

TALES OF MR. M'BRIDE

OLD FRIENDS TELL OF THE SENATOR'S EARLY DAYS.

How He Found What Was in a Dynamite Cap—A Thrilling Experience at College.

"Physically unlovely, but politically the luckiest of men," was one of the most striking of the many remarks heard during the past two days concerning United States Senator-elect McBride. Among all the remarks, however, not an unfriendly word has yet been spoken. "O, yes, I know George McBride," says every one, "and I know what was in him before he came to the Senate."

Among others who chatted about the newly elected senator was W. H. Adams. "Do I know George McBride?" said Judge Adams. "I ought to. We went to school together. Once since he became secretary of state, some one asked him if he knew me. 'Well, I should think so,' said he; 'we grew up in the same potato hill.' Our fathers each owned a section of land adjoining, and they lived together in the same cabin in '48 and '49. Both farms are now owned by Captain R. S. Thompson. Dr. McBride had an immense family; there were 14 boys and girls, all told, and George was the youngest. The youngest is now probably the smartest, you know; but the whole family was very bright, and all but one were witty. The only one not much given to joking was a studious boy, who is now filling some very honorable position in the East, I believe. George was always good-natured, and particularly liberal. Money was never an object with him, and acquisitiveness was not among his characteristics."

"Of course, I would like to have seen a democratic senator elected, had it been possible, but as it was not, I am pleased to see George McBride get in as a main in the state. I have known him all my life, and have a very high regard for him. The only point upon which there has been a difference between us is in a political one; he is a republican and I am a democrat. We decided long since to let that point remain undebated, and agreed each to make no attempt to convince the other. He is a man whose admirable qualities and manner have made a friend of everybody he ever met. Never having engaged in politics, he has made none of those enemies inevitable to a man who pushes an active political campaign. He would undoubtedly have made a first-class stump speaker, had it not been for his physical weakness. But he has never tried to bank on his physical misfortune.

"Politically, he has always been lucky. Immediately after his election to the legislature he was made speaker of the house. When he was first nominated for secretary of state, it was on personal popularity and against the state of the convention. He received the nomination for the second term as a matter of course, and now he happened to be the available man for the senatorship, and he got it. He may not have been thought of as the last minute, though there was hardly a prominent republican in the state who had not been mentioned at some time or other during the session. Even Louis McBride's excessive modesty did not prevent him from saying that the only solution of the senatorial difficulty was the election of Louis Brice."

"Well, George McBride deserves his success. Probably the best index to the character of the man is that he did not take to his bed as an invalid and resign himself to be cared for and supported by his relatives and friends; instead, in the face of infirmities that would have rendered most men useless to themselves and the world, he has made for himself his present proud place in the world."

Not many anecdotes are told of the senator-elect. "He is not an anecdotal man," said Judge L. L. McArthur, "but he is a gentleman, and comes of good stock. Many of his family have held, or are holding, positions of honor, and the judge proceeded to give Mr. McBride's pedigree in a manner that demonstrated his familiarity with the history of the McBride family. As to his physical weakness, what of that? It is an accident, and it will never prevent him from making a good senator. He may not be physically robust, but his brain is O. K. These men, Theodore Tilton, and the house at one of the most critical times in the country's history, yet lame and sickly. Alexander Stephens was a man of exceedingly frail body, with Oliver Morton was paralyzed from the waist down. McBride's brains are all right, and I am glad he was elected."

"George McBride was always a reckless fellow," said a man who has known him for many years, "and yet he was not, in one way. For example, he would never pull a gun after him through a fence; he would snap a pistol at any one under the impression it wasn't loaded." When he was 14 or 15 he happened to get a powder cartridge to see what was in it. It exploded, and he was thereafter minus a finger. But the actual cause of an injury which affected him permanently was a rock driving him, as usual, when he was less driver. It happened this way: He was returning to St. Helena from a hunting trip in the mountains. He was a good shot and fond of hunting, and generally went off alone in a one-horse dog cart, in which he frequently drove at breakneck speed, over all sorts of rough roads. Well, it was late on a dark night, as he was returning from this particular trip, driving rapidly, as usual, when he went slap against a stump. He was thrown out, and sustained a very serious injury to the knee, an injury very much worse than half a dozen broken ribs. The knee never improved to any extent, until he went East, not long since, and had it treated by eminent doctors, who generally went off about in a one-horse dog cart. He now gets about fairly well with a cane.

"It is not an easy matter to recall many anecdotes of George. His life, you see, has been comparatively uneventful. He has never married. But he was always a genial, generous and companionable man. Had his health permitted he would have been a very active man. He came of a rugged, active stock. His father, old Dr. McBride, was once a Kentucky slave-owner and a planter on a large scale, but the doctor awoke to a realizing sense of the iniquity of slavery, and became an ardent abolitionist as ever lived. The doctor, I believe, liberated all his slaves before coming West."

There was one economic measure passed by the recent legislature, and approved yesterday morning by Governor Lord, that will result in a great saving to the taxpayers of Multnomah county. When senate bill No. 40, introduced by McGinn, and passed by the senate, reached the house, a vigorous onslaught was made upon it by the tax-payers, who warned the lobby. County officials from Multnomah were particularly active in efforts to defeat the bill, which cut down their fat official fees, and they succeeded. Elated with their success, they paid no notice to senate bill 161, introduced by Butler of Polk county. As originally introduced, Senator Butler's bill provided for the fixing of fees and compensation of sheriffs in the various counties of the state. Before it was placed on third reading in the senate, the Multnomah delegation caused to be inserted an amendment that in counties having more than 25,000 population the county court should let by contract to the lowest responsible bidder the boarding of all prisoners confined in the county jail. Another amendment secured by the Multnomah delegation to the bill was one requiring the state of Oregon to pay to the treasurers of counties having more than 25,000 population all fees allowed for the transportation and conveyance of insane and idiotic persons to the asylum, and all convicts to the penitentiary from those counties, the sheriff or other representative of such county to be allowed only his actual expenses after they had been fully verified. A third amendment, which was also accepted and made part of the bill, was one providing that in all counties of 25,000 or more population it should be lawful for the sheriff to collect mileage in all civil cases, but he should not be allowed any in criminal and execution proceedings.

This is the one economic measure, and the only one, that the Multnomah delegation succeeded in passing; but this little will save to the taxpayers several thousand dollars.

The conveyance of prisoners to the penitentiary and insane persons to the asylum has always been a profitable source of income to the sheriff of Multnomah county. During the years past, as high as $2,500 per annum has been received by the sheriff for hack hire from the courthouse to the train and a similar amount from the station at Salem to extra fees for guards mounted in the aggregate, for the transportation of some prisoners, to more than sufficient to make a first-class trip to San Francisco and return.

In the matter of prisoners' board for inmates of the county jail, competition for the contract will bring the cost of meals down to a minimum price. The city pays only 5 cents a meal for prisoners confined in the central station, and while this prohibits luxuries being served, wholesome, plain food, as a rule, is furnished. It now costs the taxpayers a considerable sum to feed prisoners held in confinement, and the contract system is expected to materially cut down the expense.

An emergency clause having been attached to Senator Butler's bill, it goes into effect immediately upon receiving the signature of the governor yesterday. A certified copy of the bill will be received here today, and furnished the county court for its guidance.

Notwithstanding the emoluments of Sheriff Sears' office are curtailed by the new law, he will doubtless be partly comforted to know that he $500 this year, and he is allowed one deputy at a salary of $1800, and such others as the county court may allow him at salaries not to exceed $1200 each.

ZE GAY CAPTAIN IS GONE

Riding-Master Dilhan and Wife Leave, to the Sorrow of Creditors.

Captain Joseph Dilhan, erstwhile director of the Portland Riding Academy, and for three years past the undisputed authority in equestrian matters, is missing, and circumstances would seem to indicate that he is compelled himself to be absent from the city, because of some pressing creditors. The captain, a charming fellow, has been a resident of the city for some time, and has been a very successful horseman, and his riding, on horses trained by heretofore, has been the admiration of the Portland public.

The captain was somewhat of a character himself, and there is scarcely a man in the city who does not know him. He was without fear, and he was not familiar with his corodory breeches, riding boots and spurs, and his general equestrian air. He is a Frenchman, and while in this city posed as an ex-officer of the French army, he certainly was not of the English language, but certainly he was a Frenchman, and he made the most of it. Captain Dilhan came to Portland nearly three years ago. He was without fear, and he was not familiar with his corodory breeches, riding boots and spurs, and his general equestrian air. He is a Frenchman, and while in this city posed as an ex-officer of the French army, he certainly was not of the English language, but certainly he was a Frenchman, and he made the most of it.

About the time Captain Dilhan came to Portland, some of the leaders of the best society were very anxious to learn to ride properly, and they eagerly accepted a proposition from the man who was known as the "Ze Gay Captain." The riding academy was then incorporated, and a fine riding ring and stables put up at Nineteenth and Northrup streets. Captain Dilhan was installed as the director of the academy. So long as he continued his attention to the affairs of the riding ring, he gave great satisfaction, and many of the most graceful riders in the city today, both ladies and gentlemen, owe their entire knowledge of the equestrian art to the captain. But business ability Captain Dilhan seemed to have none. He seemed to have no knowledge of the value of an American dollar, and the result was that the academy, under his management, did not prosper, and a few months ago he was relieved of his position, but retained as riding master on a salary. The captain lived well during his stay in the city, and always entertained his friends in style. Last Tuesday morning Captain Dilhan came to the stable at the usual hour, and asked that his horse—the only one he owned—be saddled. He had some words with the present director, Mr. K. K. over a bill of $150 he owed for the board of his horse, and then rode away. He never came back. It was ascertained that he disposed of his horse and saddle that same day, and that he had taken the train for San Francisco. Madame Dilhan was missing the following day. Both leave creditors to mourn their absence, but for how large an amount in the aggregate cannot now be ascertained. That the academy cannot now be ascertained. That the academy cannot now be ascertained. That the academy cannot now be ascertained.

Of Madame Dilhan, or "the madam," as she is known about the academy, much might be said. She is a French woman, and she is a handsome French woman, and she speaks English perfectly. But she had a will of her own, and a temper that she evidently did not seem to control. It is said that she sometimes made things lively about the academy, no matter who might be present, and the management, in order to avoid a scene, agreed to pay

A BLOW AT MR. SEARS

A NEW LAW MATERIALLY CURTAILS SHERIFF'S EMOLUMENTS.

Board of Prisoners to Be Let by Contract—No Soft Soap in Transporting Persons to Salem.
