnest.

Half a dozen policemen were rushed to the theater, only to find the place resting in perfect peace. There was no noise, no disturbance, and the play was going smoothly along.

BLOWING UP OF THE MAINE.

Gen. Fitzhugh Lee's Theory of the Destruction of the Vessel.

In his interesting address in this city Monday evening General Fitzhugh Lee gave his theory regarding the destruction of the battleship Maine, says the Indianapolis Journal. After relating the circumstances of the explosion and describing the scene of fire and carnage he witnessed on visiting the locality a few minutes after the event, he said:

"My theory is that it was done by young officers who had been attached to Weyler. After the catastrophe they disappeared. Young officers of the Spanish army did not take the trouble to hide their pleasure over the horrible affair. Many of them dropped their usual potatoes of red wine and opened bottles of champagne in the cafes. The government of Cuba immediately tried to forestall European opinion by sending a dispatch which stated that the explosion had been caused by the carelessness of the Americans themselves. As to that I want to say that the keys to the magazine of every American man-of-war are brought to the captain and are hung on hooks at the head of his bed so that he can know where they are all the time. When the divers went to work on the Maine Captain Sigbee said to them: "Go into my cabin and see if the keys to the magazine are hanging where they ought to be." The divers came up with the keys. They had found them hanging by the side of the captain's bed. Furthermore, the investigation brought out that the plates of the fore-part of the ship were bent upward, showing clearly that the force of the explosion had been directed from the bottom. The court of inquiry heard plenty of testimony which showed that there had been two explosions; one when the torpedo went off and tore its way to the ship's magazine, and the other when the magazine itself exploded with a roar."

The real cause of the destruction of the Maine is still a mystery, though there is strong reason for accepting General Lee's view. The report of the United States court of inquiry sustained the theory of an outside explosion, but said "the court has been unable to obtain any evidence fixing the responsibility for the destruction of the Maine upon any person or persons." The solution of such mysteries come in time, when those who are in possession of the secret think the right time has come.

INTERESTING BOER WOMEN.

Description of Their Life in the Concentration Camps.

In the Pall Mall Magazine appears a most interesting description of life in the concentration camps. The writer, Miss Brereton, of Guy's Hospital, spent two years in South Africa, in work at the yeomanry hospitals, and has just returned to England. She was one of the commissioners appointed by Mr. Brodrick to visit and report upon the concentration camps, and in the course of the inquiry she visited every Boer camp but one. Most of the women like to wear black dresses, with tight-fitting bodices and very full skirts and a large black apron. They wear large black and colored bonnets, called "cappies," very similar to those worn in our midland counties some years ago. The material is either woolen or print, and they are most elaborately stitched and befrilled, and so big as to nearly hide the face of the wearer. They more often than not wear home-made gloves, leather, with the fur inside, or any kind of woolen material. The girls wear blouse bodices and skirts, and the same big cappies as their mothers, except on Sundays or when going into town, when they are replaced by very smart hats and parasols. They are even more scrupulous about their hands than their mothers are, and buy kid gloves, which are worn on all occasions, even when the gloves have ceased to have any fingers. "They are the most particular people about the effect of the sun and air on their skins I have ever seen. It is no strange sight to see women walking about, their faces enveloped in a cloth with little apertures for the eyes."

Whenever we see the word "felicitous," we have a better understanding of the feelings of a bull when he sees a red flag.
