NO OSTRICH RACE.

Colonel Bryan's Profound Regard for the "Consent of the Governed,"

New York Tribune.

We knew it. There was no truth in the report that Mr. Bryan and ex-Governor Hogg, of Texas, had decided to race each other mounted on two able-bodied os-triches which the ex-governor owns. Al-though Mr. Bryan has shown great skill in riding a hobby for several years past, we don't think he would be able to ride an ostrich, even if, by any plece of good luck, he did succeed in mounting it. The chances are 16 to 1 that he would be

But the chief reason for disbelieving the story remains to be stated. To ride on the back of an ostrich would be, in effect, to govern it. Such government of the ostrich would be without its consent. And It is impossible to suppose that Mr. Bryan would ever accept the principle of government without the consent of the governed. We are aware that, accor-ing to the press dispatches, Mr. Bryan has recently been violating this principle by going hunting a Texas, for presumably the hunted animals didn't consent to be shot. But, unfortunately, we can't be-lieve everything we read nowadays, and, busides, we think the kicking possibilities of the ostrich would have reminded him of its non-consent, even if he had been inclined to ignore it. So the ostrich story has to be given up. But not the interest in Mr. Bryan as a sportsman. In a few days he is to begin an active pursuit of the money devil, universally known as the octopus. Clad in the panoply of supreme confidence in himself, he will track this octopus to its lair-it is funny, by the and in the hearing of the whole world hurl at it some of his choicest epigrams.
