TO THE MEMORY OF EMMA ROSE.

BY HER MOTHER.

Farewell, darling ROSE-BUD, farewell
That we've cherished and loved O, so well;
The angels are calling—are waiting for thee,
In their love-arms unfolded triumphantly free
Thou may'st blossom in wisdom, nor sorrow shalt see
But in a true harmony dwell.

Our beautiful ROSE BUD farewell,
Till we come in thy sweet home to dwell;
The friends passed before thee, thy guardians shall
And leading thee on by the dear tie of love [prove
Should make us regret not thy passing above,
Where there tolls not a funeral bell.

Farewell precious JEWEL, farewell,
Lent to us for a brief happy spell;
No seasons of suffering are thine, or of sin,
But a crown from the purest immortals thou'lt win
And a life of bright promise they'll help thee begin,
Farewell angel ROSE-BUD, farewell.

Six of One and Half-a-dozen of the other.

"Now, dearest Fred," she softly said,
"You must abandon smoking;
It spoils your looks—and then your breath,
Indeed its most provoking.
Did God decree that man should be
A chimney flue regarded?
Then darling Fred, let it be said,
Tobacco you've discarded."

"How, well, my dear," said Fred, "I fear
That will not be so easy;
But like a man, I'll try a plan,
And do the best to please ye.
Did God intend that woman's limbs,
Such wondrous things should move,
As Bustles, Bloomers, Crinoline,
Or Hoops-de-dooden-do, love?

"But really," if—whif, whif, whif,—
"And mind you, I'm not joking,—
If you'll abandon Crinoline,
By Jove! I—I'll give up smoking."

[From the Herald of Reform.]

The Beauties of Tobacco.

BY AN OLD FRIEND AND LOVER OF THE WEED.

Having an idle hour, I propose turning my idleness to some account, by calling the attention of your readers to this very delicious weed, called tobacco. This exceedingly useful, neat and genteel herb, is a native of America. It was originally called by the Indians, petum; but the Spaniards named it tobacco, from tobago, an island in the West Indies, where it was found in great abundance. Being deeply impressed with its value and importance to individual comfort and health,—and its indispensableness to a gentleman who would commend himself to the favorable regard of the ladies. I feel that I can not do a better service than to point out some of its advantages, by way of commending it to the favorable embrace of all ages, of both sexes. I trust they will not deem me visionary in this for I not only speak from a long personal experience, but I have the testimony of its worth from poets and philosophers of note in ages past. More than a hundred years ago, a noble bard, inspired by the influence of tobacco, sung its praises in the following very pathetic strain:

"Poison that cures, a vapor that affords
Content more solid than the smile of lords;
Rest to the weary, to the hungry food;
The last kind refuge of the wise and good."

It is a remark frequently made, that there are but two animals in all the world, allowed by nature to use it, viz: man and the tobacco worm. And this is true. All other animals are prevented, by an instinct given them by their creator, from enjoying the distinguished privilege of eating this incomparable weed. Man, however, has improved upon the practice of the tobacco worm, and carried the luxury to a much greater extent; for he not only eats, but snuffs and smokes it. This is owing to the fact that he is endowed with the high and ennobling attribute of reason, an advantage denied the worm, or it would snuff and smoke it too—at least if its mouth was large enough for a smoke pipe, and its nose capacious enough for a respectable dust hole.

In speaking of its advantages, I must be brief. Its conduciveness to health; the quietness and steadiness it gives to the nerves, while under its influence—though they may weaken and tremble after that influence has passed away. But another quid, another smoke, or another snuff, and all will be set to rights again. But the reader undoubtedly understands this as well as I can tell him. If not, the physician, or some of your smoking, chewing, spitting and sneezing patrons, of both sexes, who have had, like myself, a long experience in this business, can inform him.

But, seriously, among the more prominent advantages by which tobacco is recommended, I shall confine myself to the following: First, it is exquisitely pleasant to the taste. One can hardly imagine the deliciousness of tobacco, especially one not accustomed to its use—(and that deliciousness is never entirely lost, even to those most adicted to it.) This is undoubtedly owing to the ingredients mixed with the original leaf in its manufacture,—such as copperas, negroes' toe nails, scrapings from his heel in pressing it down,—and when added to the scavingers proportion from hen roosts and hog pens, must render it unsurpassed in sweetness and delicacy. In the second place, it contributes very much to the outward appearance. It is true that a very distinguished man once said that a "cigar was a long twist of tobacco in the form of a pig's tail, with fire at one end and a fool sucking at the other." But who does not know that great men sometimes say very foolish things, of which the above remark is an instance. It is true that a cigar is a long twist of tobacco, in the form of a pig's tail; it is also true, when in use, it has fire at one end, (and so has a pipe;) but who does not know that so far from being a fool, he is a wise man who smokes the other end to his entire satisfaction. And what contributes more to the finish of a gentleman, or sooner elevates the boy of eight years old, to a man of forty, than a twist of tobacco, or an irish pipe in ones mouth—the smoke exhaling and rising in beautiful wreaths? Or what is more becoming than to have one side of the face swelled out to the size of a pullet's egg, with a quid! Or the jaws in perpetual motion, by grinding it, the juice hanging like jewels at the corner of the mouth, out of which spurts, now and then, a stream of fluid, such as no other animal has the distinguished honor of spurting! The reader must be fully aware of all this, especially some small boys in this community, who take pride in availing themselves of these advantages, by a free use of tobacco. I will not, therefore, enlarge.

Tobacco is also an excellent cosmetic. A person smells exceedingly agreeable when highly perfumed with this delectable weed. Not even that noted spotted gentlemen, of four legs, (long denominated as an essence peddler,) sends forth a sweeter fragrance on the balmy air. When chewed, it gives an excellent odor to the breath—scarcely equalled by the raven that feeds upon the excrescence of the slaughter-house. The young lady who condescends to entertain a young man, enjoys a peculiar delight while inhaling the sweet perfumes that emanate from his clothes and lungs—saturated with the juice and odor of this delicious weed. And should he venture so far as to steal a kiss from his lady love—a thing not altogether obsolete—she estimates it doubly precious when sealed with the sweet smelling savor of tobacco. Let no young man, then, when he contemplates seeking such interesting society endeavour to conceal the use of the weed by the cosmetics of art, as though he were ashamed of the practice; for it will send forth its odor in spite of his efforts, and his charmer will delight in its fragrance. And more than this, she will know of his coming by his smell, and have ample time to prepare for his reception—unless she should mistake him for the above four legged spotted gentleman.

Space forbids that I should name other advantages flowing from a use of tobacco. I will only say to your patrons that a new year has just commenced—an excellent time to review the past, and turn over a new leaf for the future; and if they heed the contents of this article, not according to the letter but according to the spirit, they will sing their resolutions in the following hymn, prepared expressly for their comfort:

Farewell tobacco, I mean it no joke,
No more will I chew thee, snuff thee or smoke;
I've harbored thy foulness quite long enough—
No more will I touch thee, thou foulest of stuff.

Two dollars a pound to pay is no shock,
To Mulhollan and Blanding, Parsons and Locke
For a weed so disgraceful, nauseous and foul;
Begone from my pocket, my mouth and my jowl.

.....The rebels need not suppose that their government, simply because it is "in a fix;" is a fixed fact.

.....The Charleston Mercury says "the Yankees love the nigger." The complexion of a large portion of the servile population of the South is a pretty strong indication that the chivalry "love the nigger."

.....Scene in an omnibus—Fat woman with fat baby: "Must get in!" French gentleman, "Impossible, Madame! (to the driver) you full." "You're a fool yourself. Squeeze in there."

Panama News—Great Fire.

Dates from Panama are to the 1st of January On the 26th December a very disastrous fire occurred. It broke out in the store of Lansburg & Branden. Everything on Front street, and in its rear, extending from the entrance of the city to the middle of the wharf was consumed. The loss is estimated at $135,000. The principal sufferers are Messrs. Call, Field, Cowan, Lansburg & Branden, and the Panama Railroad Company.

The Bishop of Panama was under arrest, for allowing funeral services in the Cathedral for Jules Abolardo, the late leader of the Conservative party.

On the 23d of December the military mutinied and marched under arms in a body to the Government house, demanding their pay, which was nearly one month overdue. The Government managed to borrow the necessary amount, and the soldiers returned to duty.

WHY is the letter N like a pig? because it makes a sty nasty.

CALIFORNIA SENATOR.—For the benefit of those of our readers who do not know the character and antecedents of the three leading candidates for the office of United States Senator from California, we copy the following extract from an editorial in Wade's Excelsior Weekly:

"The three leading candidates are well known. Phelps has served four years in the State Senate, and served acceptably, as his present position testifies. He is not a brilliant man, but eminently practical, possessing a large share of sound common sense, good judgment, and is reliable as a man and a politician. He is of the Republican school of politics, a warm supporter of the present Administration, and in favor of prosecuting the war to a successful termination. John Conness has for years been one of the leading politicians of the State. He was a firm friend of the late Senator Broderick, and, of course, is a representative of the Northern or anti chivalry wing of the late Democratic party. He supported the Union party last year and now stands on the same platform as the rival candidates. His Unionism is unquestionable, and he is bitterly opposed to by the anti-war Democrats, as the most zealous of the Simon-pure Republicans. He is a man of decided ability, an able debater, well versed in State and National politics, but is deficient in that ripe scholarship we would wish the man to possess who aspires to represent California in the United States Senate. A. A. Sargent is a young but rising man. He cannot have been eligible to the Senate more than three or four years, and if elected, will probably be the youngest man in that illustrious body. We knew him in '50 when he was a boy in appearance, and we did not then expect, at this early day, to chronicle the fact of his being a leading candidate for this exalted office. He went to Nevada and entered upon the business of mining, but though he took kindly to the pick and shovel, while the necessity existed, he laid these useful implements aside at the first good opportunity, and went into the printing office of the Nevada Journal. It soon appeared that he could furnish ideas as well as set them up, and the journeyman printer was soon installed in the editor's chair. We do not record this as his first rise in the world, but he was then in a position to test his ability. His career as editor was stormy but successful, being occasionally challenged to fight a duel, which gentle invitations he invariably declined through conscientious scruples. His physical courage is beyond question. We have seen him watch his opponent's hand while it played with the butt of a pistol, and his coolness was refreshing. As a speaker he is clear, forcible, but not eloquent. He argues logically, except when he goes out of his way to indulge in hi proclivity for sarcasm, an unfortunate habit that has made him many bitter enemies. He joined the Republican party in '56, when there was small inducement for an ambitious politician to identify himself with the avowed opponents of of slavery extension, and has clung to its fortunes through all its vicissitudes. He has a clear, active, restless mind; a remarkably retentive memory, is severely industrious and honorably ambitious. If elected will make an able and faithful Senator."
