So it always has been—so it always will be, and those who are disposed to weaken and destroy public morality, and public confidence, by speculating upon faith heretofore reposed in them, or by justifying such practices, will speedily discover that they have secured to themselves a harvest of shame and disgrace which will cliug to them as long as they live to curse the community which is so unfortunate as to number them among its members. Suppose the bankers of this city, or of San Francisco, with whom coin has been deposited, should pay the checks of their customers in legal tender, would there not be a great outburst of wrath and indignation at such rascality? But would that be any more deserving of condemnation than the conduct of those who last year, or at any time before the passage of the legal tender law, received coin for which they gave their notes, and which they now propose to pay by buying government paper at discount? We ask all men, debtors and creditors, to consider this question fairly and then give voice and effect to heir judgment, in such a manner that speculating rascals in any community may be compelled to act fairly and honorably. — Oregonian.
