

AN INCIDENT OF THE BATTLE OF BULL RUN.—While the Thirty-second was in this position, the Sixteen and Thirty-first having passed within its range, a youthful orderly rode up to Col. Matheson to inform him that the Black Cavalry, sheltered from his observation by a piece of woods, were coming up on the right, and if he would take a cut with his Regiment across the fields, they would be turned back upon their errand. The evolution was performed with the protection that was desired, and the Black Horse relinquished its purpose in that quarter. While the regiment, however, was adhering to this position, the same youth who had imparted the previous suggestion, rode up to the Regiment again and told Matheson he had better now fall back on Centerville, as his duty there had been thoroughly performed. As this was about the first sign of orders (with one single exception) he had received during the entire day, Matheson felt some curiosity to learn who this young Lieutenant was, and whence these orders came; he therefore turned sharply on the youth who, he now perceived, could not be more than twenty-two or three, and said:—"Young man, I would like to know your name." The youth replied that he was a son of Quartermaster General Meigs.—"By whose authority, then, do you deliver me these orders?" was the Colonel's next inquiry. The young man smiled, and remarked: "Well, sir, the truth is, that for the last few hours I have been giving out the orders for this division, and acting as General on the field." This incident is worthy of our notice among the lessons of the day.

Willis, of the Home Journal, lately visited the army across the Potomac, and relates the following incidents:

At one of the angles of the embankment, Olmstead pointed out an exquisite tailor seated to me. It was a little drummer boy, of perhaps fourteen years of age, who had enclosed himself in the shade of a 42-pounder to write a letter.—His drum, tipped at a slight angle, was his desk, and the shadow of the barrel of the gun just covered his sheet of paper.—Dressed in his uniform, with his cap set jauntily on one side, and leaning on the carriage of the piece of ordnance, he formed a charming picture of home-remembered and the surroundings of war. I should have liked to bring away a photograph of the adorable little soldier and his letter to his mother.

Three of the gentlemen cavalry of Virginia were being brought in, at that very hour, swung dead across their saddles, with their hands dragging in the dirt, killed by a patrol company of the Thirty-seventh, in revenge for the steadily shooting of several of their picket-guard the night before.—The company which had gone out to regulate (so the Colonel told me at Washington the next day) had fallen in with these mounted scouts, shot them and brought them in on their own horses, at the time of day when we were overlooking the camp. He described them as evidently gentlemen, by their dress and accoutrements; and the scene, with all its previous provocations, as quite too horrible.

MONDAY TO GEN. LYON.
To the Editor of the N. Y. Tribune:
The residue of the illustrious brave and faithful Gen. Lyon will pass through your patriotic Metropolis in a few days, and God grant that it may be honored with a funeral pageant worthy of the immortal man.
Only one week previous to the victorious battle in which he gallantly sacrificed his life he said to the writer, with tears in his eyes: "Oh my God! what awful griefs I am allowing the forces of the enemy have been collecting the last six months, to leave Memphis almost deserted and invade my State! I pity the Union men of Southern Missouri. My force is too small to protect them from being massacred, robbed, and their families dishonored. Why can't our forces at Cairo threaten Memphis?—I can't save them, but I'll fight and do my best, and trust to Providence for success!" Great, good patriot! He did his best, and let his remains be honored.
WILLIAM R. JOHNSON, of St. Louis.
New York, Aug. 19, 1861.

FLOATING BATTERY.—The new floating battery now building at New York, is nearly ready. It is a large vessel, and carries several guns of large calibre. The object is to take her down to Southern ports, for the purpose of attacking the forts now held by secessionists. The vessel is completely iron bound, and is equal to any fort. We have already possession of the Albemarle Sound, the Chesapeake, Potomac and Key West, and will soon occupy every Southern port.

SPENDY WOMAN.—A few evenings ago, whilst a gentleman, who lives near Midway, in this State, and has a Union flag before his door, was absent, the secessionists, about twelve or fifteen in number, commenced cutting down the flag. They went to the house, only his wife being at home; the noble woman ordered them to leave. They refused. She demanded by what authority they were cutting down the flag. They replied—"By the authority of our captain." She seized a revolver and fired, when the secessionists fled in consternation, and the victorious heroine, grasping the flag and waving it in the air, gave three cheers for the Union.—Louisville Democrat.

UNFORTUNATE NAMES.—A correspondent of the Stockton Independent, writing from Orr's Store, San Joaquin county, says: "I was credibly informed that several of the late babies of the male gender in that region had been christened 'Jeff Davis,' 'Beauregard,' 'Wigfall,' etc.—I sincerely believe those names will be more infamous in history than is the name of Calhoun or Benedict Arnold, and as those children grow up they will curse their parents for supplying them with such an infamous cognomen."

Roman Eye Balsam,
FOR WEAK & INFLAMED EYES.
THIS BALSAM was used for many years in the private practice of a celebrated Oculist, with remarkable success, for diseases of the Eye and Eyelids.
There are many persons who would rather suffer from pain and disease through life, than credit the efficacy of any new discovery, until they had better not read this, but to all reasonable persons this preparation is recommended as a most safe and effectual cure for inflammation of the Eye and Eyelids, caused either by too close application to minute objects, scrofulous habit, exposure to cold, blows, contusions, or irritation from any extraneous body under the eyelids. It is remarkably soothing in its effect, and has cured thousands who would otherwise have lost their sight.
In cases the Eyelids are inflamed, or the ball of the Eye thickly covered with blood, it acts almost like magic and removes all appearance of inflammation after two or three applications. There is a numerous class of persons that are peculiarly exposed to accidents or diseases that weaken and inflame the Eyes, and perhaps destroy the sight, who, from the nature of their employments, are compelled to work in a cloud of dust and grit. Such should never be without this BALSAM. Remember, "Seeing is Believing."
Price 25 cents per jar.
