NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—It was a duli and un-niteresting day on the stock exchange, and the changes to prices on the day's transactions are insignificant, except in the case of a few spe-cialities. The commission brazes complained of the absence of orders, and their trade was light. The prevailing tone was depressing. At the opening the market was generally firm, with Louisville & Nashville and Delaware & Hudson nent. During the second hour Sogar was sold down $5 per cent, and a few other stocks moved back, including Iowa Central preferred, which fell of 1 per cent. Wheeling & Lake Erie pre-ferred broke 2½, and there was a very general decline of a fraction, except in 8t. Paul & Duluth, which rose 2½. CURIOSITY OF LUNACY. Recurrence of Manin, by Which the Patient Lives Three Lives. There is a special form of mental disease, first described in France, whose definite character is given to it by its periodicity, and hence it is called folle circulaire, says the Hospital. In it there are three sections of the mental circle that the patient moves in, viz: elevation, depression and sanity, and in this round he spends his life, passing out of one into the other, for it is, when fully established, a very incurable disease.

The patient takes an attack of mania, during which he is joyous, resiless, troublesome, extravagant, and often icious. He eats voraciously, sleeps little and never seems to tire. His temperature is a degree or so above the normal, his eye is bright and glistening, he is enninished self-control

This lasts for a few weeks, or a few months more commonly, and then he passes sometimes rather suddenly into a condition of depression, during which he is sluggish, dull, looking differently, fearful, unreliant, sedentary in habits. This state will last a few weeks or months, and the patient will brighten up into what seems a recovery, and is, to all in-tents and purposes, in his normal state. This, again, lasts for a few weeks or months, and he gradually gets morbidly elevated minute mental phase and habit he did at first; depression follows as before, and then sanity; and this round of three states of feeling, of intellect, of volition and nutrition goes on, circle after circle, till the patient dies. He lives three lives.

HOW THE UAST OF THE SEMINOLES FELL.

His Antagonist Was Tigertail, Creek Chieftain-Their Tribes Were Hereditary Enemies.

From the earliest times the Floridian eninsula has possessed a sort of weird ascination for the curious and adventurous. It has been a sort of terra in-Innumerable theories co its formation, countless legends relative to its strange natural phenomena and al sorts of curious facts regarding its his tory have been handed down by romancers, dreamed by the visionary, and un earthed by the antiquaries. And, still, from Okeechobee through the drear and desert Everglades to Cape Sable, the Uitima Thule, there extends a weird, un-canny, desert waste, uninhabited and un-inhabitable. Along about the 27th parallel, extending irreguarly, often as far as the 3th, is that dismal country known as "The Big Cypress," because it is a trypress swamp whose gloom overshadows the lower half of the peninsula from the sand dunes of the Atlantic to the mangrove tangles of the guif.

It is a vast, interminable, almost impenetrable, solitations.

The surface of the earth is so treacherous that the hardy adventurer knows not, in that never-ceasing twilight, whether his next step will land him to a safe and sure footing, or plunge him into the depths of some inextricable quagmire.

After the massacre of Major Dale and his men, the Seminoles retired to the fastof this grim, natural fortress nesses of this grim, natural sortions where they might remain unmolested by man, and only subject to the dangers of the inferior creation. After the rethe inferior creation. After the refollowers to the Far West, there remained: two formidable foes, says the Detroit Free Press. One was Billy, surnamed Bowegs, on account of his short stature and natural deformity, and old King Mico. Mico was hereditary chief of the Clan Micosookee, one of the proudest of the petty tribes of the Creek nation. Having all the natural love for the fatherland that ever enlivened the bosom of a Scot-tish chief, he refused to emigrate, and with his remnant of a tribe, he left the rich corn lands of the upper peninsula, with the game-filled forests, and fled southward Billy Bowlegs, the indomitable chief of the Seminoles, was driven by General Floyd from his swamp castle in Okeefenokee and retreated toward the Big Cy press, after a defense that was as laud-able as that of any ancient Bavarian baron, fleeing after an unsuccessful con test with the conquering hordes from the old, and died as he had lived, unconquered and unconquerable. He left his kingly heritage to his son, Tigertail, and when Billy Bowlegs died, shortly after, he be queathed his "stump" to his son Chipco.

"Seminole," euphonious as it sounds, means renegade, or a nation made up of fugitives. It was perfectly natural that these young chieftains could not share peaceably the empire of the Everglades, with the regular income of the hunting grounds and the perquisites of predator warfare. So they became envious and ealous, and the result was an open rupture. The forces of Chipco were large than those of [Tigertail, and, although the vast wilderness of that lonely land offered ample freedom for two shattered cians, still they could not remain long in unity. There were imbuscades and re-Creek warrior was found that strange de vice, tattooed after the manner of their Carlb neighbors, of the Seminole avengers. Not long after Chipco died, leaving his two sons, Billy Buster and Billy Har-ney, as his joint heirs. The latter was General Harney, the Indian fighter, for whom Chipco had a supreme regard, having met him in several fights, and having finally surrendered to his prowess after a desperate encounter. I saw Billy Buster shortly afterward at Fort Meade. He was a confirmed drunk-ard, and was so intoxicated at the time that he was absolutely helpless. He had a buckskin bag of gold belted under his hunting shirt, and this becoming known, a white desperado involved him in a difculty, inveloled him into the neighborng woods, stabbed him to the heart and ed with his ill-gotten gains.

It was at that time that ten of the principal men of the remnant of the Sem-nole tribe undertook the journey to Washington to obtain redress, but they were compelled to retrace their steps af-ter having reached the—to them— impar-sable barried of the Tennessee moun-

Billy Harney was now sole chief. He was as fine a specimen of physical man-hood as ever trod the soil of Florida. Over six feet, there was not an ounce of superflows flesh to mar the exquisite sym-metry of his physique, and his features were of that haughty, eagle-like cast that all the world over denotes the man accus-tomed to command. He had a mild and senignant eve which could flash like the glittering eye of an angry serpent when he was angered or insulted. I have seen him walk the streets of Fort Meade and other towns along the border, dressed in all his barbaric regalla, and have often thought, with others, that he was the typical Seminole chief of story-book lore.

dear to our memory. Young Tigertail was different. He was n form and feature very much the protoype of his grandfather, old Mico, daunt-ess of spirit and proud of his savage heritage. He was very dark, sinewy, but caunt, and his countenance was morose perate moods. He had never forgotten th wrongs done his tribe by the whites, and he had never forgiven the descendants of Billy Bowlegs, the "Attila" of the

One morning shortly after my arrival at the little trading post, Tigertail came stalking into the principal hotel with two of his negro sinves, which he still kept in spite of the emancipation proclamation, and wenisor haunches, to barter for the merchandi and liquor kept at the store. I watched them with a good deal of interest as they bargained with the dealer in their wild patois, combined with suggestive grunts the more was his ill-humor apparent, but we all attributed the fact to some trivial ccident during the long journey from his

Silently they lunged, parried, leaped aside, co and then a spurt of blood indicated that one or the other had got a severe blow. Suddenly Billy Harney drew back, quivering like a rattlesnake, and, summe all his strength in his bronzed muscles he made a leap forward, aiming at the throat of his antagonist, but the stooped and tripped the maddened chief and at the same time buried his knife in his exposed breast, wrenching it around until the breast was almost cloven in twain. The dying chief partially raised his head, uttered half a sentence of some wild death song, closed his eyes, opened them feebly, and then, with a smile on his lips, straightened his limbs His companion fled at the first onslaught presumably for assistance, and the two slaves had secreted themselves in the

DISCOVERED BY A WOMAN Richest Found in the Black Hills.

One day during the latter part of last June, William Franklin and his daughter, Mrs. Frank Stone, happened to stroll up a gulch in Pennington county, S. D., and, stopping to rest, Mrs. Stone idly broke in break, upon examination, showed particles of gold, says the St. Paul Pic neer Press. A little digging exposed of the rock, which, upon being par proved very rich. Everybody in the vicin ity, having nothing to do, visited the spot and for pastime were allowed to dig out some of the rock and pan out the gold. As every man in that vicinity was in had condition financially and without other means for raising the money for the proper celebration of the approaching Fourth of July, quite an opening was made and the proceeds devoted to that

From this little incident dates the dis

covery of gold in the Holy Terror mine, which from day to day causes greater excitement in mining circles. With five stamps the owners recently pounded out 3500 in gold in 10 hours. Much of the ore runs $500 to the ton. Persistent prospecting revealed no other place where the vein came to the surface, save this one spot, which has been walked over every day for years. Mr. Franklin took in T. C. Blair as his partner, and a shaft was begun, the ore taken out being treated in the Keystone mill, and returned value much above the expense of sinking the shaft When the shaft reached a depth of 40 feet, developing a well-defined vein, which steadily improved in width and value as depth was gained, the owners made an arrangement with J. J. Fayel and Albert Amesbury by which they agreed to erect a stamp mill on the property, in consideration of a half interest in the mine. A five-stamp mill with an engine capacity of 19 stamps or more was quickly built at a cost of about $5000 and put in operation about three weeks ago. While the mill was being built, men were employed to run drifts north and south from the shaft at a depth of 40 feet, while sinking was pushed in the shaft. Most of the ore milled has been taken from these drifts The vein consists of marvelously rich ore, averaging 16 inches on one wall, with about two feet of low-grade ore filling the remainder of the vein. The richness of this ore streak must be seen to be believed. Nuggets of solid gold from one to two pennyweights to five ounces in weight are found snugly tucked away, waiting to be brought to light, while large pieces of quartz are so bound with gold that the parts hang together when broken with a

The first clean-up was made in the new mill after a run of 26 hours. sult was a retort weighing a little over 166 ounces from 30 tons of ore taken from the mine. The second run of 24 hours gave a retort weighing 173 ounces, and a third run of 25 hours gave 200 ounces. These three retorts are worth 116,000, and were all produced by a five-stamp mill and taken to the Harney Peak bank, at Hill City, for shipment, inside of one week from the start. The shaft has now reconded a depth of 60 feet and 12000-5-room house and 1 lot, woodlawn. has now reached a depth of 60 feet, and shows a larger and richer body of ore than ever. Parties who have recently visited the mine report that it is probably the richest ever discovered in the Black Hills.
