BIRTH OF NATIONAL AIRS.

Writing of "Yankee Doodle" and "John Brown's Body."

In one sense national music is any music which is beloved by a nation.

Under this head would come "Home, Sweet Home," and "Swanee River," a more tender lyric of home and of its memories than Stephen C. Foster's "Old Folks at Home," of which about 500,000 copies were sold.

Often a national song is at first of local fame and interest, and by merit becomes national, and may even be spread the world over.

Two French songs sung during the reign of terror were in some degree induced by American events, and these form a preliminary to our American music.

During the revolution there was no American composer of note. No American tune during the revolution took root as the one which began and ended the war, and existed in England in 1775 or 1776—"Yankee Doodle."

The words were written during the French and Indian war by Dr. Richard Shuckburg, a British surgeon, in a sort of parody way on seeing some of the New England troops marching into Albany, and set to an English dancing tune.

In Europe "Hail, Columbia," is considered our chief national anthem, and has certain rights to be so considered, as it was composed on American soil, only they put the cart before the horse, and the tune was composed and played nine years before the words were fitted to it.

Nine years after it was written Gilbert Fox, an actor, was to have a benefit. He was announced to sing a new patriotic song, and got Joseph Hopkins to write words for him to the tune of "Washington's March."

The oldest of our national tunes is the English national anthem, "God Save the King," and even during the revolution people sang the tune with patriotic words.

Now a word about what we call our chief tune, "The Star-Spangled Banner." The words were formed here, the music abroad, and there is much false history about it.

"John Brown's Body" was first sung in a purely local way at Fort Warren, but it became the chief marching song of our army in the rebellion, and Julia Ward Howe set to the inspiring tune the great hymn, "Mine Eyes Have Seen the Glory of the Coming of the Lord," and thus was a song of war transformed to a song of peace.

Runs Through a Desert. A well-known civil engineer, H. B. Carpenter, who has recently completed the survey of the southern line of Utah, says the boundary between that State and Arizona does not cross a foot of cultivated land.

It Didn't Matter Anyway. The following explanatory note accompanied a young man's wedding gift to a friend: "My Dear Girl—You will find in the box a thingamajig, which has something to do with eating. It's a cross between a harpoon and a hayfork. It may be for spearing pickles or stacking chopped cabbage. Anyway, you will be so happy that you won't care."

When we see the gay socks the men wear, we are filled with pity for their women folks who have to chase around town for darned cotton to match.
