The Editor's Experience.

The following from the Printer's News Letter draws a picture that most folks will readily appreciate, whether they have had any experience in the printing business or not:

The farmer stops his on team before the door of the printing office of his native town, and, with his whip swing over his shoulder, calls on the editor to pay his yearly subscription. The editor, perhaps wishing to draw out a compliment, asks him how he likes his paper. His reply will be that it is 'first rate, only there isn't quite enough said about farming,' and as the greater portion of his subscribers belong to that respectable class, he advises him to read books that treat upon raising cattle, potators and corn. He thinks he has some of the best books to be found upon the subject of farming, and kindly offers to lead them, for which he receives the editors thanks. The next morning the farmer's son calls with two bound volumes of an agricultu-the editors thanks. The next morning the farmer's son calls with two bound volumes of an agricultural paper published a dozen years ago, with certain articles marked for the editor to insert, one of which recommends very highly a plough patented fifteen years before.

Next comes in a pompous young man who has seen two or three productions of his own in print, and who has the most exalted idea of his own abilities, to tell the editor, confidentially, that he does not publish original matter enough in his paper. He is satisfied there is native talent enough in town to fill two papers the size of his, every week, and to fill two papers the size of his, every week, and is perfectly willing to do his part of the work. The editor begs him not to trouble himself to write The editor begs him not to trouble h muelf to write any more at present, as he has already on hand more than a half bushel of original manuscript. The young man turns very red, and gives vent to his anger by telling the editor he is arraid to pub-lish his articles, and have them contrasted with this alticles.

Another young gentleman, of studious, literary habits, but devoid of worldly experience, drops in and expresses his distaste for all the simple or exciting stories of the day, and proposes to the editor that he commence republishing one of Scott's novels, to be continued weekly, and the news of the day would, in his opinion, make an excellent family paper. A pretty, romantic young lady calls, who wishes the editor would print more love stories and more poetry. She thinks his paper is too dry.

Then comes the sedate matter of fact man, who would like to have all the light reading discarded, and the paper, if it would prove profitable to the editor in a pecuniary point of view, and he has no doubt it would, filled with said, philosophical matter. He has long wished to see one paper devoted exclusively to the sciences.

Next follows the minister of the neighboring village, who expresses as gently as possible, his sorrow that the editor does not devote more space to the one thing needful, and proposes to write a few articles on religion, that will not offend the most liberal thinker. A few weeks after comes an article of twenty manuscript pages, defending the creed of his church, by an elaborate argument, founded on the texts of the Ser pure, and because the editor rufuses to publish this, the minister says he is op-posed to inculeating the dectrines of the Bible among his readers.

The village politician thinks it is a columns were devoted to positics, his circulation would double itself in less than six months.

One old lady wishes to know if it would be much trouble for him to print his paper a little coarser, as she finds some difficulty in reading it with her glasses. Another wishes the paper wasn't quite so large, as she cannot find time to read all it contains every week, while a third thinks it ought to be larger, so that the editor can afford more space in publishing receipes upon cooking and houskeeping.

GREAT BRITAIN .- In the House of Lords, on the 14th of February, the Earl of Malmsbury, in reply to Lord Wodehouse, said he would lay before the House the recent correspondence with the United States Government, respecting the right of search. He thought England had exercised a wise discretion in giving up that right, and he believed shat a code of instructions which had been agreed so by England and France, and had been submitted to the United States for approval, would be found to work satisfactorily in repressing the slave-trade.

The Earl of Clarendon said the right of search was a belligerent right, and could not be properly exercised in time of peace. He trusted that the new code of instructions would prove satisfactory; but unless they were adopted by all the great mar atime Powers, there would always be disputes and After Mr. Prescott had finished his first great work, so little was he inspired with a fervid ambition, or anything like an inordinate desire for distinction, that he said to his father that he had had the gratification of writing the work, and that he should place it on his shelf, and leave it for those who should come after him. He was dissuaded from so doing, and was encouraged to give it to the world by his father.

REASONABLE CURIOSITY IN A DYING MAN.-IL was a bright thought, that of Smithson, founder of the Smithsonian Institution, when he was dying of an unknown disease. Smithson had had five doctors, and they had beed unable to discover what his complaint was. At length they told the patient he must die. Calling them all around him, he said : " My friends, after I die, make a post mortem examination and find out what alls me; for really, I have heard such long and learned ciscussions on the subject that I am dying to know what the disease is myself."

SALT,...The most extraordinary chemical discovery of modern times is the Autiphlogistic Salt. It acts upon the blood precisely in the same manner as the vaccine matter operates in the prevention of malignant discases. It cares only discases which are included in the prevention of malignant discases. eases which are inflammatory in their nature.

First, inflammation of the head and throat, such as brain fever, fits, headache, neuralgia, erysipelas, and catarrh. Second, cases of inflammation in the chest and abdomen, viz.: inflamed lungs and liver, pleurisy, dyspepsia, asthma, gravel, piles, &c. Third, inflammation of the extremities and Ac. Third, inflammation of the extremities and skin, to wit: rheumatism, scrofula, alects, searlet fever, venereal and cutaneous affections. This chemical combination is so powerful and instantaneous in its effects, that the dose is only what will adhere to a quill dipped in the Salt and held to the tongue for one minute. The most astounding results have invariably followed its use in the Atlantic States, and thousands of testimonials as to its virtues can be furnished, if required. The proprietor asks not, however, for Faith, but is willing to let the Salt abide by its works, confident that it will never fail. It is put up in drachm packages, price Two Dollars, and will be forwarded by mail, post paid, to any part of the country, npon receipt price Two Dollars, and will be forwarded by mult, post paid, to any part of the country, upon receipt of that sum, addressed to REDINGTON & CO., San Francisco. Rheumatism. In all cases of Inflammatory Rheumatism, whether acute or chronic, the Antiphlogistic Salt, discovered by Dr. F. Coggswell, of Boston, is a sure and infallible result. In New England, where this disease is very prevalent, the Salt has never been known to fail in effecting a radical cure, and of giving permanent relief. Rheumaand colds, and the peculiar effect of this medicine as its name (Autiphlogistic or Auti-inflammatory) significs, is to reduce inflammation, and balance the circulation of the blood, and the fluids of the body. It does not profess to be a grand pauacea, but is calculated expressly for all diseases of an but is calculated expressly for an inseases of an inflammatory nature, and is thus a perfect substitute for blood-letting in all its forms. It is for sale by all Druggists. General Agents, REDINGTON & Co, Wholesale Druggists, San Francisco.

Bronchitis, Asthma, Catarrh. These diseases, and others of a similar charac ter, caused by colds and inflammation, yield read ily and certainly to the effects of the Antiphlogisic Sult. It is peculiarly beneficial in all diseases of this nature, as they are invaribly caused by a tendency of blood to the heard and throat, and the certain result of the use of this medical salt is to reduce inflammation and equalize the circula-tion of the fluids of the body. It is also remarkachest and abdomen, such as Piles, Gravel, Vene-real, Dyspepsia, Pleurisy, &c. No better evi-dence of the value of this medicine can be given than the fact that, although it is now two years since it was first offered to the public, the discoverer has been able to answer but a small portion of his orders, and it is only within the last two moaths that it could be obtained at any price in this State.
