How sad is the fate of the man who is bound By the habit of intemperate drinking! Soon his place on the Earth uo more shall be found For fast, fast to the grave he is sinking. He is ruined in body, degraded in mind, Life's joys all back from him shrinking ; Nor virtuous happiness nor peace can he find-He blights all his prospects by drinking. He recks not for friends, though they full at his side By his cruel neglect or unkindness; He spurns the fair being who once was his pride-Strong drink has induced this dark blindness. and His course is progressive-he stops not to think, Nor considers his manifold errors ; Cali and see. In fact, Walker has got it all his own way, and just as soon as he can retake those boats, or get others, he will drive the enemy out of the country.

A letter from an officer in Walker's army to the San Francisco Herald, thus speaks of their prospects in Nicaragua, "where," he says, they "intend to remain" :

"The enemy, under Gen. Canas, are quartered at San Jorge, about two miles from this place, [Rivas.] They have the whole Plaza barricaded, and their trenches inside of the barricades to sleep in at night. It is true they have the steamers, but I think they have use for them down the San Juan river, as, from the best information we can get, Colonels Anderson and Wheat are working their way up with 600 men. But let that be as it may, we can hold Rivas against Central America, until we get aid from those who are disposed to assist us in carrying out the enterprise that is so nobly begun, and worthy the attention of every true American. The troops of Central America are nearly exhausted, and this is the dying struggle of the allied forces. If they . e strong, why do they not attack us and drive us from the country, instead of lying in trence es inside of barricades, and afraid to go half a mile from them to get plantaine. Walker ca.,' take San Jorge when it is necessary, but he wants to take it with as little loss as possible. There are too many brave hearts here to give . " the fight, particularly at this juncture, when our prospects are better than ever."

07 A bridge across the Mississippi river is now being built at St. Paul's, Minnesota, -to be 1,800 feet in length, and 70 feet in hight, to allow steamers, in the highest stage of the water, to pass under it. It is intended to be completed by the autumn of 1857.

05 "Neighbor Jones," said a rigid church member, "I have been informed that you often drive your team, and even go a fishing or a hunting on the Sabbath."

"True," replied Jones, "but then, on these occasions, I always whistle psalm tunes."
