

Lord Napier at the St. George's Dinner.

We submit the concluding portion of the British Minister's speech at this time-honored festival. It will be read with interest. Without the grace of Elgin or the brilliancy of Bulwer, Lord Napier it will be seen is still a very eloquent speaker.

My friend, the honorable Chairman, has been so kind as to allude in terms of glowing eulogy and acclamation to the services which members of my family have been enabled, in former times and generations, to offer to the sovereign and their country either in the departments of science or in those of war. The sincerity, gentlemen, in which that eulogium was pronounced, and the manner in which those observations were received, are certainly exceedingly gratifying to my own pride. And all this is certainly an additional incentive to me to endeavor to render myself not unworthy of those services which have been performed by members of my family upon previous occasions. [Cheers.] I cannot flatter myself that I possess any peculiar fitness or any local experience which could enable me to perform the duties of Her Majesty's Minister in a distinguished manner. But, gentlemen, this I can assure you, that I undertake those duties with the highest satisfaction and with the happiest anticipations. [Cheers.] Gentlemen, it was some time ago observed in England, and it was repeated in some quarters in America, that the members of the regular diplomatic profession of Great Britain were not qualified by their previous education and experience to contend with the stubborn and masculine elements of American politics. [Cheers.]

It was supposed that we were so inured in the petty arts and in the dark practices of "cabinet intrigue"—that we were so accustomed to humble ourselves in the twilight of military courts that we were not qualified nor disposed to meet a free people in the light of day. [Loud cheers.]—Gentlemen, did you observe any symptoms of this intellectual decrepitude in Sir Richard Pakenham, or in Sir Henry Bulwer? I have not the honor of having ever served with those distinguished personages, but, in honor to the profession to which I belong, I am justified in alleging that in my friend and my former chief, Sir H. Seymour, I never observed any want of vigor or capacity. And, gentlemen, I never observed any want of vigor or independence in my later master, Viscount Stratford de Redcliffe, who has passed thirty years of his indefatigable life in contending against the ambition of arbitrary power in one country, and in mitigating its abuses in another.

Gentlemen, I do not wish to say anything unduly and ungratefully depreciatory of any country or any Government. I have had some experience of despotic Government. I have lived in Naples, in Turkey, and in Russia. Gentlemen, there are elements of happiness in them all.—Fortunately, I say, there are elements of kindness, of culture, and of happiness which no political system whatever can exclude from the face of nature and from the hearts of men. [Loud Cheers.]—But, gentlemen, neither the retrospective glory of the Italian scene, nor the ancient repose and the picturesque associations of oriental life, nor the splendid enchantments of social life which have arisen in their most agreeable form upon the margin of the Nile, can ever make an Englishman undervalue or forget those principles of freedom which have been cherished by our common fathers at home, and which by them were sown broadcast upon the soil of the great American continent. [Cheers.]

I have since my arrival sometimes observed an impression in the United States that the development of this country is regarded with jealousy by England. Gentlemen, this is an erroneous opinion. [Cheers.] You will bear me out in the assertion that the last vestiges of former prejudices founded on the animosities of two unhappy wars are being very rapidly extinguished. The peaceful and legitimate expansion of the United States forms a matter of satisfaction and pride of every reasonable Englishman. That expansion forms the best resort and relief for our superabundant population; it forms the best market for our increasing industry; it is the triumph of our labor and our arts, of our language, our religion, and our blood. [Loud cheering.] No thoughtful Englishman can contemplate this unparalleled spectacle of future predominance without emotions of thankfulness and pride. No thoughtful foreigner can regard it without a sigh, because Providence has not reserved the future empire of the world for his own tongue and his own race. [Cheers.] Gentlemen, these sentiments of sympathy and good will which I give a feeble utterance, are, believe me, not rare or partial in our country, nor do I derive them from obscure authority. [Loud cheers.]

I have gathered these sentiments in the benevolent pages of a Carlisle, in the wise conclusions of an Aberdeen, and the eloquent declarations of an Elgin. Gentlemen, I have heard these sentiments declared and enforced from the bench of the Government, and I have heard them echoed back from the benches of the opposition. Gentlemen, these sentiments have been inculcated upon me with sincerity and careful emphasis by the Earl of Clarendon, and by that noble Viscount who is first in the councils and in the hearts of the British people. [Immense applause.]

Finally, gentlemen, I have received these sentiments as a fruitful trust from the hands of my sovereign, and I will not lay up this profitable talent in a diplomatic napkin. [Vehement and continued cheering, amid which the noble lord sat down.]

POTATOES.—Mr. Craig, a farmer of Scotland, has published a pamphlet on the potato disease. By planting three kinds of potatoes together last year, the most favorable results were achieved. Two or three of the varieties planted had been on previous occasions affected by the disease, yet when planted together, they continued free, and kept well during the winter. He thinks the disease to be the result of the violation of one of the laws of nature—that the plants are too closely bred—that they have too much been bred "in and in." His remedy is the planting of two varieties in each hill.

Harness Maker & Saddler.

THE subscriber has bought out the establishment formerly owned by A. K. Park, & is now carrying on the HARNESS and SADDLERY business in all its branches; and the LIVELY STABLE belonging to the establishment, is also kept up, where horses and carriages are constantly kept for the accommodation of the public. Horses left at my stable, will always be treated with particular attention, and well fed. I have been connected with this establishment for some four years, and am now permanently located, where I shall always be happy to wait on all who may favor me with a call. W. B. PARTLOW. The best of TIMOTHY HAY kept constantly on hand. Oregon City, Oct. 15, 1856-57.

Strayed. LEFT this city a few days ago a small BAY HORSE, five or six years old, with a blaze face, black mane and tail, branded with an X or cross on the hip. He had on when he left a strap buckled around the neck. Any person bringing him in and leaving him at Albright's, or informing me where I can get him, shall be suitably rewarded. CHARLES ST. JOHN. Oregon City, May 9, 1857. 4-5

Warning to Trespassers. AS SOME SEVENTEEN BOYS CAME to my premises last Sunday, and wandered about there, leaving the bars down twice during the day, regardless of following the express notice of the press of other stock, this is to warn them that as this has been permitted in for some years, if it does not cease immediately, they or their parents, or any others doing the same, will be proceeded against at law forthwith. HEMAN S. BUCK. Oregon City, May 30, 1857. 7

Probate Notice. NOTICE is hereby given that W. B. Chatfield, administrator of the estate of Joel Wilcox, late of Clackamas county, deceased, has made application to the Probate court of said county for final settlement, and said court has appointed Wednesday the 15th day of July next for the examination and adjustment of his accounts, at Oregon City in said county. ROBERT CAUFIELD. June 16, 1857-10-3 Judge of Probate.

In Probate Court, June Term, 1857. Order for Appearance. W. W. CHAPMAN, administrator of the estate of James L. Loring, late of Clackamas county, O. T., deceased, has this day filed his petition showing that there is no sufficient personal estate in the hands of the administrator to pay the debts outstanding against the deceased and the expense of administration, and that it is necessary to sell the whole of the real estate for the payment of such debts. It is therefore ordered, that all persons interested in said estate show cause, if any they have, on the first day of the next regular term of this court, at the office of the Judge of Probate in Oregon City, why an order should not be granted to the administrator to sell so much of the real estate as shall be required to pay the outstanding debts, allowances, and charges. It is also ordered, that a copy of this order be published for four weeks successively in The Oregon Argus. ROBERT CAUFIELD. June 2, 1857-S-4 Judge of Probate.

Excutors Notice. THE undersigned, named as executors in the last will and testament of Jos. White, late of Clackamas county, O. T., deceased, have received letters testamentary with the will annexed, bearing date May 5th, 1857, from the Probate court of said county. All persons indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment, and all persons having claims against the estate are requested to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers within one year from this date to either of us at the town of Milwaukie. IRENE WHITCOMB, Exr. WM. S. TORRENCE, Exr. WM. COLLINS, Exr. June 2, 1857. 8

Mr. Post's School. THE NEXT TERM of this school will commence on MONDAY, APRIL 6, 1857. Terms, including board, tuition, use of books, &c., are from $35 to $50 for a session of eleven weeks. None taken for less than one half of a term. No deduction made. To all those who will cheerfully use the proper exertions to acquire knowledge, and will strive to be gentlemanly in their deportment, the proprietor pledges himself that the instruction given shall not be second to any in the country. Those who do so will pay a part of their expenses by labor, and so on. JOHN D. POST. Oregon City, Feb. 14, 1857. 4-10
