THOUGHT IT WAS SILVER.

But Was Only a Meteorite of Malleable Nickeliferous Iron.

Several years ago some Mexican metallurgists discovered in the mountains of Sonora a lump of metal which because it was malleable and silver white in color they regarded as some form of silver ore, and secreted near the place of its discovery until transportation for it could be secured. Their tracks, however, were not well covered and other parties, observing the disturbed condition of the ground, followed up the trail, found the place of concealment and stole the supposed lump of silver. After some time and considerable strife over the piece of metal it was acquired by Senor Canizaris at Cuernepuebla, in the Magdalena district. At his hacienda a drill press was employed and a hole seven-sixteenths of an inch in diameter and two and one-half inches in depth was drilled into the meteorite to test its interior for precious metals. When these drillings upon assay showed no value in either gold or silver it was thrown aside.

A short time ago a Denver mining engineer got possession of it and shipped it home. It weighs 272 pounds, is about twenty inches long and twelve inches in its largest diameter. Nothing definite has yet been determined regarding this meteorite except that it belongs to the nickeliferous iron class, named siderolites, no analysis having been made. It contains the usual cavities, or so-called cupules, while the blunt end is smoothed from the friction of the air. There is also a streak of glaze or coating on one side suggesting a zone of fusion. Its value as a rare specimen or one of unusual scientific interest will be ascertained as soon as possible. Should it belong to the group of meteorites of a certain great fall near the City of Mexico, known as the Tuleca shower, it would be of minor value, but if related to the Tucson meteorite it will prove a most desirable find.

LIKE THE AMERICAN SHOE.

German's Have Taken Kindly to Footwear Made in United States.

Our energetic consul at Berlin has forwarded to the State Department a comprehensive and interesting account of the opening of a large shoe store where American goods are sold exclusively. The venture was a success from the start not only on account of the shoes, but by reason of American methods of doing business. There was a large, well-lighted store, with American furnishings and American trained salespeople. It was such a delightful place to go to that it seems to have been visited as a matter of joy regardless of the shoes, which, however, were sold in great numbers.

The consul says that the success of the venture was explained to him by a well-known Berlin physician who was a customer. He finds that American shoes "fit" while German-made do not. For many years German manufacturers have used American machinery, American patterns and have followed American styles, but for some reason they have not achieved either the finish or perfection of fit which characterizes the American-made article. This customer said he could not use German ready-made shoes and had shoes made by hand with unsatisfactory results. It was the American shoe that exactly met his requirements, and its popularity has become so great that an attempt is being made to raise the tariff to prohibitive prices.

There is on the whole of the continent very naturally a decided objection to the way in which American goods are getting to the front and no doubt restrictive legislation of a severe character may be expected, but as long as this country can make the best commodities in the world they cannot be kept out of the great marts of trade.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Kept His Eye-Glass.

Monocles were plentiful in Cape Town, but in Johannesburg and Pretoria they were conspicuous by their absence, for the reason that Lord Kitchener objected to them. Of all the "swell" officers, says Pearson's Magazine, a captain of a famous cavalry regiment alone refused to give his monocle up. It was a current report in the regiment that he wore it in bed and even when he took his bath.

One day Lord Kitchener met the "single-pane" officer outside of the Transvaal Hotel in Pretoria. "One minute, captain," said the commander. "May I ask if it is absolutely necessary for you to wear that glass in your right eye?" "Ye-es, certainly, Lord Kitchener; er—er—I could not see without it." "I am sorry to hear that, captain, as I intended to give you a staff appointment; but I must have men around me who can see well. Kindly report for duty to the officer commanding the lines of communication."

The discomfited cavalry officer obeyed the instructions. Three months afterward he was taken prisoner by the Boers, who stripped him of his clothing and sent him back to camp, still attired in his eye-glass, but little else.

Good Soil Is Alive.

Formerly the soil was regarded as mineral matter, simply decayed rock mixed with dead organic matter. Now we know that the soil is a living organism whose life is as important as that of the animal or the plant itself. If the soil be killed it is absolutely sterile, says the Detroit News Tribune. In other words, if the life organisms which make soil fertile are destroyed, the soil is incapable of producing a crop. Plants, as a rule, eat only mineral food, such as phosphoric acid, potash and nitric acid, but animals usually eat only organic food, such as fats, sugars and protein matter.
