The Ancio-French War with China. The principal body of British and French troops was remaining on the island of Chusan, near Shanghae, where the climate was healthy. They were waiting for Lord Elgin and Baron Gros, before making any hostile demonstration on China. Large supplies of provisions and animals were being laid in for the troops, but the popular belief among foreign residents of China and Japan was that there would yet be a settlement of the difficulties without war, The British merchants were very desirous for a settlement, and it was thought that new overtures would be made to China for peace, before the commencement of active hostilities. However peaceful the intentions of the Allies, the Shanghae papers note that their fleets were to have left Hongkong on the 15th May, although no account of their sailing had been received up to the 26th. The same authority also says that all the allied troops at Tinghai had received orders to hold themselves in readiness for immediate departure. Indian troops in considerable numbers were also expected to be brought into service.

The Chinese were much better prepared for war than ever before, and were energetically placing themselves in hostile attitude. All the forts along the Peiho had been greatly strengthened. Every possible impedment, to obstruct navigation, had been placed in the river, and it seemed the determination to fill up the channel, necessary to prevent the French and English men-of-war from ascending. A large Tartar army had been assembled near Tientsis, and it was reported that American and Russian military men were on the ground, teaching the Tartars the arts of civilized

RAPID PROGRESS OF THE REBELS.

The Chinese rebels had recently been very successful. They had taken the large city of Soochow, and were holding possession. This gave them control of all the country in that direction, within a hundred miles of Shanghae. They were reported to be advancing towards Shanghae. All the trade between the interior districts and the latter port had been cut off. The usual supplies of teas and silks could no longer be obtained at Shanghae by vessels seeking cargoes, and all the principal Chinese merchants bad fled to Tuchon, taking their treasure and moveable valuables. In consequence of this slarming condition of things, business of all kinds was nearly sus-

Dreadful Explusion.

The steamer Ben Lewis exploded her bolers whilst rounding the point just above Cairo, on the Mississippi, near the mouth of the Ohio. The shock is described as terrife, sounding like an earthquake, and even jarring the houses in Cairo. The boat forward of the wheel house was torn into fragments by the explosion, the chimneys were hurled over, and the entire forward portion of the steamer was a mere mass of ruins, with the times. Crushed under and among this, amid the furnaces, were the ill-fated passengers, who had laid down a few hours previous to peaceful slumber, and who now awoke (if they awoke at all) amid a scene that is till they die. horrid even to contemplate. It is stated that the most heartrending and agonizing of screams broke out upon the still night air a moment after, as the unfortunate Snuff and Tobacc Manufaccrew and passengers came to realize their position and imminent danger; or as they began to feel the smarting stings of the scalling steam, or the braises of the falling timbers. These were soon quieted, and for about ten or fifteen minutes everything was comparatively silent, those who weruninjured being busily engaged in extricating themselves from the wreck, or in providing means for escape to the land. But their misfortunes were not to end here. In about fifteen minutes, a bright sheet of flame was seen to break out on the larboard side; it quickly extended on all sides until in a few moments the entire boat was in flames. Of course, upon the appearance of this new peril all presence of mind among those on board was lost, and a scene ensued which can only be contemplated with a shudder of horror. The boat slowly floated down with the current, until at last it lodged on a point about a mile and a half below Cairo, where it burned to the water's

Immediately upon the explosion of the boat, several boats at Cairo, which fortunately had steam up, started for the scene of disaster and aided materially in rescuing passengers. The tow-boats Lake Eric and Storm, together with the St. Louis and Cincinnati packet Sunny Side, saved from 50 to 75 lives. Others were saved in skiffs which put out from the shores in the vicinity. The number of the lost cannot be definitely stated, and, in fact, it is not likely that the correct number of those so suddenly hurried into eternity will ever be positively known. It is stated that there could not be less than 200 persons in all on board. Many of these were undoubtedly harled overboard by the force of the explosion and drowned, while many others were doubtless buried in the wreck, and died a horrid death beneath the burning

Roman Eye Balsam,

FOR WEAK & INFLAMED EYES.

THIS BALSAM was used for many years in the private practice of a celebrated Oculist, with remarkable success, for diseases of the Eys and Eyelide. There are many persons who would rather suffer from pain and disease through life, than credit or try the efficacy of any new discovery; sil such had better not read this, but to all reasonable persons this preparation is recommended as a most safe and effectual ours for inflammation of the Eye and Eyelds, caused either by too close application to minute objects, scrofulous habit, exfrom any extraneous body under the cyclids, it is remarkably soothing in its effect, and has cured thousands who would otherwise have lost their sight. In cases the Eyelids are inflamed, or the ball of the Eye thickly covered with blood, it acts almost ike magic and removes all appearances of inflammation after two or three applications. There is a numerous class of persons that are peculiarly exposed to accidents or discases that weaken and inflame the Eyes, and perhaps destroy the sight, who, from the nature of their emp syments, are compelled to work in a cloud of dust and grit. Such should never be without this BALSAM. Remember, "Seeing is Believing."

THAT most diseases prove fatal; that early deaths occur, that people live for years a living death, weak, inanimate, and exhausted—not from the disease itself, but from an inability in sature, and nature's strength to withstand or tain life through the ravages of disease. live them strength, and nature will relieve her self, if stimulated. She has given us herbs and plants to effect all this. Purify the blood, render natural functions of man or woman active, and you have half conquered disease. Dr. JACOB WEBBER does conscientiously assure all who read this, that his Sanguifier or Invigorating Cordial produces all the effect above described. He basseen the old, the tottering, the palsied, the nervous, the dysp ptic, the inebriate, the debau-chee, and the invalid revive under its influence, as if new life were given them.

Dr. Webber's Sanguister
