pment of our institutions, I see no weight in the objection that it is new. Let us take he step farther, and declare a complete di- orce of church and State. The gentleman from Coose thinks this retion igneres religion and morality in the tata, and refers to the history of France, aring a certain zerolation there, as illus- mative of the calamities which befall a peo- le who pursue such a course. Mr. Chair- man, I do not read the history of France in the same light with the gentleman. It is ue, a public convention did there resolve at there was no God, and that death was a eteraal sleep. But this did not occur thill for centuries previously the public ind had become demoralized by a union of burch and state, promulgating and enforc- g forms rather than faith, conventionalisms ther than true morality. My reading and reflection teaches me that a Christian religion grew up, not only un- pported by law, but even against the laws of edicts of the governments where it orig- ated, and that its carly teachers always, ith mest acrupulous care, rejected tempo- l authority and honors; and the great cor- uption of that faith, as contended by the rotestant church, occurred in that beriod	and is entirely within this Territory. The gentleman from Coose thinks this petion igneres religion and morality in the tata, and refers to the history of France, aring a certain revolation there, as illus- mative of the calamities which befall a peo- le who pursue such a course. Mr. Chair- man, I do not read the history of France in the same light with the gentleman. It is us, a public convention did there resolve at there was no God, and that death was a eteraal sleep. But this did not occur thill for centuries previously the public ind had become demoralized by a union of burch and state, promulgating and enforc- g forms rather than faith, conventionalisms ther than true morality. My reading and reflection teaches me that the Christian religion grew up, not only un- pported by law, but even against the laws and edicts of the governments where it orig- ated, and that its carly teachers always, it meets scrupulous care, rejected tempo- al authority and honors; and the great cor- uption of that faith, as contended by the rotestant church, occurred in that period the middle ages, when there was a union political and ecclesiastical authorities. Our government is based upon obsolute	and is entirely within this Territory. The "Mey is said to contain much excellent land, and abounds with rich coal beds. THEATRICA.—The talented "Chapman Family" have been playing in this place during the past week, to respectable houses. On Thursday evening was produced Kotze- bue's thrilling drama of "The Stranger," the part of Mrs. Haller being ably sustained by Mrs. Chapman who is certainly an aetress of great versatility. On Friday evening the great moral drama of "Rosina Meadows, or the Rone of Boston," was performed. This is a play of much interest, and when first produced in Boston was played over one hundred consecutive nights to immense andiences. On Saturday evening, the ever- popular play of "The Lady of Lyons" was admirably performed to an appreciative an- dience, Mrs. Chapman appearing, of course, as Pauline. The dancing of Miss Chapman elicited much applause, and the comic singing of her "parient" is indeed inimitable.	DIED. In this city, on the 1st inst. of flux, ATHALIA Isa- prone, daughter of A. pment of our institutions, I see no weight in the objection that it is new. Let us take he step farther, and declare a complete di- orce of church and State. The gentleman from Coose thinks this section igneres religion and morality in the tata, and refers to the history of France, aring a certain revolution there, as illus- mitire of the calamities which befall a peo- le who pursue such a course. Mr. Chair- an, I do not read the history of France in the there was no God, and that death was a certail sleep. But this did not occur at there was no God, and that death was a cereal sleep. But this did not occur at there was no God, and that death was a cereal sleep. But this did not occur at there was no God, and that death was a cereal sleep. On Thursday evening was produced Kotze- bue's thrilling drama of "The Stranger," the part of Mrs. Haller being ably sustained by Mrs. Chapman who is certainly an aetress of great versatility. On Friday evening the great moral drama of "Rosina Meadows, or the Rone of Boston," was performed. This is a play of much interest, and when first produced in Boston was played over one hundred consecutive nights to immense andiences. On Saturday evening, the ever- popular play of "The Lady of Lyons" was admirably performed to an appreciative au- dience, Mrs. Chapman appearing, of course, as Pauline. The dancing of Miss Chapman elicited much applause, and the comic singing of her "parient" is indeed inimitable. The gentleman from Coose thinks this fection igneres religion and morality in the tata, and refers to the history of France, aring a certain revolation there, as illus- native of the calamities which befall a peo- le who pursue such a course. Mr. Chair- an, I do not read the history of France in the same light with the gentleman. It is there was no God, and that death was a certail sleep. But this did not occur all for centuries previously the public ind had become demoralized by a union of merch and state, promulgating and enforc- g forms rather than faith, conventionalisms ther than true morality. My reading and reflection teaches me that the Christian religion grew up, not only un- ported by law, but even against the laws and edicts of the governments where it orig- ated, and that its carly teachers always, ith most scrupulous care, rejected tempo- al sutherity and honors; and the great cor- option of that faith, as contended by the rotestant church, occurred in that period the middle ages, when there was a union political and ecclesiastical authorities. Our government is based upon absolute sedom of conscience, guaranteeing full tol- ation and protection of religions faith, but the same time witholding State patron- ge and political place from the churches.	and is entirely within this Territory. On Thursday evening was produced Kotze- bue's thrilling drama of "The Stranger," the part of Mrs. Haller being ably sustained by Mrs. Chapman who is certainly an aetress of great versatility. On Friday evening the great moral drama of "Rosina Meadows, or the Rone of Boston," was performed. This is a play of much interest, and when first produced in Boston was played over one hundred consecutive nights to immense andiences. On Saturday evening, the ever- popular play of "The Lady of Lyons" was admirably performed to an appreciative an- dience, Mrs. Chapman appearing, of course, as Pauline. pment of our institutions, I see no weight in the objection that it is new. Let us take the step father, and declare a complete di- orce of church and State. The gentleman from Coose thinks this retion igneres religion and morality in the tata, and refers to the history of France, aring a certain revolation there, as illus- mative of the calamities which befall a peo- te who pursue such a course. Mr. Chair- man, I do not read the history of France in the same light with the gentlemas. It is us, a public convention did there resolve at there was no God, and that death was a eteraal sleep. But this did not occur at there was no God, and that death was a eteraal sleep. But this did not occur at there was no God, and that death was a eteraal sleep. But this did not occur at there was no God, and that death was a eteraal sleep. But this did not occur at there was no God, and that death was a eteraal sleep. But this did not occur at there was no God, and that death was a eteraal sleep. But this did not occur at the docouve demoralized by a union of barch and state, promalgating and enforc- g forms rather than faith, conventionalisms ther than true morality. My reading and reflection teaches me that a Christian religion grew up, not only un- ported by law, but even against the laws and edicts of the governments where it orig- ated, and that its carly teachers always, it mest scrupalous care, rejected tempo- al authority aud honors; and the great cor- option of that faith, as contended by the rotestant church, occurred in that period the middle ages, when there was a union political and ecclesiastical authorities. Our government is based upon absolute eedom of conscience, guaranteeing full tol- ation and protection of religious faith, but the same time witholding State patron- po and political piace from the churches. Mr. DEADY said—I do not intend to be formed in my vote upon this question by y threats that if this or that provision is is not inserted in the constitution a por- on of the people will become prejudiced	and is entirely within this Territory. The "May is said to contain much excellent land, and abounds with rich coal beds. THEATRICA.—The talented "Chapman Family" have been playing in this place during the past week, to respectable houses. On Thursday evening was produced Kotze- bue's thrilling drama of "The Stranger," the part of Mrs. Haller being ably sustained by Mrs. Chapman who is certainly an actress of great versatility. On Friday evening the great moral drama of "Rosina Meadows, or the Rone of Boston," was performed. This is a play of much interest, and when first produced in Boston was played over one hundred consecutive nights to immense andiences. On Saturday evening, the ever- popular play of "The Lady of Lyons" was admirably performed to an appreciative an- dience, Mrs. Chapman appearing, of course, as Pauline. The dancing of Miss Chapman elicited much applause, and the comic singing of her "parient" is indeed inimitable.
