

find out whether he pays his debts. As this might seem a difficult matter to get at, in referring out his creditors you can get all the information necessary by addressing the following note to the printer :

"Does Mr. — take your paper? If so, has he paid you what he owes you?"

first, you may set him down as rather a doubtful character. Put him off till you know why he doesn't take the paper. If you receive an affirmative answer to the first, and a negative answer to the second query, tell the young man "he can go," but if an affirmative answer is given to both questions—engage him at once—he is fully capable of shouldering the "responsibilities of a family."

Weymire's Speech.

We are permitted to-day to lay before our readers a gem of oratory rarely equalled and never surpassed. Indeed, we cannot now recollect to have ever seen just such an elegant, impassioned, and overwhelming appeal to the Roman Senate, during the whole time in which Cicero was accustomed to make its walls tremble with the thunder of his eloquence. The nearest imitation of it we have ever seen was contained in the reports of a one-horse female debating club at the Five Points in New York city, in which a female "parrot" from New Oleans came down on the moral reform movement. The following speech is highly eulogized by Waymire's organ, which calls his bursts of eloquence "happy hits in his inimitable style." The "roars of laughter, which continued for some time, show that he addressed an appreciating audience, and fully refutes the idea that the "Old Apostle" was casting pearls before swine. We judge that there were some of his auditors

This giant orator and statesman will be recollected by our readers in the States as the same Waymire who appeared in our advertising columns last summer, asserting that THE ARMS could never be started in Hell, as the Devil was opposed to the principles we advocate, and the more so, that minating that his organ, the Corvallis States-there. He is called the "Apostle of Oregon democracy," and is looked up to by his party as a great man, and a full embodiment of the "ritual" of his party. He will probably be a candidate for Vice President when Lane runs for the Presidency. It lays between him and a brother "exhorter,"

The bill being up for removing the seat of government from Corvallis to Salem, Mr. Wayne spoke as follows:

Why is it
That "Catholic Citizen" has fizzled out?
The last Standard makes no mention of her either having died or taken the white veil.
We have two requests to make of this scribbler. First, give us your real name, instead of sneaking behind a cowardly inco-

This information friend "Citizen" will discover to be necessary in a close argument, where it may become necessary to dissect a nit on the hundred and first hair of regularly combed Jesuitry. In the second place, will friend (Roman) "Citizen" please to send us a faithful transcript of that "summe-to know which word to use, and in order to help us out of this difficulty, which would mar the beauties on an elegant article, we hope friend Citizen will promptly comply with request number one) informs us is now in his or her possession.

To Correspondents.

We have several communications in are crowded out this week, to make room for Dr. Henry's speech. We have received several well written communications from Yamhill, censuring severely the conduct of Mr. Palmer, in the removal of the Indians to Grand Ronde.

The language of the articles is entirely inadmissible, and we could not possibly publish them in their present shape. We

It is thoroughly best to us in our early education, that a person's motives ought neither to be impugned for a good action, or for perhaps an unintentional aberration, unless the proof was clear and positive that the motive was a sinister one. We think of ourself, that Gen. Palmer's conduct in reference to this removal of Indians to a permanent residence among the settlers of this that his motives were not good, and that he did not act from decided convictions of official duty, and good policy, we have no reason to believe. Gen. Palmer is a man we do not recollect to have ever spoken of in our life, and we cannot therefore be charged with any personal, political or sectarian bias in his favor, but we do owe him and every other man the duty of and exact justice and we intend to pay them this just debt, although they "smite us on the cheek" as we tender it to them.

Pork.

We notice that the pork house of Charman, Warner & Dove, is in full blast. They are ready to buy all the hogs that come to market.