THE OREGON ARGUS

BY W. C. CHAIX.

TERRIFIC SIGHTS AT RICHMOND.

The New York Evening Post gives the following account of the recent battles of the Confederates with the forces of the Union, which is stated to have been fought on the 20th ult., at Manassas, Va.

"The captured army of the Confederates, which had been previously engaged against the forces of the Union, had been driven back into the interior of the Confederacy by the troops of the Union, which had been manning the defenses of Manassas, and which the Confederates had been driven back from. The attack made by the Confederates was a desperate one, and was followed by a heavy loss of life and property. The Confederates were driven back into the interior of the Confederacy by the troops of the Union, which had been manning the defenses of Manassas, and which the Confederates had been driven back from."
