THE NEGRO AND SCHOOLS.

A few weeks ago at a meeting of the Southern educational board Clark Howell of Atlanta suggested to Northern philanthropists that in piling up funds for the education of the Negro they masses of whites in the South. Then

"Sometimes in the very shadow of the gilded domes of Negro universities which be spangle the firmament of our white children, threadbare and footsore, have turned their eyes appealing- then, the Chicago courts are asking, is ly tor help, not only from the friends of knowledge, but from the state. The it not that the deserted wife is loath desert of carpeting and furniture. Not philanthropy which has directed its to set in motion the machinery of the a woman in sight. Now look at the energy towards the South has been ex- law, or if she has done so, is generally pended almost exclusively in behalf anxious to stop it. of one race, overlooking the greater necessiti. e of the other."

Yet of the $6,000,000 contributed by philanthropists for education in the must," he said, "devise an effective smoke as they write if they want to. Southern states fully one-half has been devoted to the education of whites.

The great Peabody fund was used for the free education of all children and races. The Slater fund, it is true, was used for the education of the Negroes, but all the contributions to the Southern educational board are to be used for the improvement of schools for lost through the default of the wife as whites as well as Negroes.

Mr. Howerl's statement has called out replies from several prominent educators, but the most convincing reply that would land him in jail." is found in the educational reports.

The last report of the commissioner of education shows that in all the South not including the District of Columbia, there are 85 public high schools for Negroes. There are reported in Alabama 61 high schools for white children to one for Negroes; in Arkansas, 60 for white children and four for Negroes; in Kentucky, 62 for white and eight for colored; in Maryland, 49 for white and two for colored; in Mississippi, 92 for white and seven for colored; in Mis-94 for white and three for colo:ed; in Virginia, 65 for white and five for colored.

Louisiana has 31 high schools for total number of high schools in the South for colored children is 85, and the number for white is 1,289.

When the Slater fund was established there were very few primary schools for Negroes in the South. Now most of the states provide means for primary education, but they have given little attention to secondary or high schools. It was the aim of Northern philanthropists to remedy this evil and secure for the Negro children greater advantages in industrial and higher education. Yet the disparity between the races still exists.

In Mississippi, for example, there are 43 private secondary schools for whites supported by the benevolence of individuals, and 11 for Negroes. In Georgia there are 60 such academies for whites and 20 for Negroes. In spite of benevolence, the Negro is still at a great disadvantage in securing an education in the Southern states.

The object of the Southern educational board is to stimulate interest in closed the department, and returned, the public schools for both races, and these efforts are countenanced in the South as well as in the North. Most Southern educators realize the importance to the South of educating the Negroes and the danger that lurks in the illiteracy of so large an element in the population.

All these gentlemen have recognized that the philanthropists of the North have done a great work in the South in providing means for educating the Negro. Mr. Howell seems to have lost touch with the prospective educators of his own region.

The guests of the Occidental Hotel enjoyed exceedingly the music and songs of the native musicians, who were ordered by Prince David to play two or three times a week during the serving of dinner at the hotel. This whim of the Prince cost him a pretty penny.

In Honolulu, where Prince David has a magnificent home at Waikiki, he often entertains a hundred or more of his friends for a day at a time. When he was making the campaign for delegate to Congress a year and a half ago he at one time gave a feast to 1,200 of his constituents. This banquet was served in the open air as is the custom in Hawall, and beginning at 9 o'clock in the evening did not end until day broke. -San Francisco correspondence New York Tribune.

Favored Only Famous Authors. I know an ed.cor who, some years ago, reasoned along these lines: "i'eoall that has been done by Northern ple say we do not read their manuscripts; then why maintain this manuscript-reading staff? We might as well save the money which it costs us to do ton. the very thing which these people say we do not do." And forthwith he unread, all manuscripts save those which came from famous nechors. Speaker Henderson, An amusing story is told by one of that occurred in the early days of his Congressional career, which is very

One hot summer evening the Massachusetts member and his companion were scated in the library, with doors and windows all open, that they might get whatever air was stirring, when a rather dapper young man sauntered into the room, stared a moment at its occupants, who were evidently unknown to him, then threw himself down in a chair under the light, took up a paper and began to read. The master of the house and his chum looked at each other, looked at the them said a word. After a few moments their unknown guest walked over to the bell and touched the but-

"Look here, John," he said to the mazed batter who answered the ring. "I wish you would see if you can find Smith. He must be somewhere about. for he promised he'd meet me here at 10 sharp.
