Thitter all travel—there, [ing; Tired kings, by glad content uncrowned, go smil-The slave from all the tread-mill of his toding, Breathes some enchanted air.

Thither go home at even All weary exiles, in this foreign mart, Finding the old doors opening in each heart, Senenth the Maying heaven !

The Past there no more Carves the old songs that in his heart have died The Past—no marble--singing by his side, On that enchanted since. There, fresh as in far years, Stand shattered temples of the heart—old homes Through open doors each face familiar comes— Saides!-but we waken tears! How far! how near it seems!

This weary world forgotten far, unseen-Yet only lying in a heart screne. That strange, bright world of dreams!

MAXIMS OF WASHINGTON .- The follow ing maxims of Washington paght to be published in every newspaper in the country at least once a year:

Use no represeliful language against any one, neither curses nor revilings, Be not hasty to believe flying reports to the disparagement of any one,

In your apparel be modest, and endeavor to accommodate nature rather than progore admiration. Keep to the fashions of your equals, such as are civil and orderly with respect to time and place.

Associate yourself with men of good equality if you esteem your reputation, for it is better to be alone than in bad com-

Let your conversation be without malice or envy, for it is the sign of a tractable and commendable spirit; and in all cases of passion be sure to admit reason to govern. | ner ?" Use not base and frivolous things against grown and learned men; nor very difficult and now I'll vip you for dat." questions and subjects among the ignorant, nor things hard to be believed.

Speak not of doleful things in time of mirch, nor at the table; speak not of melancholy things, as death or wounds, and, as others mention them, change, if you can, the discourse. Tell not your dreams to your intimate friends. Break not a jest where none take pleasin mirth. Laugh not sloud, nor at all without occasion. Deride no man's misfortune, though there seem to be some Speak not injurious words, neither in jest nor in eproper. Scoff at none, though they may give you occasion.

Be not forward, but friendly and courteous-the first to salute-hear and answer, and be not pensive when it is time to converse.

Detract not from others, but neither be excessive in commending.

Go not thither, where you know no whether you will be welcome or not. Give not advice without being asked, and, when desired, do it briefly. Reprehend not the imperfections of others, for that belongs to parents, masters, and soperiors.

Think before you speak; pronounce not imperfectly, nor bring out your words too bastify, but orderly and distinctly.

THE ANCIENT AND MODERN GREEKS .-Next to the pleasure enjoyed by the traveler in contemplating the ruins of Greece, must be ranked that of comparing the similarity of the manners of the present inhabitants with those of the ancients. In many of the ordinary practices of life this ance is striking hours of the day are still devoted to sleep, as they were in the times recorded by Xexophon, when Conon attempted to es cape from the Lacedemonians at Lesbos, and when Pheebidas surprised the citadel of Thebes. The Greeks still feed on vegetables and salted or pickled provisions,-The eyebrows of the Grecian women are still blackened by art, and occasionally with red and white, as described by Xenophon. This latter custom in particular is universal in Zante, among the upper classes. The layer, from which water is poured from the hand, previous to eating, appears by many passages in the Odyssey to have been a common utensil in the time of Homer; and something like the small moveable table universally used in the Levant, seems to have been common among the ancient Greeks. According to Herodotus, in his description of the banquet given by the Theban Antigonus to Mardonius and the chiefs of the Persian army, there were two men, a Persian and a Theban, placed at each table; which circumstance, being so particularly remarked. was probably a deviation from the custom of each person having a table to himself. - Turner's Tour in the Levant.

05 As republican institutions gain ground, woman appears less on the theater of events. She, whose presence in this briery world is as a filly among thoras, whose smile is pleasant, like the light of morning, and whose eye is the gate of heavon; she, whom nature so reveres that the lovely well of her spirit is the best terrestial emblem of her beauty, ceases to command armies or reign supreme over legislation. Yet the progress of liberty, while it has made her less conspicuous in historic events, has redeemed her into the possession of the dignity of her natue; has made her, not man's slave, but his companion, his counsellor and fellow-martyr; and for month, by the mail steamers and in charge of our an occasional ascendency in political affairs, has sub-tituted the uniform enjoyment of domestic equality. The avenue to active public life seems closed against her, but without impairing her power over mind, or her fame. The lyre is as obedient to her touch, the muse as coming to her call, as to that of man; and truth, in its purity, finds no more honored inter-

SNARE BITES .- Hall's "Journal of Health" says-" Since writing our article on insect bites, we have noticed that a child was bitten on the arm by a rattlesnake .-It was bound up in wet ashes; no ill resulis were observed to follow. Whiskey was swallowed freely. But as spirits have been known to fail signally in such cases, we may attribute the cure to the alkali of P the ashes and water,"

THE MEANEST MAN .- The Maine Evangelist says the meanest man in the world is he, who, " after enjoying the privilege, with his wife and children, of reading the newspaper every week for months and years, and obtaining therefrom instruction and amusement-leaves town for-nobody knows where-without paying for his pa per, thereby compelling the postmaster to order it stopped,"

We think full as mean a man is one who takes a paper for years, and when the bill for subscription is sent, sends back the paper marked "refused," but says nothing about the pay .- Examiner.

To Pugify WATER .- As much pulverized alum as will lie on the point of a small case-knife, mixed thoroughly with a bucket of water, in an hour will settle all impurities at the bottom, making it clear and 67 Dr. R. Luther, of the Observatory at Bilk, near Dusseldorf, has discovered another (the fiftieth) new planet, belonging to the system of asteroids between Mars and Jupiter.

£3" It was a good reply of Plato, to one who murmured at his reproving him for a small matter; "Custom," said he. " is no small matter. A custom, or habit of life, does frequently alter the na ural inclination, either to cool or exit."

"Hens," said a Dutchman to his urhin son, whom he had just been thrashing for swearing at his mother, "vat's dat you're tinking so vicked apout, in der cor-"I ain't tink not'n."-" You lie. you vagalished you, you tinks cot dam-
