INFLUENCE OF THE NEWSPAPER. — Thinking men often deplore the frivolous nature of the reading of our age, and the waste of time and intellect over the countless newspapers which find their way into the counting-room and the parlor. But there is a bright as well as dark side to the picture, and papers conducted with eminent ability are important educators of a nation. The poet Croly speaks in the following eulogistic strain of the daily and weekly press of England, and his remarks are equally true with respect to the press of our own country:

"The newspaper, the most influential of all human works, is the creation of printing. It is to the honor of England that, in this country, it approaches nearest to excellence, in intellectual vigor, in variety of knowledge, in extent of information, and in patriotic principle. It has, like all the works of man, occasional imperfections, and, perhaps, the most prominent are its too minute details of offenses against public purity. But there is scarcely a newspaper in this age which would not have been regarded as a triumph of ability in the last. In fact, the newspaper of England is the great practical teacher of the people. Its constant and universal teaching alone accounts for the superior intelligence of the population.—Schools, lecture-rooms, and universities, important as they all are, altogether fall behind it in public effect, or find that to retain their influence, they must follow in its steps.

"Those steps may now and then turn from the right road, but their native tendency is forward and upward. This intellectual giant always advances, and carries the country with him to a hight which no other country, ancient or modern, ever attained, or, perhaps, ever hoped to attain. If, in an age of foreign convulsion, England has undergone no catastrophe—if, in the fall of monarchies, she has preserved her hereditary throne—if, in the mingled infidelity and superstition of the Continent, which, like the mingled fetters and frenzy of a lunatic hospital, have, in our day, exhibited the lowest humiliation of our nature, she has preserved her freedom and her religion—I attribute all, under God, to the vigor and intelligence of public investigation, the incessant urgency of appeal to the public mind, the living organization of which the heart is the Press of England."

PRINTERS.—The Belfast Mercury gives the following in relation to printers:

"From high to low, they are the same careless, light-hearted, clever, well-informed, reckless fellows, knowing how to act better than they do—nothing at times,—everything if the occasion requires, or the fit takes them. No sooner are they comfortably in one town than they make tracks for another, even though they travel on "hair space" means. And to what will they not turn their hands? 'We have seen,' says an American editor, 'one and the same individual of the craft a minister in California, a lawyer in Missouri, a sheriff in Ohio, a boatman on a Western canal, sailing a privateer, and a pressman in a large printing office. Nor are the characters confined to any one country—they are everywhere the same. We have met them as lecturers, actors, traveling preachers, ventriloquists—in fact, everything.—We have met on a tramp in this country members of this roving profession from all parts of the globe—Frenchmen, Spaniards, Portuguese, Germans, and Swedes, and all apparently as much at home as in their own country.' Ardent lovers of liberty, king-craft and priests find but little favor in their eyes. They are always with the people. When the Chartist excitement was raging in England, the most eloquent and spirited leaders in the movement were printers. When barricades were raised in Paris in 1848, the compositors cast their type into bullets and fired them at the royalist troops. When the Americans were at war with Mexico, one of Gen. Taylor's volunteer regiments was composed almost entirely of printers, and they were the bravest of his troops. Gen. Pierce, in a speech at Concord, N. H., after his return from the Mexican war, bore testimony to the chivalrous bearing of the printers, as a class, in the several battles at the city of Mexico.

THE INFLUENCE OF MUSIC.—All nature acknowledges the influence of music; man bends before its power, and even the inferior animals own its dominion. The deep-toned organ, as it peals through the groined and richly-fretted arches of the lofty cathedral, wafts the soul to heaven on the wings of melody, and elevates the devotional feelings of the sincere worshiper.—The child, as he lisps and prattles on his nurse's knee, leaps bounding to a lively air, or is hushed to sleep by a gentle lullaby. Old, frail wrecks of humanity, whose dancing days have long since passed away, will beat time with their staff to the sound of the fiddle. Nations have been conquered, battles have been won, by the influence of music.

FINE PROSPECTS FOR WHISKY DRINKERS.—It has been so satisfactorily proved that strychnine is used to a large extent in the manufacture of whisky, that the Legislature of Ohio last session passed a law which makes it a State Prison offense to use it for such a purpose. By the use of a certain quantity of this poison, with tobacco juice, every bushel of grain is made to produce five gallons of whisky, while with an honest distillation the product is only half that amount. It was the drainage from these strychnine distilleries that killed their hogs, causing the hitherto mysterious disease known as hog cholera.—Fish have also been killed in the Scioto River at Chillicothe by the drainage from distilleries in which this delightful beverage is prepared. A chemist says a barrel of it contains strychnine enough to kill thirty men. If the mere drainage has produced such a fearful mortality among the hogs that thousands of them have died, as of cholera, we think the whisky drinkers—those who have the full benefit of the strychnine and tobacco-juice in their potations—must have a delightful time ahead.

NATURAL TRAITS.—There is a class of men who are naturally inclined to receive impressions from others. Consequently they love crowds, if not society, and have a passion to be constantly among people.

Another description of men prefer directly the reverse. They are solitary, wish to live alone, go into company with reluctance, and find their principal source of enjoyment in their own society and reflections. When thrown among others, they cannot help projecting their own character and thoughts on them, instead of waiting for and accepting those of the persons with whom they happen to be associated. These two classes are as distinct and well-recognized as the lion and the sheep among animals. Isolation and domination are the characteristics of the one, gregariousness and compliance those of the other. These different qualities result more from the greater or less strength in the will, than in the force of simple intellect.

THE UNIVERSE.—Suppose the earth to be a ball of one foot in diameter. On that scale of proportion the sun would be one hundred feet in diameter, and the moon three inches. The sun would be two miles from us, the moon thirty feet—Jupiter ten miles from the sun, and Herschel forty. The highest mountains on the face of the earth would be one eighteenth of an inch in height. Man would be an imperceptible atom.

SCIENTIFIC.—Professor Secchi, director of the Astronomical Observatory at Rome, has succeeded, after a long series of observations made by means of the fine telescope at his command, in producing a remarkable drawing of the lunar mountain, Copernicus. The drawing is on a scale of ten geographical miles to an inch, and all the objects are laid down by triangulation. It is said to be by far the most perfect representation of any portion of the moon's surface that has ever been executed, and is of much scientific value.

THE HUDSON BAY COMPANY.—A committee of the English Parliament some months ago had under consideration the subject of the future disposition of the vast landed possessions of the Hudson Bay Company in North America. The Montreal Herald has advices from England to the effect that the company are to be allowed to retain the territory, on the condition that they shall give up such portions of it as from time to time may be required for the purpose of colonization.

'A NATION OF SHOPKEEPERS.'—This expression, applied by Napoleon to the British people, was original with Samuel Adams, who employed it in an oration on the subject of American Independence, delivered in Philadelphia, in August, 1776. It is probable, however, that the terse expression was used by Napoleon without knowing that it had been anticipated by the vehement old republican of the American revolution.

NAMING CHILDREN.—The Jews named their children the eighth day after their nativity; the Romans gave names to their female children on the eighth day, and to the males on the ninth, on which day they solemnized a feast. The Greeks gave the name on the tenth day, and an entertainment was given by the parents to their friends, and sacrifices made to the gods.—The name given was usually indicative of some particular circumstance attending the birth, some quality of body or mind, or was expressive of the good wishes or fond hopes of the parents.

LADIES' VEILS—A CAUTION.—Curtis, a celebrated writer on sight, says that the wearing of veils permanently weakens many naturally good eyes, on the account of the endeavors of the eye to adjust itself to the ceaseless vibrating of that too common article of dress.

TWO WAYS OF READING IT.—The anecdote, conundrum, enigma, puzzle, quodlibet or whatever it is, that has been going the rounds of the papers, about the lady giving the word stripes to her suitor, to make his answer out of, is like the Delphic oracles, susceptible of an answer either way. Some of our cotemporaries insist that it was intended to be in the affirmative—persist.—But suppose it was intended to be tantamount to a rejection! As thus—Step, sir! These girls are "mighty unsartin' critters!"

☞ A late census of London shows 149,120 more females than males, 65,481 unmarried ladies in excess of unmarried men; 110,076 widows to 37,080 widowers; and 10,633 "grass widows," as is seen by the fact of there being that number of married women more than of married men.

☞ In a curious book on the Round Towers of Ireland, the origin of the term Yankee Doodle was traced to the Persian phrase "Yankee dooniab," or "inhabitants of the New World." Layard in his book on "Nineveh and its Remains," also mentions Yanghidumia, as the Persian name for America.

☞ A Western poet witnessed a pugilistic encounter, which he thus immortalized:

"And Isaac pitched into hym,
And hym pitched into he;
The way they fytte it was a syn,
And horrybel to see!"

☞ Few proverbs are more pithy and expressive than the following, or more calculated to be serviceable, both in public and private life:—"Make yourself a sheep, and the wolves will eat you."
