

Matus.
Still, still with Thee, when purple morning breaketh,
When the hild waketh, and the shadows flee;
Fairer than the morning, livelier than the day-light,
Dawn the sweet consciousness, I am with Thee!
Alone with Thee, amid the mystic shadows,
The solemn hush of nature newly born;
Alone with Thee, in breathless adoration,
In the calm dew and freshness of the morn.
As in the dawning, o'er the waving seas,
The image of the morning-star doth rest,
So in this stillness Thou beholdest only
Thine image in the waters of my breast.
When sinks the soul, subdued by toil, to slumber,
Its closing eye looks back to Thee in prayer;
Sweet, the repose beneath thy wings so shading,
But sooner still to wake and find Thee there.
So shall it be at last in that bright morning
When the soul waketh, and life's shadows flee;
Oh, in that hour, fairer than daylight dawning,
Shall rise the glorious thought, I am with Thee!
Mrs. H. B. Stowe.

HUMAN BEINGS.

On the 10th day of December, 1799, "full of health and vigor, Washington looked forward to his long cherished hopes—the enjoyment of a serene old age at Mount Vernon, the home of his heart." On that day he contemplated a manuscript of thirty pages, detailing a complete system for the management of his estate for many succeeding years, specifying the cultivation of the several farms, with tables designating the rotation of crops. This manuscript was accompanied by a letter to his manager; this was on Wednesday; on Saturday following, Washington was dead.

Multitudes are there whose existence is one continued struggle for means which will enable them to retire to the country and live at their ease for the remainder of life.

How few of all that company succeed, need not be expressed here; and of that small number more than half have their hearts so eaten out by the conflicts of life that no lusciousness is left, no zest for the pure and quiet joys of the country—notching left but the dry, hard greed of gold, and bitter reflections as to the deep depravity of their fellow men; no sunshine lights up their countenances; no kindly words escape their lips; no generous acts mark out their daily lives; all humanity has died out in them; they have only one joy and it is a semblance—the joy of clutching and hoarding money. Against a life so terrible as this there is a protection—there is a happy deliverance; it consists in wisely knowing what we may of the present, instead of setting apart a future for it, which we may never see.

It has been beautifully remarked that a woman's heart is the only true plate for a man's liveness. An instant gives the impression, and an age of sorrow and change cannot efface it.

To make a lady stick out her finger, put on the aforesaid digit a diamond ring. To make her stick out her eyes, show her a silk dress. To make her stick out all over—give her a crinoline.

Our gladness should take the form of thankfulness. Gratitude is the grace which hollows gladness, and by giving it an upward, Godward direction, makes it both noble and safe.

Those who do nothing themselves, expect everything to be easily performed.
