We note that the Oregonian with its specific instances where negroes have attained to prominence in one directhat there was nothing good in the negro and that it was a waste of time and effort to give him a chance to compete with the other races of the earth. There is one other thing that we can think of that is to cease to use sensational head lines and placing on the front pages reports of crimes committed and assumed to have been committed by negroes while in the same issues very often there are several similar accounts of like breaches of the law by white men which are passed over with a little obscure notice of three or four lines of very small type. All the negro asks is that the same treatment be accorded him that is accorded to other men. A negro criminal is neither better nor worse than one whose skin is white and no other agency can do more in moulding public opinion in this matter than the
