

Cling to the Mighty One.
The following is a beautiful production. The references against each line are appropriate to the sentiment—

Cling to the Mighty One,	Ps. lxxix. 19.
Cling to thy grief!	Heb. ii. 11.
Cling to the Holy One,	Heb. i. 12.
He gives relief!	Ps. cxvi. 9.
Cling to the Gracious One,	Ps. cxv. 5.
Cling to thy pain!	Ps. li. 4.
Cling to the Faithful One,	1 Thes. v. 24.
He will sustain.	Ps. xviii. 8.
Cling to the Living One,	Heb. vii. 25.
Cling to thy weep!	Ps. lxxvi. 7.
Cling to the Loving One,	1 John. iv. 16.
Through all below!	Rom. viii. 39, 39.
Cling to the Parlor One,	Is. lv. 7.
He speaketh peace!	John. xiv. 27.
Cling to the Healing One,	Exod. xv. 26.
Anguish shall cease.	Ps. cxvii. 3.
Cling to the Bleeding One,	1 John. i. 7.
Cling to His side!	John. xv. 27.
Cling to the Risen One,	Rom. vi. 4.
In Him abide!	John. xv. 4.
Cling to the Coming One,	Rev. xix. 20.
Hope shall arise,	Titus. ii. 13.
Cling to the Reigning One,	Ps. xviii. 1.
Joy lights thine eyes.	Ps. xvi. 11.

Necessity of Sleep.
No person of active mind should try to prevent sleep, which, in some persons, only comes when rest is indispensable to the continuance of health in fact, sleep once in twenty-four hours is as essential to the existence of a mammalia as the momentary respiration of fresh air. The most unfavorable condition for sleep cannot prevent its approach. Coachesmen slumber on their coaches, and couriers on their horses, while soldiers fall asleep on the field of battle, amid all the noise of artillery and the tumult of war. During the retreat of Sir John Moore, several of the British soldiers were reported to have fallen asleep upon the march, and yet they continued walking onward. The most violent passion and excitement cannot preserve even powerful minds from sleep; thus Alexander the Great slept on the field of Arbela, and Napoleon on that of Austerlitz. Even stripes and torture cannot keep sleep as criminals have been known to sleep on the rack. Noises which serve at first to drive away sleep, soon become indispensable to its existence; thus a stage coach, stopping to change horses, wakes all the passengers.—The proprietor of an iron forge, who slept close to the din of hammers, forges and blast furnace, would awake if there was any interruption to them during the night; and a sick miller, who had his mill stopped on that account, passed sleepless nights until the mill resumed its usual noise. Homer, in the Iliad, elegantly represents sleep as overcoming all men, and even the gods, excepting Jupiter alone.

The length of time passed in sleep is not the same for all men; it varies in different individuals and at different ages; but it cannot be determined from the time passed in sleep, relative to the strength or energy of the functions of the body or mind.—From six to nine hours is the average proportion, yet the Roman Emperor, Caligula, slept only three hours. Frederick of Prussia, and Dr. John Hunter, consumed only four or five hours in repose, while the great Scipio slept during the night. It is during infancy that sleep is longest and most profound. Women also sleep longer than men, and young men longer than old. The sleepless nights of old age are almost proverbial. It would appear that carnivorous animals sleep in general longer than herbivorous, as that superior activity of the muscles and senses of the former seem more especially to require repose.

America Sympathes with Russia.
The North British Review for November contains an article on the present war, entitled "The Significance of the Struggle," from which we make the following extracts:

" * * * And these considerations, by the way, will help us to explain a matter which has given rise to much natural vexation and not quite just disappointment, viz: the coldness or non-sympathy of Americans.—At first sight, no doubt, it seems but fitting that, in the battle we are waging for justice and civilization, the good wishes, at least, of the people who boast themselves the most enlightened upon earth, should be enlisted upon our side; that, in striving to repress the aggressions of the great despot of the Old World, we should have the hearty prayers, if not the active assistance of the Great Republic of the New; and that a land, once the hope and refuge of the injured and the persecuted, should, on all occasions, be more ready to plead for and encourage the oppressed, than to applaud and hound on the oppressor. Unhappily, it is not so; and among many less worthy and avowable reasons why it should not be so, is one which is not creditable to the American and ought not to be surprising to us. It is difficult to make it clear to them that the war we are waging is in any intelligible sense a war on behalf of freedom. There is an unquestionable inconsistency, indeed, in the same people who so feted and glorified Kasutin, now sympathizing with the despot by whom Kassutin was crushed. But, on the other hand, the partialities of America are necessarily republican—and republicanism is the avowed horror of both the English and French Governments. If there is one Court in Europe which the Americans especially dislike and despise, it is that of Austria; and to obtain the aid and alliance of Austria in this war has been the ceaseless endeavor of the Western Powers.

"The sympathies of America go avowedly with the oppressed nationalities; and it has been the most anxious aim of the allies, from the outset, to prevent these nationalities from mingling in the strife. Of the four powers who were, or were supposed to be, arrayed against Russia, one was a constitutional monarchy, but the other three were despots; the first of whom was the supposed tyrant of his Christian subjects; the second, the notorious and brutal oppressor of all those republican aspirations which America longed to aid; while the third had just transformed a republic into an empire. How could such a war, waged by such parties and with such allies, be represented as a genuine war for liberty? It cannot be gainsaid that it was not the standard of freedom or self-government that we raised; it was the standard of justice, of civilization, of established treaties, of the status quo of the balance of power in Europe. How could we reasonably ask American sympathy or aid for such a complicated, hybrid, conventional, Old World banner? If, indeed, as at one time seemed not improbable, Austria had taken her natural side, and cast in her lot with the aggressor, and Italy, Hungary, and Poland, had risen, and we had welcomed them as comrades, and espoused their cause, and furnished them with arms; and if then America had stood aloof, or given any aid or countenance to our antagonist, no reproaches could have been too bitter or too just, and no plea could have wiped away the stain upon her character. But that she should feel no good-will towards the success of a struggle which, though carried on against a despot, is not carried on for freedom—or, at least, only distantly, contingently, and inferentially so—need excite little surprise, and scarcely warrants any heavy condemnation."

DEATH OF A REVOLUTIONARY SOLDIER.
—The Danville (Ky.) Tribune announces the death of Mr. John Sneed, of Boyle Co., in that State, in the 101st year of his age, and adds:

He was born in Albemarle county, Virginia, on the 2d day of February, 1755, was for some years the Secretary of Thomas Jefferson, then volunteered in an expedition against the Cherokee Indians, and after that became a soldier in the Revolutionary struggle, in which service he continued until the close of the war. He was with Washington at Valley Forge during all the privations of that disastrous period; afterwards fought under the same great chieftain at Monmouth, and was one of the gallant army who received the thanks of Congress for their conduct in this engagement. He was then detailed, with a number of picked men from various regiments, to the command of Col. Morgan, and finally went to the South with Green, under whom he served until the expiration of the war. At the battle of Guilford he was taken prisoner, and when conducted into the presence of Lord Cornwallis, the following questions were put to him by that nobleman: "Where is the baggage of the American party?" "Out of your reach, sir," was the reply—"Why so?" "Because the American party is between you and it." When peace returned, he emigrated from Virginia to this State, and here lived until almost 101 years old. His one hundredth birthday was celebrated in February last, at the residence of his son, by a centennial dinner, where he met many of his relatives and friends.

PICTURE OF UNITED STATES SENATORS.—The correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial, writing from Washington on the 4th January, says: "I looked in upon the Senate to-day. Gen. Cass is a ponderous old fellow, with a massive head, which he covers with a rusty old brown wig, and keeps opening and shutting his teeth, as if he constantly tasted something disagreeable. John M. Clayton is more enormous than Gen. Cass, and his face, though fat, is magnificent. He is the best looking man in the Senate, and laughs heartily at intervals of from two to five minutes. His hair is white as snow, and his big eyes glisten all the time with intelligence and humor. Seward is about as stalwart in appearance as a pair of tongs. He does not weigh more than an hundred pounds. His hair is short, and looks dead, and his eyes are hidden behind a pair of slender gold spectacles. His face is thin, pale, and wrinkled, but his lines are firm, and he appears to be what he is—a man of restless and intriguing intellect. Senator Butler, of South Carolina, is the thickest at the waistband, though not uncomfortably heavy. His face is bright, and his hair, which he wears long, and in singular confusion, is as white as newly-washed lamb's wool. Hale's appearance indicates that he has been fed liberally on fat pork and butter milk. Pugh looks younger when among the old, but his white-headed and big-bellied Senators than I ever before saw him. A majority of the Senators have naked patches on the top of their heads, and quite half of them are the opposite of slender. They chew tobacco very much as other folks, so far as I could discover, and immediately after adjustment, several of them cigars, and loading back, appeared to feel comfortable."

SELENDOR NOT HAPPINESS.—Gilded roofs do not keep out sleepless nights.

THE NAVY.—Our Navy is divided into six squadrons, to wit: the Home squadron, consisting of four ships; the Brazil squadron, consisting of three; the Official squadron, of four; the Mediterranean, of four; the East Indian, of four; and the Pacific, of seven. The San Jacinto has gone to the East Indies to relieve the Macedonian. The long missing sloop of war, Albany, has been given up for lost. One vessel, the Michigan iron steamer, built in Pittsburg, is employed on the Upper Lakes. This makes twenty-eight vessels in commission and active service. A small number for a great maritime nation, whose dominions span a continent, and stretch from ocean to ocean. Six large steamships of war were built last year, and the Secretary recommends a large increase of the Navy. The estimated expense for the ensuing year is $13,924,565.37.

A MONSTER.—An intense excitement has been created both in Great Britain and on the continent of Europe by revolting developments made public at a coroner's inquest held at Rugby, England, on the body of J. Parsons Cooke, a sporting man, and owner of the famous racer Polar Star. It appears that Wm. Palmer, an associate of the deceased on the turf, and a surgeon, administered poison to him for the purpose of evading payment of a racing debt, and of taking up the amount of an insurance which he (Palmer) had effected in London on the life of the deceased. During the progress of the investigation it was made pretty clear that Palmer had poisoned not only Cooke but his own wife, his brother, and fourteen other persons. Amongst the number of his victims, it is said, was the late Lord George Bentinck, who, during his sporting career and before he had developed his talent for public business, was unfortunate enough to make his acquaintance.

To Fanny Fern's 1,000,000 Readers!
A NEW BOOK COMING!
We have the pleasure of announcing that we have in press, and shall publish about the first of December, a new work of fiction, entitled ROSE CLARK, A ROMANCE—BY FANNY FERN.

The last work, and first continuous tale of this brilliant and fascinating authoress, "Ruth Hall," achieved a success unexampled in the annals of letters. In the language of a leading periodical, it created a more profound sensation than any which has been issued during a quarter of a century. But it is unnecessary to allude to the merits of "Ruth Hall." Judging from the number of copies it has sold, we judge that every body in the United States has read it. As respects the work we have now in press, ROSE CLARK, we can only say that we regard it as, in every respect, a greater, better work; and are confident it will not only sustain, but even increase the reputation of its distinguished authoress. We have reasons for thinking "Rose Clark" will make a greater sensation than did "Ruth Hall."

It will form an elegant 12mo volume of over 400 pages. Price $1.25, on receipt of which copies will be sent by mail, post-paid. It will be for sale by all booksellers. Published by 40-36 W. MASON BROTHERS, New York.
