maritime Powers of the world consent and agree to limit the number of guns that each and all can keep affoat during peace, to those which would be actually needed for the protection of commerce on the high seas and the police of their own shores. Americans advocate neither public nor private robbery; therefore we go further, and say for our people, let the law of the seas be "that all commercial and unarmed ships shall pass free of capture or detention during war." If they are to fight, they are quite willing, if others will place themselves so as to be compelled to do the same, to fell the growing trees and build the ships after war is declared.

The world may and should know it, that the American people, through their government, will at all times be found ready to meet, and honestly respond to, any fair pro position emanating from other maritime Powers, whether singly or united. They are frank and open, but at the same time, quick and shrewd; they are, therefore, neither to be cajoled nor forced into a trap, however nicely arranged or temptingly baited. Let France and England once show their sincerity, by disarming and dismantling their numerous superfluous ships not needed for peace purposes, and turning them over by sale or otherwise into private hands for merchantmen, then America will be, if not on an equal, at least on a fair footing with them.

Would not any boy, even if full grown, with no other weapons than a pocket full of stones, laugh at a man with a sword in his hand, who, looking to a probable quarrel, should cunningly propose that there should be no throwing of missiles when they fought? Although ours may not yet be a full grown people, the government of the United States will doubtless agree to renounce the future use of privateers if the governments of France and England will agree to sell and dispose of all their superfluous public ships and keep no more affont for the future than such a number of guns as may be agreed upon as necessary for the protection of commerce on the high seas and for the proper police of their own shores .- N. Y. Herald.

New Postal Arrangements with the United

Arrangements have been made for extending to letters between Great Britain and the United States the system of registration in force in the two countries respectively, on the 1st May, and thenceforward, any letter addressed to the United States (including California and Oregon) may be registered on payment of a registration fee, as well as the ordinary postage to which these letters are liable, must in all cases be paid in advance, and no charge whatever will be made on delivery of such letters at their destination. This system of registration will apply equally to letters addressed to California and Oregon which may be specially directed to be forwarded by the West India mail packet via Panama. Similar regulations have been made in the United States for the registration of letters addressed to any part of the United Kingdom .- European Times.

THE INDIANS OF THE UNITED STATES -According to the report for 1955 of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, the Indian population of the United States, exclusive of a few in several of the States who have lost their tribal character, or amalgamated with the whites or blacks, may be estimated at from 320,000 to 350,000 souls. The tribes are ninety-mine in number. In 1854, the payments of money by the Government to the various tribes amounted to $546,-357,38. During the last ten years, expenditures have been made by certain societies for the educational and religious advancements of the Indians, as follows: By the American Board of Commissioners of Foreign Missions Boston, $402,974,; by the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church, New York, $327,195,53; by the Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, New York, $107,230; by the American Indian Mission Association, Louisville, $104,413 15; by the Catholic Mission, St. Louis, $87,319 05. During the same period the Methodist Episcopal Church South has expended for the same purposes about $288,000. The total outlay for the christianization and civilization of the Indians, within the last ten years, amounts to more than $2,150,000.

SOLDIERS EATING THEIR COMPANIONS .-A letter from Ft. Pierre, Nebraska Territory, gave the particulars of a horrible affair which occurred during the past winter between that Fort and Sloux City. In December, three soldiers, named Rigart, Wicker and Cornell, deserted and started down the river. On their way they overtook four persons, and they all proceeded in company. The party were overtaken by heavy snows, accompanied by intense cold, which continued thirty or forty days. During this time their provisions gave out, and for six days they were without a particle of food. Cornell died of hunger and cold, as did three of the civilians, and the remainder were compelled to subsist on the dead bodies of their companions, until they were fortunately rescued by a party of soldiers from Maj. Howe's camp.

The Constitution.

Great were the thoughts and strong the minds Of those who framed in high debate, The immortal league of love that binds Our fair broad Empire, State with State.

And deep the gladuess of the hour, When as the anspicous task was done, In solemn trust the sword of power Was given to glory's spotless son.

The noble face is gone—the sums Of sixty years have risen and set. But the bright links, those chosen ones, So strongly forged, are brighter yet. Wide as our own free race increase-

Wide shall extend the elastic chain, And bind in everlasting peace, State after State—a mighty train. BRYANT.

A Patriot's Death.

The records of ancient Greece and Rome do not shihit a nobler instance of patriotism than is contained in the following inscription, found upon a grave-stone at New London, Conn. No wouder ur Revolutionary fathers were invincible, while they were actuated by such motives as are here

"On the 30th of October, 1782, 4,000 English fell upon this town by fire and sword; 700 Ameri-cans defended the fort for a whole day; but in the cans defended the fort for a whole day; but in the evening, about four o'clock, the commander of the besieged delivered up his sword to an Englishman, who immediately stabled him. All his companions were put to the sword. A line of powder was then laid from the magazine to the sea, there to be lighted, and blow the fortness into the air. William Hotman, who lay not far distant, with three strokes of the region by a still alive, We will endeavor to friends who was still alive, 'We will endeavor to crawl to this line, and thus we will completely yet the powder with blood, and with the life that still remains in us, save the fort and magazine, and perhaps a few of our comrades who are only wounded!' He alone had strength enough to accomplish this noble design. In his 30th year, he died on the powder which he had overflowed with his own lined. He friends and seven of his wounded. powder which he had overflowed with his own blood. His friends and seven of his wounded companions by that means had their lives preserv-ed."

After this narrative are the following words, in large capitale:
