It will be about as easy to clear out the river as to keep this road in repair between Pioneer and Elk cities. From here down, the river gradually widens to Oyster-ville, the water never getting lower than five feet. The mountains get lower, but rougher, pitching abruptly down to the tide hands,—the "gentle slopes" so steep that a man can hardly stand up on them—"table lands," the tops of steep moun-tains—and the whole country clear to the coast covered with the "avrillest" amount of dead spruce, fir, and brash—from Oysterville to Beach mountains ditto—the water getting wider, the

There are 20 feet of water at average tide on the bar. The people here subsist by cystering, or from travelers, and cannot go any place except by wa-ter. I found but one democrat in the place, and they tell me all along that democrats are won-drous scarce. That is one thing they boast of. This is no place for saw mills, as there will never be any market outside for knotty spruce and fir lumber, and it dead several years at that. There is scarcely any green timber.
