

Good Counsel.

It is not by mere study, by the mere accumulation of knowledge, that you can hope for eminence. Mental discipline;—the exercise of the faculties of the mind; the quickening of your apprehension; the strengthening of your memory; the forming of a sound, rapid and discriminating judgment, are of even more importance than the store of learning. Practice the economy of time. Consider time, like the faculties of your mind, a precious estate; that every moment of it well applied is put out to an exorbitant interest. The zest of amusement itself, and the successful result of application, depend in a great measure upon the economy of time. Estimate, also, the force of habit. Exercise a constant, an unremitting vigilance of the acquirement of habit, in matters that are apparently of entire indifference—that perhaps are really so, independent of the habits they engender. It is by the neglect of such trifles that bad habits are acquired, and that the mind, by tolerating negligence and procrastination in matters of small account, but frequent occurrence—matters of which the world takes no notice—becomes accustomed to the same defects in matters of higher importance. By motives yet more urgent; by higher and purer aspirations; by the duty of obedience to the will of God; by the awful account you will have to render, not only of moral actions, but of faculties entrusted to you for improvement—by all these high arguments do I conjure you "so to number your days that you may apply your heart unto wisdom," unto that wisdom which, directing your ambition to the noble end of benefitting mankind, and teaching humble reliance on the mercy of your Redeemer, may support you in the "time of your wealth," and in "the hour of death, and in the day of judgment," may comfort you with the hope of deliverance.—Sir Robert Peel.

An Indignant Female Out in Defense of Hoops. The N. Y. Tribune, like almost every journal in the country, has had its fling at ladies' hoops, and catches it in the following style from an indignant female:

I allude to "hoops." You do not like them; very well, you do not wear them, I suppose, consequently you know nothing of their convenience. If I tell you that a hoop-skirt relieves the hips and body of the wearer of a load which would be necessary in its absence, you will say, why necessary, either with or without hoops? I reply I would ask you would you like to see the streets of New York city ornamented with women in pantaloons? and do you not think that they (pantaloons of course) would be quite as becoming as drapery which shows the figure with every movement? No woman ventures, unless compelled by necessity, into the streets when the wind blows, if scant drapery be the reigning fashion.—No true man would make remarks about the flying skirts, but there are plenty of miserable wretches who would; and but few high-minded women have independence enough to brave the cheers of such creatures. A person can walk with much greater ease with a hoop even if the same amount of clothing be worn; in fact a buoyancy in the balloon-like structure which is a great relief to all who are unfortunate enough to wear skirts. You say that the Empress Eugenie, "for purposes of her own," first started the, to you, "terrible fashion." Pray, do let the Empress Eugenie and your wife's, if you have one, and your neighbor's wife's and everybody's wife's purposes alone. If women are foolish enough to get married, do please let their dress alone. If they can contrive to appear in public one-fourth of the time, do let them do so. Respectfully yours, A WIFE AND MOTHER, Lowell, Feb. 1857.

A Remarkable Nation.—Under the head of "Religious Intelligence," the Boston Journal notices some missionary labors in a region of which but little has hitherto been known. It says:

One of the most interesting missions undertaken by the American church is that to the Afghans, which has been commenced during the past year by the Presbyterian Board. This has long been looked upon as a remarkable nation, on account of their independent, hospitable and martial spirit, and their possession of a country, lying between India and Persia, filled with the grandest mountains in the world, with the original fruits and grains that have spread over the earth—following the expansion of the human race—and with ancient ruins, tablets, coins and legends of great value to the religious or scientific archaeologist. But the chief attention has lain in the suggestion, by Sir William Jones, Vansittart, and others, that they might be a portion of the Ten Tribes of Israel. Though now Mohammedans, they claim descent from King Saul, through a son named Berki, who had a son named Afghan. And these scholars have furnished translations from their legends, describing the capture of the ark of the covenant by the Philistines, the anointing of Saul and Samuel, the battle of David and Goliath, and other events of Scripture history, which they claim as their own. The seat of this new mission is appointed, for the present, at Rawal Pindir, a town of 15,000 inhabitants, between the Indus and Jholm rivers, 160 miles northward of Lahore. This is not within the borders of Afghanistan, where a residence is forbidden by the present disturbed state of the country.

An honest Dutchman, in training up his son in the way he should go, frequently exercised him in Bible lessons.—On one of these occasions he asked him: "Who was that would not sleep mit Botphar's wife?" "Shoseph." "Dat ish a good boy. Vell, vat was de reason he would not sleep mit her?" "Don't know; shoseph he vasn't sleepy."

It is said that in his lecture on "Mind your own business," Dr. Magoon relates the following story:

"A young man went from New York city to the West, where he commenced business on his own account, and married. His friends in the city were interested in his welfare, and when a merchant was about to journey to the place where the young man had located, he was requested to visit the emigrant, and ascertain how he lived, what sort of a wife he had chosen, his prospects, &c. Accordingly the New Yorker ascertained the residence of his young friend, and called upon him quite early in the morning. He found him in a small, neat cottage, and just taking his breakfast. The introduction of the New Yorker to his wife was quite off-hand and unceremonious, and he was requested to be seated and partake of the morning meal. The young wife had prepared the steak, biscuit, and coffee, with her own hands, and for a table had used her kneading-board, over which a napkin was spread, and the "board" placed on her lap. The New Yorker declined a seat at the table, and took his leave. On making his report to his New York friends as to how he found his young friend living, he described the style as "insignificant!"—and for the explanation of the superlative he said, that were he the owner of that young man's furniture, he would not take ten thousand dollars for the legs of his table!"

Never say anything before your children that you do not wish repeated, is advice that parents should heed if they would avoid frequent mortifications. As an illustration, read the following pleasing incident, which we find in one of our exchanges:

"What did your mother say, my little man? Did you give her my card?" asked a young gentleman of a little boy whose mother had given him an invitation to call upon her, and whose street door was accordingly opened by his untimely summons, by the urchin aforesaid. "Yes, I gave it to her," was the innocent reply, "and she said if you were not a natural born fool, you wouldn't come on Monday morning, when everybody was washin'!" At this juncture, mamma, with a sweet smile of welcome, made her appearance at the end of the hall, when to her surprise Mr. Verisopht, the visitor, bolted! "What does the man mean?" inquired mamma. "I dunno," replied bub; "guess he's forgot something."

THE SOUND OF SUNSET.—On the arrival of an emigrant ship at New York, some years ago, when the ship of the line North Carolina laid off the Battery, an Irishman, hearing the gun fired at sunset, inquired of one of the sailors, "Be jabers! an' what's that?" "What's that? Why, that's sunset!" was the contemptuous reply. "Sunset!" exclaimed Paddy, with distended eyes—"sunset! Holy Moses! an' does the sun go down in this country with such a clap as that?"—Porter's Spirit.

Beware of Office.—When a wild animal once tastes human flesh, nothing can ever after, says Buffon, dissuade him from human slaughter. When a politician once obtains a public office, no persuasion can ever induce him to go to work at anything but a nomination for another and another, during the term of his natural existence. If you want to spoil a good citizen for ten years, secure him a berth in the customhouse. He will need it socially a well man afterward. Send him to Congress, and you ruin him for life. He may carry around placards and tickets at the polls, accept a subordinate situation in the police, or run errands for the door-keeper of a political meetinghouse, but he will never have independence enough to emancipate himself from his morbid appetite for the "spoils" and to go to work like an honest man and a Christian.

FRENCH VS. ENGLISH.—Harriet Beecher Stowe writes as follows respecting the people of France and England: In coming from England one is struck with the manners of the French common people, as entirely wanting in a sort of obsequiousness which obtains in an aristocratic country. They are pleasant, good humored, and obliging—but these downward looks of utter humiliation and self-abasement which one sees in the English lower classes, in the presence of their superiors in rank, do never appear. It would appear that the revolutions of France have made clean work of all that; The general air of the common people is as thoroughly democratic as in America.

Somebody has been looking after peppermint statistics. It is stated that in two towns of St. Joseph county, Michigan, in 1855, 25,000 pounds of the oil was produced, which brought in the New York market three dollars per pound. From eight to twelve pounds is produced from an acre of the plants. The first crop requires a good deal of care, but the next two years it yields without attention.—After the third year the crop must rotate, in order to rest the land. The mint is cut in August and the oil extracted by distillation, filtered through flannel and put up in tin cans for market.

Gen. Packard, the Democratic nominee for Governor of Pennsylvania, is a printer by trade. The two United States Senators and the Chief Justice of Pennsylvania were also formerly printers.

The Germans have the following curious proverbs: Women have long hair and short wits. There is only one bad wife in the world, but every one thinks that he has her. A woman spills more with her tumbler than the man can draw with a bucket. A woman always keeps secret what she does not know. Rich wives make poor children. There are only two good women in the world; the one is dead, and the other is not to be found.

Echo in the woods, rainbow in the sky, And woman's beauty, soon pass by.
