For the Argus.

On the 22d inst., Mr. Daniel Jowett was killed by the accidental discharge of a gun. The shot entered near his mouth, passing through his head. He had been working at Ex-Gov. Gaines', and through curiosity was looking at some guns that happened to be clustered together in sight. He took up a rifle and looked at it, sat it down, and the act fired, in some way, another gun.

Mr. Jewett had been a member of the M Church for several months and often proved by his setions that his heart was changed. We mourn our brother departed, but faith tells us he is in Heaven.

He was a member of the Cadets of Temperane and walked worthy of his profession. His brothers will oft miss him and his worthy example. He was buried with the honors of the Division.

Obituary. "Death loves a shining mark."

Charles Fielding Cooke, a lovely boy of two years, the only child of fond parents, has been suddenly called from earth to heaven. While on a visit to his grandfather, in company with his mother, that fearful disease the croup made him its victim, after an illness of three days. He died at the residence of his grandparents, near Oregon City, O. T., on the 3d inst.

This promising boy was the hope of his parents, C. W. and R. E. Cooke, of Stanislaus county .-The child's father Hou, C. W. Cooke, of the Assembly, came to San Francisco to meet his wife and child. We remember well the anticipated happiness of that meeting. We could sympathize with our friend in his hope, for we are a parent, We remember alas too well the agonized spirit of that friend, when the fond wife told him they were communess. It was our privilege to utter word of sympathy in that dark hour; we could do so, for we had been where such blows full and and we knew the value of sympathy then It is be seen .- N. Y. Times. only those who have been like afflicted, that can speak comfort. It may be some consolation to these parents to know there are hearts that offer them true sympathy. Parent!

Grief may bow thy spirit low, Grief may dull thy hearing now, But Hope dispels thy sprit's gloom-A voice speaks from the silent tomb. Behold !

That bud torn from the parent stem Is now in Heaven, a beauteous gem : There with the angels shall it bloom And shed above its sweet perfume.

Opening the Amazon.

We learn that the Emperor of Brazil has not absolutely and unconditionally refused to treat for the opening of the Amazon river, to the commerce of the United States. He professes great fear of our people, and is in terror lest if we come to see him, we may "annex" him right off. This really seems silly, yet it is true. His Brazilian majesty evidently has a high opinion of American enterprise; but he may rest well assured that we will not have "extended the area oi freedom" half-way down the South American continent during his life-time, let him live to ever so good an old age. It will take at least that time to digest Cuba and Mexico; and after we have disposed of them, we shall have Central America, New Grenada, Equador, Venezuela, and all the islands adjacent thereto, to attend to-if the earthquakes will give us a chance to "settle"-before we reach the Amazon.

The Emperor, however, intends to prepare himself for a vigorous defense, if we should anticipate our time. Well satisfied that ultimately he must let other nations go up the Amazon to trade with the countries which furnish it with water, he is preparing military stations at the river's mouth, where our vessels are to be permitted to land and receive necessary supplies. When these are completed and so arranged as to be eapuble of defense against assault, and sufficient to prevent communication between the drended Yankees and the interior from that quarter, His Majesty promises to yield his prejudices against our passing his door on our way to Peru, and the other Republics on the head waters of the great river .-Whether this promise is honest on his part, or a mere temporising expedient, remains to
