

men employed for the better protection of the buildings lying south of the Capitol, and used as public stables and carpenters' shops, six hundred dollars.

For compensation of watchman employed on reservation number two, six hundred dollars.

For compensation of eight draw keepers at the Potomac bridge, and for fuel, oil, and lamps, six thousand five hundred and thirty-two dollars.

For compensation of two draw-keepers at the two bridges across the Eastern Branch of the Potomac, and for fuel, oil, and lamps, one thousand one hundred and eighty dollars.

For furnace-keeper at the President's House, six hundred dollars.

To enable the Commissioner of Public Buildings to employ a keeper of three furnaces under the old hall of the House of Representatives, six hundred dollars.

Metropolitan Police.—For salaries and other necessary expenses of the metropolitan police for the District of Columbia, including the same annual compensation (two hundred and fifty dollars) to each of the two ex-officio members of the Board of Police from the organization thereof, August nineteen eighteen hundred and sixty-one, as is allowed by law to the Commissioners of Police.

Sixty thousand dollars.

For compensation of clerks, assistants, and laborers, who were employed in the several departments and offices hereinbefore specified, to be employed and continuing only during the rebellion, and for one year after its close, viz:

In the office of the Secretary of Treasury, five clerks of class four:

In the office of the Second Auditor of the Treasury, three clerks of class four, eight of class three, twelve of class two, one assistant messenger at a salary of seven hundred dollars, and one laboree at a salary of six hundred dollars per annum.

In the office of the Third Auditor of the Treasury, six clerks of class four, seven of class three, nine of class two, and eighteen of class one, and ten clerks as copyists at a rate not exceeding fifty dollars per month.

In the office of the Fifth Auditor of the Treasury, one clerk of class four, two of class three, four of class two, thirteen of class one, and six copying clerks, at an annual salary of six hundred dollars each.

In the office of the assistant treasurer at Boston, one clerk at a salary of twelve hundred dollars per annum.

In the office of the assistant treasurer at New York, clerks, messengers, keeper, and laborers, whose salaries in the aggregate shall not exceed eight thousand seven hundred dollars.

In the office of the treasurer of the mint as depository, in lieu of the clerks heretofore authorized, clerks and messenger, whose salaries in the aggregate shall not exceed five thousand five hundred dollars.

In the office of the assistant treasurer at Saint Louis, messenger, watchman, and laborer, whose salaries in the aggregate shall not exceed two thousand dollars.

In the office of the Secretary of the Navy, three clerks of the first class and three of the second class.

In the Ordnance Bureau of the Navy, one chief clerk and three clerks of the second class.

In each of the Bureaus of Medicine and Surgery, Equipment and Recruiting and Navigation, one laboree at an annual salary of six hundred dollars.

In the Navy Department, two additional night watchmen, each at an annual salary of six hundred dollars.

In the Pension-Office, three clerks of class four, four of class three, four of class two, nine of class one, one additional assistant messenger at a salary of seven hundred dollars, and one additional laboree at a salary of six hundred dollars per annum, for the current year; five additional clerks of class four, six of class three, eight of class two, and sixteen of class one, one additional assistant messenger at a salary of seven hundred dollars, and one additional laboree at a salary of six hundred dollars per annum, for the fiscal year ending June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-four.

In the office of the Secretary of War, six clerks of class four, and eight of class one.

In the office of the Chief of Ordnance of the War Department, three clerks of class four, and twenty of class one.

In the office of the Adjutant-General, eight clerks of class two, and twenty of class one.

In the office of the Commissary-General, twelve clerks of class one, and one laboree at a salary of six hundred dollars per annum.

In the office of the Surgeon-General, one clerk of class four, one of class three, two of class two, and twenty-one of class one.

In the office of the Paymaster-General, four clerks of class three, and sixteen of class one; and in the office of the Chief of Engineers, two clerks of class one.

And the several clerks and other employees authorized by this section shall be appointed by the heads of the several departments to which they are severally attached, and the amount necessary to pay their salaries, from the time of their appointment, for the fiscal year ending June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, and for the fiscal year ending June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, shall be construed to increase the salaries of the Superintendent of the Census or the Assistant Postmasters-General.

Approved, February 25, 1863.

There are a great many men who never have a large or valuable thought. Their minds are a spider that lies in the cobweb of their brain grasping at the flies of thought which are floating the rounds of the literary world, and yet these men make more noise, and more display of a borrowed "Central Idea," than did Humboldt of all his vast store of knowledge. They hang themselves out on a thread of their gossamer fabric, hoping and even expecting to win the admiration and applause of the truly great. And thus their wimpy life is spent and their minds dark and unprepared for the great change that awaits them.

The Oregon Argus.

W. L. Adams, Editor.

SALEM:

MONDAY, AUGUST 24, 1863.

The Coming Man.

During the first eighteen months of our conflict with the rebellion, marked with various success, the organs of the Union cause were in the habit of talking a good deal about "the coming man." A general impression seemed to prevail among the truly loyal—those who were really in earnest in wishing the rebellion crushed out speedily, and the Union saved effectually—that there was something radically wrong in the heads of our military chieftains. It seemed to be a general impression that our immense resources in men, money, and munitions of war, were not being used in making inroads upon the rebellion corresponding in magnitude with the masses at our command. There seemed to prevail a conviction that none of our chieftains had the ability to lead us to victory.

Intelligence has known for many years that this struggle would come. We had the elements of destruction in the heart of the country. The leaders of a powerful party have been placing magazines under the temple since 1832. The autocrats of Europe knew that it would come, and looked upon its coming as the harbinger of our swift destruction. Years ago, we heard politicians express their belief in its coming, and aver their solemn conviction that at the end of the struggle some great military chieftain would assume the office of Dictator, and the people, worn out with war and disgusted with the weakness of a republican form of government, would take upon their shoulders the yoke of a despot. We have never had the slightest fears that such a movement could succeed in a country where there is so much intelligence and love of liberty. The more ignorant and debased portion of the community, such as now support the copperhead party, could easily be managed to hurrah for a monarchy—while the leading villains who are sympathizing with Valandigham and Jeff, would be glad to see any despotism inaugurated that would put them in office for life. Ignorance will doubt this now, even among some weak royalists, but it is as true as gospel nevertheless. All the ignorant rabble lack as a stimulus to making the effort, is a great military leader. The copperhead leaders, who hate liberty and covet an alliance with despotism, were hoping they had found their "coming man" in McClellan. They hoped to make him either a monarch, or, what is next nearest to it, a President on a copperhead platform. But Franklin O'Meara takes the same view of it. Amory is an entire stranger to such feelings of loathing and disgust as are produced in the breasts of loyal men on witnessing our British neighbor's partiality for the rattle-snake flag, and the knowledge that the pirate vessels now destroying our commerce were fitted out in British ports, and would, if they should come to Victoria, be treated with high consideration, their officers and crews fined and whined and fisted out to depend on their ship-burning mission to the "pirates we had sold to them."

Amory has known for many years that this struggle would come. We had the elements of destruction in the heart of the country. The leaders of a powerful party have been placing magazines under the temple since 1832. The autocrats of Europe knew that it would come, and looked upon its coming as the harbinger of our swift destruction. Years ago, we heard politicians express their belief in its coming, and aver their solemn conviction that at the end of the struggle some great military chieftain would assume the office of Dictator, and the people, worn out with war and disgusted with the weakness of a republican form of government, would take upon their shoulders the yoke of a despot. We have never had the slightest fears that such a movement could succeed in a country where there is so much intelligence and love of liberty. The more ignorant and debased portion of the community, such as now support the copperhead party, could easily be managed to hurrah for a monarchy—while the leading villains who are sympathizing with Valandigham and Jeff, would be glad to see any despotism inaugurated that would put them in office for life. Ignorance will doubt this now, even among some weak royalists, but it is as true as gospel nevertheless. All the ignorant rabble lack as a stimulus to making the effort, is a great military leader. The copperhead leaders, who hate liberty and covet an alliance with despotism, were hoping they had found their "coming man" in McClellan. They hoped to make him either a monarch, or, what is next nearest to it, a President on a copperhead platform. But Franklin O'Meara takes the same view of it. Amory is an entire stranger to such feelings of loathing and disgust as are produced in the breasts of loyal men on witnessing our British neighbor's partiality for the rattle-snake flag, and the knowledge that the pirate vessels now destroying our commerce were fitted out in British ports, and would, if they should come to Victoria, be treated with high consideration, their officers and crews fined and whined and fisted out to depend on their ship-burning mission to the "pirates we had sold to them."

Amory has known for many years that this struggle would come. We had the elements of destruction in the heart of the country. The leaders of a powerful party have been placing magazines under the temple since 1832. The autocrats of Europe knew that it would come, and looked upon its coming as the harbinger of our swift destruction. Years ago, we heard politicians express their belief in its coming, and aver their solemn conviction that at the end of the struggle some great military chieftain would assume the office of Dictator, and the people, worn out with war and disgusted with the weakness of a republican form of government, would take upon their shoulders the yoke of a despot. We have never had the slightest fears that such a movement could succeed in a country where there is so much intelligence and love of liberty. The more ignorant and debased portion of the community, such as now support the copperhead party, could easily be managed to hurrah for a monarchy—while the leading villains who are sympathizing with Valandigham and Jeff, would be glad to see any despotism inaugurated that would put them in office for life. Ignorance will doubt this now, even among some weak royalists, but it is as true as gospel nevertheless. All the ignorant rabble lack as a stimulus to making the effort, is a great military leader. The copperhead leaders, who hate liberty and covet an alliance with despotism, were hoping they had found their "coming man" in McClellan. They hoped to make him either a monarch, or, what is next nearest to it, a President on a copperhead platform. But Franklin O'Meara takes the same view of it. Amory is an entire stranger to such feelings of loathing and disgust as are produced in the breasts of loyal men on witnessing our British neighbor's partiality for the rattle-snake flag, and the knowledge that the pirate vessels now destroying our commerce were fitted out in British ports, and would, if they should come to Victoria, be treated with high consideration, their officers and crews fined and whined and fisted out to depend on their ship-burning mission to the "pirates we had sold to them."

Amory has known for many years that this struggle would come. We had the elements of destruction in the heart of the country. The leaders of a powerful party have been placing magazines under the temple since 1832. The autocrats of Europe knew that it would come, and looked upon its coming as the harbinger of our swift destruction. Years ago, we heard politicians express their belief in its coming, and aver their solemn conviction that at the end of the struggle some great military chieftain would assume the office of Dictator, and the people, worn out with war and disgusted with the weakness of a republican form of government, would take upon their shoulders the yoke of a despot. We have never had the slightest fears that such a movement could succeed in a country where there is so much intelligence and love of liberty. The more ignorant and debased portion of the community, such as now support the copperhead party, could easily be managed to hurrah for a monarchy—while the leading villains who are sympathizing with Valandigham and Jeff, would be glad to see any despotism inaugurated that would put them in office for life. Ignorance will doubt this now, even among some weak royalists, but it is as true as gospel nevertheless. All the ignorant rabble lack as a stimulus to making the effort, is a great military leader. The copperhead leaders, who hate liberty and covet an alliance with despotism, were hoping they had found their "coming man" in McClellan. They hoped to make him either a monarch, or, what is next nearest to it, a President on a copperhead platform. But Franklin O'Meara takes the same view of it. Amory is an entire stranger to such feelings of loathing and disgust as are produced in the breasts of loyal men on witnessing our British neighbor's partiality for the rattle-snake flag, and the knowledge that the pirate vessels now destroying our commerce were fitted out in British ports, and would, if they should come to Victoria, be treated with high consideration, their officers and crews fined and whined and fisted out to depend on their ship-burning mission to the "pirates we had sold to them."

Amory has known for many years that this struggle would come. We had the elements of destruction in the heart of the country. The leaders of a powerful party have been placing magazines under the temple since 1832. The autocrats of Europe knew that it would come, and looked upon its coming as the harbinger of our swift destruction. Years ago, we heard politicians express their belief in its coming, and aver their solemn conviction that at the end of the struggle some great military chieftain would assume the office of Dictator, and the people, worn out with war and disgusted with the weakness of a republican form of government, would take upon their shoulders the yoke of a despot. We have never had the slightest fears that such a movement could succeed in a country where there is so much intelligence and love of liberty. The more ignorant and debased portion of the community, such as now support the copperhead party, could easily be managed to hurrah for a monarchy—while the leading villains who are sympathizing with Valandigham and Jeff, would be glad to see any despotism inaugurated that would put them in office for life. Ignorance will doubt this now, even among some weak royalists, but it is as true as gospel nevertheless. All the ignorant rabble lack as a stimulus to making the effort, is a great military leader. The copperhead leaders, who hate liberty and covet an alliance with despotism, were hoping they had found their "coming man" in McClellan. They hoped to make him either a monarch, or, what is next nearest to it, a President on a copperhead platform. But Franklin O'Meara takes the same view of it. Amory is an entire stranger to such feelings of loathing and disgust as are produced in the breasts of loyal men on witnessing our British neighbor's partiality for the rattle-snake flag, and the knowledge that the pirate vessels now destroying our commerce were fitted out in British ports, and would, if they should come to Victoria, be treated with high consideration, their officers and crews fined and whined and fisted out to depend on their ship-burning mission to the "pirates we had sold to them."

Amory has known for many years that this struggle would come. We had the elements of destruction in the heart of the country. The leaders of a powerful party have been placing magazines under the temple since 1832. The autocrats of Europe knew that it would come, and looked upon its coming as the harbinger of our swift destruction. Years ago, we heard politicians express their belief in its coming, and aver their solemn conviction that at the end of the struggle some great military chieftain would assume the office of Dictator, and the people, worn out with war and disgusted with the weakness of a republican form of government, would take upon their shoulders the yoke of a despot. We have never had the slightest fears that such a movement could succeed in a country where there is so much intelligence and love of liberty. The more ignorant and debased portion of the community, such as now support the copperhead party, could easily be managed to hurrah for a monarchy—while the leading villains who are sympathizing with Valandigham and Jeff, would be glad to see any despotism inaugurated that would put them in office for life. Ignorance will doubt this now, even among some weak royalists, but it is as true as gospel nevertheless. All the ignorant rabble lack as a stimulus to making the effort, is a great military leader. The copperhead leaders, who hate liberty and covet an alliance with despotism, were hoping they had found their "coming man" in McClellan. They hoped to make him either a monarch, or, what is next nearest to it, a President on a copperhead platform. But Franklin O'Meara takes the same view of it. Amory is an entire stranger to such feelings of loathing and disgust as are produced in the breasts of loyal men on witnessing our British neighbor's partiality for the rattle-snake flag, and the knowledge that the pirate vessels now destroying our commerce were fitted out in British ports, and would, if they should come to Victoria, be treated with high consideration, their officers and crews fined and whined and fisted out to depend on their ship-burning mission to the "pirates we had sold to them."

Amory has known for many years that this struggle would come. We had the elements of destruction in the heart of the country. The leaders of a powerful party have been placing magazines under the temple since 1832. The autocrats of Europe knew that it would come, and looked upon its coming as the harbinger of our swift destruction. Years ago, we heard politicians express their belief in its coming, and aver their solemn conviction that at the end of the struggle some great military chieftain would assume the office of Dictator, and the people, worn out with war and disgusted with the weakness of a republican form of government, would take upon their shoulders the yoke of a despot. We have never had the slightest fears that such a movement could succeed in a country where there is so much intelligence and love of liberty. The more ignorant and debased portion of the community, such as now support the copperhead party, could easily be managed to hurrah for a monarchy—while the leading villains who are sympathizing with Valandigham and Jeff, would be glad to see any despotism inaugurated that would put them in office for life. Ignorance will doubt this now, even among some weak royalists, but it is as true as gospel nevertheless. All the ignorant rabble lack as a stimulus to making the effort, is a great military leader. The copperhead leaders, who hate liberty and covet an alliance with despotism, were hoping they had found their "coming man" in McClellan. They hoped to make him either a monarch, or, what is next nearest to it, a President on a copperhead platform. But Franklin O'Meara takes the same view of it. Amory is an entire stranger to such feelings of loathing and disgust as are produced in the breasts of loyal men on witnessing our British neighbor's partiality for the rattle-snake flag, and the knowledge that the pirate vessels now destroying our commerce were fitted out in British ports, and would, if they should come to Victoria, be treated with high consideration, their officers and crews fined and whined and fisted out to depend on their ship-burning mission to the "pirates we had sold to them."

Amory has known for many years that this struggle would come. We had the elements of destruction in the heart of the country. The leaders of a powerful party have been placing magazines under the temple since 1832. The autocrats of Europe knew that it would come, and looked upon its coming as the harbinger of our swift destruction. Years ago, we heard politicians express their belief in its coming, and aver their solemn conviction that at the end of the struggle some great military chieftain would assume the office of Dictator, and the people, worn out with war and disgusted with the weakness of a republican form of government, would take upon their shoulders the yoke of a despot. We have never had the slightest fears that such a movement could succeed in a country where there is so much intelligence and love of liberty. The more ignorant and debased portion of the community, such as now support the copperhead party, could easily be managed to hurrah for a monarchy—while the leading villains who are sympathizing with Valandigham and Jeff, would be glad to see any despotism inaugurated that would put them in office for life. Ignorance will doubt this now, even among some weak royalists, but it is as true as gospel nevertheless. All the ignorant rabble lack as a stimulus to making the effort, is a great military leader. The copperhead leaders, who hate liberty and covet an alliance with despotism, were hoping they had found their "coming man" in McClellan. They hoped to make him either a monarch, or, what is next nearest to it, a President on a copperhead platform. But Franklin O'Meara takes the same view of it. Amory is an entire stranger to such feelings of loathing and disgust as are produced in the breasts of loyal men on witnessing our British neighbor's partiality for the rattle-snake flag, and the knowledge that the pirate vessels now destroying our commerce were fitted out in British ports, and would, if they should come to Victoria, be treated with high consideration, their officers and crews fined and whined and fisted out to depend on their ship-burning mission to the "pirates we had sold to them."

Amory has known for many years that this struggle would come. We had the elements of destruction in the heart of the country. The leaders of a powerful party have been placing magazines under the temple since 1832. The autocrats of Europe knew that it would come, and looked upon its coming as the harbinger of our swift destruction. Years ago, we heard politicians express their belief in its coming, and aver their solemn conviction that at the end of the struggle some great military chieftain would assume the office of Dictator, and the people, worn out with war and disgusted with the weakness of a republican form of government, would take upon their shoulders the yoke of a despot. We have never had the slightest fears that such a movement could succeed in a country where there is so much intelligence and love of liberty. The more ignorant and debased portion of the community, such as now support the copperhead party, could easily be managed to hurrah for a monarchy—while the leading villains who are sympathizing with Valandigham and Jeff, would be glad to see any despotism inaugurated that would put them in office for life. Ignorance will doubt this now, even among some weak royalists, but it is as true as gospel nevertheless. All the ignorant rabble lack as a stimulus to making the effort, is a great military leader. The copperhead leaders, who hate liberty and covet an alliance with despotism, were hoping they had found their "coming man" in McClellan. They hoped to make him either a monarch, or, what is next nearest to it, a President on a copperhead platform. But Franklin O'Meara takes the same view of it. Amory is an entire stranger to such feelings of loathing and disgust as are produced in the breasts of loyal men on witnessing our British neighbor's partiality for the rattle-snake flag, and the knowledge that the pirate vessels now destroying our commerce were fitted out in British ports, and would, if they should come to Victoria, be treated with high consideration, their officers and crews fined and whined and fisted out to depend on their ship-burning mission to the "pirates we had sold to them."

Amory has known for many years that this struggle would come. We had the elements of destruction in the heart of the country. The leaders of a powerful party have been placing magazines under the temple since 1832. The autocrats of Europe knew that it would come, and looked upon its coming as the harbinger of our swift destruction. Years ago, we heard politicians express their belief in its coming, and aver their solemn conviction that at the end of the struggle some great military chieftain would assume the office of Dictator, and the people, worn out with war and disgusted with the weakness of a republican form of government, would take upon their shoulders the yoke of a despot. We have never had the slightest fears that such a movement could succeed in a country where there is so much intelligence and love of liberty. The more ignorant and debased portion of the community, such as now support the copperhead party, could easily be managed to hurrah for a monarchy—while the leading villains who are sympathizing with Valandigham and Jeff, would be glad to see any despotism inaugurated that would put them in office for life. Ignorance will doubt this now, even among some weak royalists, but it is as true as gospel nevertheless. All the ignorant rabble lack as a stimulus to making the effort, is a great military leader. The copperhead leaders, who hate liberty and covet an alliance with despotism, were hoping they had found their "coming man" in McClellan. They hoped to make him either a monarch, or, what is next nearest to it, a President on a copperhead platform. But Franklin O'Meara takes the same view of it. Amory is an entire stranger to such feelings of loathing and disgust as are produced in the breasts of loyal men on witnessing our British neighbor's partiality for the rattle-snake flag, and the knowledge that the pirate vessels now destroying our commerce were fitted out in British ports, and would, if they should come to Victoria, be treated with high consideration, their officers and crews fined and whined and fisted out to depend on their ship-burning mission to the "pirates we had sold to them."

Amory has known for many years that this struggle would come. We had the elements of destruction in the heart of the country. The leaders of a powerful party have been placing magazines under the temple since 1832. The autocrats of Europe knew that it would come, and looked upon its coming as the harbinger of our swift destruction. Years ago, we heard politicians express their belief in its coming, and aver their solemn conviction that at the end of the struggle some great military chieftain would assume the office of Dictator, and the people, worn out with war and disgusted with the weakness of a republican form of government, would take upon their shoulders the yoke of a despot. We have never had the slightest fears that such a movement could succeed in a country where there is so much intelligence and love of liberty. The more ignorant and debased portion of the community, such as now support the copperhead party, could easily be managed to hurrah for a monarchy—while the leading villains who are sympathizing with Valandigham and Jeff, would be glad to see any despotism inaugurated that would put them in office for life. Ignorance will doubt this now, even among some weak royalists, but it is as true as gospel nevertheless. All the ignorant rabble lack as a stimulus to making the effort, is a great military leader. The copperhead leaders, who hate liberty and covet an alliance with despotism, were hoping they had found their "coming man" in McClellan. They hoped to make him either a monarch, or, what is next