

THE NEW AGE

Established 1896. A. D. Griffin, Manager. Office, 435 Second St., cor. 4th, Rooms 1 and 2, Portland, Oregon.

PORTLAND LOCALS

Mr. Watkins made a flying trip to the city. Mr. Green will leave soon to take a position in Montana. Mr. and Mrs. Mills have taken rooms at Mrs. Fry's.

Mr. William Doris has accepted a position at Hot Lake, Ore. Mr. Ward and Cotton are here from St. Paul stopping at the Keeble. Mrs. G. Joel has been ill for two weeks, but is better at this writing.

The concert at the Zion church Tuesday proved to be a grand success. The sacred concert last Sunday evening at the Zion church was enjoyed by all.

The marriage of Miss Alexander and Mr. Doris took place Saturday afternoon. They are stopping at the Keeble. News reaches here of the death of Richard Commer, one of the members of Williams and Walker's shows. He was shot by one of the men of the company. We extend our sympathy to his loving mother, who lives in Chicago.

Paul Laurence Dunbar, whose obituary has been prematurely written by hasty friends, contributes to Lippincott's Magazine for March a little vignette of fiction called "The Churning of Grandma Pleasant." It is of an old lady who was summoned before the body spiritual for singing "Comin' Thro' the Rye." She was acquitted in a vigorous way.

The leading feature of Lippincott's Magazine for March is a novelette by Captain Archibald W. Butt, U. S. A., called "Both Sides of the Shield." The Shield is, of course, the South before the War. A writer on a Northern paper goes to Georgia to report conditions and falls in with a typical Southern family, reduced in estate. He also falls in love with the daughter, and when his newspaper revelations come to her ears she indignantly rejects him. The Spanish-American war, strangely enough, brings a truce to the bitterness, and all ends in charming appropriateness.

A VISIT TO WALNUT PARK.

Reader, take a "U" car going north and tell it conductor to let you off at Killingsworth's Walnut park office. In fifteen minutes you will be there. Now, having arrived, we will look over Walnut park. You will observe that we are now upon a broad, almost level plateau forming the summit of the peninsula between the Columbia and Willamette. It is two hundred and six feet above the rivers. Water drains both ways from this point. Those beautiful homes on the north, adjoining Walnut park, are in Pleasant. Beyond is the Columbia river, on the opposite bank is the city of Vancouver, and the historic old fort, formerly occupied by the British, now garrisoned by U. S. troops. Beyond, in the background, are great evergreen forests, out of which rise the snow peaks of Mts. St. Helens and Adams.

Turn to the east: That new building, three blocks away, is the Highland school. That wooded height a little to the south is Mt. Tabor. In the distance is the Cascade range of mountains, through which the Columbia has cut its rugged way. That glowing pride of Oregon is Mt. Hood.

PRIDE OF THE WEST.

A Sweet Cream That Has No Equal Anywhere On the Pacific Coast.

Of course you have heard of Oregon Grape and Pacific Cream; but did you ever try it? If you have, you are using it now and will always use it. You will use no other as long as you can procure that particular brand; but if you have not, try it at once. Insist that your dealers let you have it. After you have used it once, we know what you will do hereafter.

The Oregon Grape and Pacific Cream is the pride of the West. It is the only evaporated cream that equals and has the taste and flavor of sweet cream. It is the cream that pleases, for it is superior to all others. It is a home product, being manufactured by the Oregon Condensed Milk Company of Hillsboro, Ore., of which establishment Dr. J. P. Tamesie is president. The Doctor is one of Washington county's most highly esteemed and honorable citizens; and when he authorizes the statement that the cream will pay a reward of $1000 to any person who can show that this cream contains anything that is detrimental to health, he means just what he says. It is fast finding its way into the homes of all the people—and when it is once tried, no other will be used. Tell your dealer that you want to try the Oregon Grape and Pacific Cream, and if he doesn't carry it, you will have to trade with those who do.

SOCIAL CLUB IN A BARN.

Alleged High-Toned Colored Society In Attic of a Horse-Stable. An alleged "high-toned" colored social organization of this city enjoys its rendezvous in the attic of an old barn at 10 1/2 North Eighth street. It is known to those who do not know it as the Colored Cooks', Waiters', Porters' and Janitors' Social Club. It carries a stock of whiskeys and other "hard" drinks. "High-toned" colored gentlemen of leisure meet there and loaf around in convivial companionship. Why shouldn't they? The barn is there; the wet goods are there, and the "high-toned" colored gentlemen who have nothing else to do might as well be there.

This club is incorporated, enjoying the privileges of a state license as a club; but it has no city license to sell liquors to those who are not members. And yet in a case before Municipal Judge Hogan on Wednesday and Thursday of this week two or three witnesses positively swore that they had visited this "high-toned" club and purchased and paid for drinks there—and they are not members, either. Of course, the officers of the club dispute this testimony. What else could they do, under the circumstances? They had been arraigned on a charge of selling liquor without the necessary city license. Edward De Moss was the complaining witness. He testified that he had purchased and paid for drinks there in the hard coin of the realm. Eugene Barrett, a local bartender, had also enjoyed the same "hospitality" and had paid for it.

W. H. Willis, president of the club and its imperious manager as well, and John Hedgpath, assistant manager, denied these allegations. Of course, they did! They couldn't quite understand why a "high-toned" social club, with principal "offices" and play-rooms located in the first convenient barn they discovered, should be compelled to pay a license fee; and yet they claim that their unique "society" organization is on a par with the Arlington, Commercial and University clubs. The astute president of the "blind-pig" concern, by way of an effort to exalt his managerial ability, explained that the club is already over $400 in debt and then added that during the month of February it ran "way behind financially because of the rumor that the license-collectors, by whom the "society" had been notified that it must pay the usual $100 a quarter or cease to handle liquors, would pull the house unless it speedily complied with the municipal law thereunto pertaining, and that this notice had frightened the members away from the horse-stable rendezvous; consequently their receipts were short. "These members certainly knew the legal status of their club. Then, why did they become afraid and run away if they knew that they were conforming to the requirements of the law?" License Collector McEchern did his duty. Deputy Hutchinson served the notice to the chief executive of the aggregation and his ever-watchful assistant manager. They had abundant evidence on which to base the belief that there was a nigger in the hay-now somewhere in that barn.

The concern requires the payment of a license fee. It simply charges ten cents a drink and expects to pay its expenses in that way. Isn't that exactly what other saloons do? They simply charge for the liquor they sell and expect to meet their obligations in that manner. What is the difference? It will be seen eventually that the license collector is right in his demand and that this barn-storming outfit will have to pay its regular quarterly license for selling liquors, or go out of business.
