

A SNAP FOR PORTLAND

PORT TOWNSEND SHUT OUT AT FOOTBALL, 28 TO 0.

A Fine Game, in Which Superior Work Brings Victory to the Home Team—Lost Honors Retrieved.

Excellent interference, good team work and brilliant individual play, enabled the Portland Amateur Athletic Club football eleven to literally wipe up the ground with the Port Townsend Athletic Association players on the Multnomah field yesterday.

Full-back Pearson En Route for a Goal.

the day in individual play. The former made a clean run of 60 yards for a touchdown, and the latter went ahead of his interference for a beautiful run of 25 yards. These runs and the Portland's interference were the features of the game.

Portland has rarely experienced such a furor of football enthusiasm as it did yesterday. The atmosphere seemed to be surcharged with it, and the public generally felt its influence.

With their horns, cowbells, buzzes and other ear-torturing instruments, were wandering around the streets all morning, radiant in ribbons, streamers and big chrysanthemums of old gold and blue.

The Mascot Becomes Enthusiastic.

ful sounds by young men of extraordinary loud power. The remainder of the line was made up of bands of "rooters," and yelling clubmen, to the number of several hundred. The procession first marched to the Portland hotel, where the visiting clubmen were taken in with a roaring reception.

grand stand was packed with excited femininity. Orange and blue were the prevailing colors, although there was a good showing of the Multnomah scarlet and white. The bleachers and side lines were, of course, lined with the cranks, who yelled and cheered until they could yell and cheer no more.

Portland won the toss and the ball, and Port Townsend chose to defend the south goal. The visitors quickly spread over the muddy field, while the home team formed on the center line. Full-back Pearson put the ball in play with a kick that sent it 20 yards into the enemy's territory. Leighton secured it, but was downed by the Portland rushers before he could do more.

With the ball on their five-yard line, the Port Townsends blocked hard, and the first down resulted in no gain. Then Lasswell went around the left end, with interference that the visitors seemed unable to cope with, crossed the goal line near the southeast corner of the field, and, almost doubling in his tracks, fell on the ball, leading the goal posts. But he unluckily let the slippery pigskin escape from his grasp, and the visitors securing the ball, claimed a touchdown.

Cheer after cheer greeted the home team as it returned to the north end of the field, the "rooters" on the side line making an awful din. Nothing daunted, the Port Townsends formed on the rush line, and Leighton kicked off for 20 yards. The Portlanders secured the ball, and McNamer and Washburn worked the ends for small gains, finally forcing the ball into touch on Port Townsend's 25-yard line.

The sound players made 20 yards on the kick-off, and then blocked so hard that they soon recovered the ball on downs. Again with the Harvard interference, Thompson was sent around Tongue's end for 10 yards, bringing the ball to the nearest point it ever came to Portland's goal. Again Cobb tried Portland's tackles and center, but only to lose the ball on downs.

At about once the pigskin was passed to Pearson for a punt of 20 yards, followed so closely by Portland's backs that the visitors lost it in their own territory.

Both sides determined. The second half opened with both teams fresh and aggressive. Hudson kicked off for the visitors for a gain of 25 yards, five of which were recovered by McNamer, who stopped the pigskin. Pearson punted for 15 yards, and McNamer fell on the ball in a fumble. But the Portlanders lost it a minute later on a general fumble. It was Portland's ball on downs, with 25 yards added for a foul tackle by Lasswell. Then Lasswell, who had been "giving the boys a chance" broke through between Lawrence and Walther on the second down for a gain of 15 yards, carrying the spheroid to the Port Townsend's 15-yard line. Hudson punted for 20 yards to Lasswell's arms. Pearson carried the ball back 10 yards into touch. Lasswell bucked the line, but was forced back five yards. He tried it again with the aid of Pearson and Charlie Davey, this time for a gain of five yards. Ten yards more in two downs were gained by the same style of line-bucking, and it commenced to look as if the Port Townsend's line was made of paper.

Hudson's lengthy right limb started the ball again from center-field, and sent it 25 yards into Portland territory. Charlie Davey made a star catch, and so effectively did his followers block, that he carried the spheroid 15 yards, and the score stood: Portland, 15; Port Townsend, 0.

THE VISITORS VERY SLOW. Port Townsend lined up much slower than ever, and, as usual, Hudson kicked off, this time for a gain of 20 yards. Tongue made several minutes' rest, recovered his breath. It was a gain of 65 yards, a beautiful run, and the grandstand, bleachers and side lines shouted until they were hoarse.

The Port Townsends played the superior game of football, as Captain De Lanty is willing to admit. Their interference was the best that has been seen here this season, and their team work showed the result of close practice along the lines of the very latest tactics. Lasswell proved his ability as a runner, and Hudson as a punter.

The Port Townsends played an old-fashioned game. They had the ball so infrequently that they were forced to play the old style of play on aggressive play. They were altogether unable to cope with the Portland's interference, and they complained very much of the mud. They were slow in getting into the game, and they were quiet while the curtain was up. The boxes were trimmed with the colors of the respective clubs, and looked very pretty, while most of the performers and patrons of the house were decorated with ribbons and chrysanthemums.

When kept entirely from the drug during a term of a few months, morphine devotees leave the jail fat and plump, only to return, if recommended a little later for another offense, the same living skeleton as before. Because of the incapacity of the jail, a supply of the drug has to be kept on hand constantly by the jailer, as, in the worst cases, a little of the poison has to be administered to keep the fiends from becoming stark mad.

NEW YERRS AT THE JAIL A TALK ON OYSTERS.

No unusual event marked New Year's day at the county jail. Tuesday regular visiting day, and it was observed as usual. Being a holiday, the friends of the prisoners naturally all found time to call, and a small package from each, containing a card and some oysters brought from the East, while others prefer the small or native oyster. A man who has been handling and opening oysters for this market for many years, was asked yesterday which kind of oyster was in best demand here. He said: "A large class of customers want oysters as large and fat looking as possible; so dealers give them this appearance by putting them into fresh water for a time. Another class, comprising nearly all the Americans, do not want oysters after they have been freshened, as they say the flavor is then gone. It is all a matter of taste. To my mind, the oyster directly from salt water, in its natural liquor, has a much more delicate flavor than the one which has been put into fresh water. The best oysters on this coast, in my opinion, come from Netarts and Samish bays. The general preference is, however, given to the large George oyster, which comes from Oyster Bay, below Olympia; but the Shoalwater-bay oyster has a delicate flavor of them all. In regard to Eastern transplanted oysters, there is a great difference in the way that they are served on the shell. To make them look large they are opened on the flat shell, but by opening them on the deep shell they retain their liquor, which is the best part of the oyster and suits the epicurean taste the best. The popular oyster of today comes upon the market small, plump, and of a fair complexion. There are a few, however, who claim that unless the oyster leaves its shell somewhat lank and lean, with a brownish tint, that indicates a life spent in salt sea water, it is flavored, and letting it die there where it will absorb a large quantity of fresh water. The proper and most natural way is to open the oyster into a bowl, using no fresh water at all, but letting the oyster die in its own liquor. All first-class oystermen wash the oysters before opening them, thus removing all shells and grit. Bloating oysters used to be in most demand, but now oysters in their natural liquor are preferred. The secret of the hat oyster business is using oysters in their natural state."

A Highwayman Arrested. Sheriff H. P. Ford, of Washington county, returned home yesterday, having in his custody Hugh George, arrested at Seattle for attempted highway robbery. Some months ago the home of a German farmer named Lipschitz, living two miles from Hillsboro, was destroyed by fire, and George was given a contract to build another house. It is believed that Lipschitz had received $2000 insurance money, and one night two masked men held up the farmer and his wife with guns. One of the men made Mrs. Lipschitz hold up the money, and that he knew the house, while his companion guarded the other members of the family. The robbers got only $10, and went away. Mrs. Lipschitz had a large amount of money concealed in her bedroom all the time she was made to accompany the thief in his search for the money. The family positively identify George as one of the men, but so far the other has not become known.
