HER GRIEVANCE.

"Much as I hate to criticize people, I must say I think it's a pity for anybody to be so kind of topping as that Mrs. Cummings from New York is," said Mrs. Jowders, in an aggrieved tone. "Why, I thought she seemed very simple and friendly," said the minister's wife. "They are such rich people, and yet she dresses as plainly as almost any one here."

"Oh, there is a fine library upstairs," said the minister's wife, "a room just lined with books." "I suppose likely she's one of those that never take a needle in their hands," said Mrs. Jowders, growing more and more pessimistic. "I presume to say she'd rather lie on a lounge with a book all day."

The Boss Hair. A man there was and he had no hair (Even as you and I): The top of his head was all bald and bare, his pate was conspicuous everywhere. But the fellow let on that he didn't care (Even as you and I).

Oh, the time we wasted and the strength we waste And the hair vigor that we buy, And well do we know, for 'tis always so, The hair that is gone will never more grow, And there is no use to cry.

A man there was and his dough he blew (Even as you and I) For hair vigor old and hair vigor new, But never a hair on his topknot grew, And daily he grew more glum and blue (Even as you and I).

Oh, the hair we lose and the stuff we use And the brushes and combs we buy, And the bald spots shine like a silver spoon, As smooth and as clean as a toy balloon, And never a hair we spy.

A man once tried his bald spot to hide (Even as you and I), And bought a toupee that much too wide, But off his pate that old thing would slide, And it bothered him so that he nearly died (Even as you and I).

Who is to blame for the blooming shame That a man must lose his hair? There's nothing to do but to let it go, For hair that is gone will never more grow, So let your poor head go bare.

It is perhaps one of the most comforting things in life that a man's idea of what constitutes success changes as he grows older.

THE WASHINGTON--SEATTLE

THE SCENIC HOTEL OF THE WORLD. This magnificent tourist hotel is Seattle's most prominent architectural feature—being situated upon the highest point of land in the downtown district—300 feet above sea level. It is, however, easy of access by private tramway, by regular hotel conveyance, by street car or by carriage.
