INTERESTING TESTIMONY GIVEN IN A DIVORCE CASE.

Woman From Arlington Tells of Pleas and Reasons—News of the Several Departments.

Testimony in the contested divorce suit of Maggie Hawson against Sidney Hawson was heard by Judge Cleland yesterday afternoon, and the trial will be resumed this morning.

The parties have been residing at Arlington since 1901, where the defendant is the manager of the warehouse of ex-Governor Moody. He was also a member of the legislature, and is well known in Clatsop county. Wilson & Jayne, attorneys at the law, appear for Hawson, and S. A. Gurley, of Arlington, and Carey & May represent the plaintiff as counsel. Quite a number of the residents of Arlington are in attendance as witnesses.

Mrs. Hawson testified to numerous acts of cruelty on the part of her husband, in which a razor and a revolver figured. She also accused him of drinking.

The case for the defendant has not yet been reached; but, according to the opening statement by his counsel, the plaintiff is charged with infidelity and F. T. Hurlburt, cashier of the First National bank, at Arlington, is named as co-respondent. It was stated that he boarded and roomed at the house, beginning in 1892, being introduced there by the husband, who was his friend, and that the defendant lived with the plaintiff, among other things camping out one summer with her at Bingham springs, although there was another young woman in the party, who at present is teaching music in Portland. She, however, it was asserted, did not occupy the same tent with Mrs. Hawson, so the evidence, it was alleged, would disclose. The plaintiff, of course, positively denies all of these accusations, and asks the court to award her the legal custody of the two children.

Mrs. Hawson testified that she has resided 13 years in Oregon, and was married to defendant nine years ago. His ill-treatment of her, she said, began about five years ago, when he contracted the habit of drinking to excess. They were married but two weeks when he came home "full." She owned the property where they lived, and since their separation, in September, 1894, worked at her trade of dressmaking. She stated that the defendant came home in the year 1893 for supper, at 8 o'clock, and she was provoked because he was so late and took him to task about it. He procured a revolver, she says, and held it to her head, and threatened to kill her and to take his own life. In the year 1896 witness said he tore the shades from the windows while in a tantrum.

The principal occurrence related by Mrs. Hawson was concerning an assault made upon her by her husband with a razor. She came home, so she says, "with a jaw on," and said he was going to Portland. She signified her intention of leaving him, and he followed her into the yard with a razor. Mrs. Lund gave a warning cry. The plaintiff said she struggled with her husband as she got back into the house. She had her child in her arms. He threw her on the bed, and she held on to the wrist of the hand in which he held the razor. Mr. Hawkins, Mr. Canby and Mr. Rogers were called in and took the razor away from him. Mr. Hawkins and Mrs. Lund were called to corroborate this evidence. Mrs. Hawson further testified to going to a saloon frequently to make her husband come home, and once she saw him playing cards.

STEVENS ON TRIAL.

Confessed to Cutting a Throat, But Pleads Not Guilty.

T. M. Stevens, who confessed in the grand jury room that he, and not A. Anderson, cut Fred Holmes' throat, was on trial in the criminal court yesterday, having changed his mind about pleading guilty. The trial will be concluded this morning. The only point disputed by the defendant was regarding the circumstances under which the cutting was done. The grand jurors testified that Stevens' statement to the jury was that he was first struck by Holmes, and Anderson intervened in his behalf. While Anderson and Holmes were struggling he slipped up behind Holmes and inflicted the wound. Stevens now desires to show more provocation for the deed, and denies that he was behind Holmes when the cutting was done. He testified that as he approached Holmes and Anderson when they were fighting, Holmes turned and struck at him, and he retaliated with the knife. Holmes was present at the trial and he exhibited the scar on his neck, declaring that he had a "very narrow escape."

Suit for Commission.

The suit of J. H. Buckler against Frances Miller to recover $250 commission for finding a purchaser for the defendant for a lodging-house at the corner of Fifth and Yamhill streets, was tried yesterday in Judge Sears' court, and the jury returned a verdict in favor of the defendant. The price was $250. The defense of Mrs. Miller was that the terms of the sale were not satisfactory to her and she did not agree to them.

Why Petition Was Withdrawn.

Some time ago Mrs. Minnie L. Foster had a petition in court praying for the removal of J. C. H. Foster as administrator of the estate of H. W. Ross, deceased. There was a partial hearing of the matter and the case was continued to suit the convenience of the court and a counsel. Mrs. Foster is a daughter of the deceased and a sister-in-law of Harvey. She objected to a bond which Dr. Ross in of the stockholders in 1892—they thought it wasn't necessary. But he concluded that on this trial all the facts should come out.

The witnesses so far have been: J. W. Cook, J. Kiernan, J. McCracken, E. J. DeHart, L. B. Cox, C. T. Holland, T. Patterson and J. C. Cox. Mr. Cox represents Mr. Kiernan and the others whom Mr. Kiernan represents as trustees; Mr. Seneca Smith is the counsel for Mr. Patterson; and Ed Mendenhall is attending to J. C. Cox's interests.

Probate Matters.

Nathan Peary, administrator of the estate of Nancy J. Phelps, deceased, filed his final report in the county court yesterday. The only property was lot 5, double block A, on Fourteenth street, near Mill, which was sold for $3000 by consent of the legatees. These reside in Indiana and Ohio. There is an old six-room house on the lot. G. W. Carpenter was the purchaser. The expense of the administration altogether have been about $70.

Verdict for Featherstone.

A verdict for $1500 for the plaintiff in the suit of Albert Featherstone against the Mutual Warehouse Company was returned by the jury in Judge Frazier's court yesterday. The defendant was allowed 10 days to move for a new trial. Featherstone was injured in a chute at Montgomery dock. He testified that the machinery was started without his first having been warned.

Court Notes.

NO FURTHER CLEWS.

Multnomah Addition Hold-Up Is Still a Mystery.

No new developments have come to light on the hold-up perpetrated in Multnomah addition Monday evening, though the police have been following the matter up ever since. J. B. Farr, the third man in the attacking crowd, was held in the city jail until yesterday afternoon, when he was formally charged with assault with intent to rob, but the prosecution had nothing further to offer than the fact of his being present when the two men attempted to hold up John Hughes, who fired at them and put them to flight.

Rev. Levi D. Barr, pastor of the Friends church, at Newberg, was on hand to testify to the previous good character of Farr, who is a brother-in-law of the reverend gentleman. He had known Farr for several years, and could testify to his being a hardworking young man of 22, who lived with his parents and paid his board with his earnings. Mr. Barr also said he was very sure Farr had no hand in the hold-up, but was simply walking along behind the would-be robbers when they stopped Hughes. During the exchange of shots,

IN A DANGEROUS CONDITION

Bridge Across the Sandy Saved Just in Time.

The county bridge across the Sandy, near the pipe line bridge of the Portland water committee, which has been in a perilous condition for several days, has been made secure, and is now open to travel.

Last Saturday, Mr. Maupin, pipe-line inspector, was driving across this bridge and looking down on the raging torrent 90 feet below, and watching the vast amount of drift going down, his horse, on nearing the west end of the bridge, gave a tremendous spring, throwing Mr. Maupin over the tailboard of the wagon. On examination, it was found that the bank had caved down so that only two feet of the bridge was resting on the ground. The intelligent horse, which was familiar with the bridge from frequently crossing it, had noticed that there was danger, and took the only way he knew to reach a place of safety.

Mr. Maupin was badly scared when he saw the condition of the bridge, and as he drove up the winding road to the top of the Sandy bluff, he decided to barricade the road, to prevent any one from going down to the bridge. While he was rolling logs and brush into the road, a farm wagon with a whole family on board came along, and wanted to know what he was blocking the road for. Mr. Maupin explained the situation, and told how scared he had been. The women in the wagon remarked that it was a wonder that the fright had not turned his hair white. Mr. Maupin removed his hat to show the effects of his fright, and one of the children in the wagon exclaimed: "Why, ma, it scared every hair off his head!"

Word of the mishap to the bridge was telephoned to the commissioners of Clackamas county, and Commissioner H. Scott and one of the other commissioners at once proceeded to the Sandy, and, after taking in the situation, employed the Pacific Bridge Company to save the bridge. Men were sent out, and the water committee afforded every possible assistance by furnishing tools, gear, a tent and by putting up a telephone at the bridge.

Two trees were cut and the trunks hauled by means of a stump-puller to the bridge. These timbers, 100 feet long and three feet in diameter at the butt, were placed one on each side of the end of the bridge, and by the aid of cables and chains the bridge was fixed up so as to prevent any danger of its falling. Last evening the workmen loaded their "coils, etc., on a wagon and drove across the bridge to haul the timbers, and the bridge is safe for ordinary travel. In the spring the Clackamas county commissioners will place iron cylinders filled with concrete under the end of the bridge, and these the freethies in the river will not affect.

STILL IS PROSECUTING.

Food Commissioner Bailey Has Another "Process" Butter Case.

State Food Commissioner J. W. Bailey has another "process butter" case on hand, this time in Justice Kramer's court. Armour & Co. are defendants, and Mr. Bailey alleges that they purchased half a case, or 15 pounds, of the stuff from the Portland house, and submitted it to the state chemist, who pronounced it not only "process," but that it is adulterated with water, more than 14 per cent being aqua pura, which weighs, but contains no butter fat.

The Portland house, through its attorney, asked for a continuance of the case until the head office could be heard from, and so the matter was put off until tomorrow morning.

Mr. Bailey says he begins to realize that his office is not one of unmitigated blunders, as he is obliged to prosecute reputable citizens for violation of the pure-food law, and as these violations are of such long standing that the perpetrators themselves do not realize that they are doing anything wrong in placing bogus food on the market. Then the defendants feel that they are persecuted. The small grocers who handle such stuff say: "Why don't you put the big fellows through? We buy this stuff from them, and suppose it to be genuine," and the wholesalers are by no means backward in denouncing him as over-officious in the matter.

"Men I have known for years to be reputable merchants persist in putting bogus stuff right under my nose, and what other course is there for me to pursue but to prosecute? The pure-food laws were enacted to protect the innocent public from adulterated foods, and I propose to continue the war on bad butter and bogus jellies until the stuff is driven out of the Portland markets. The adulterated articles have not even the merit of home production to recommend them, as the process butter comes from Illinois and Iowa, while the poisonous jellies are put up at Davenport, Ia., Kansas City and Omaha. The stuff comes to Portland by the carload, and no home in the Northwest is free from it."

"The butter in this last case looks like the best creamery, so perfect has been its manipulation, and even experts have told me I was barking up the wrong tree in the matter, but I have the certificate of the state chemist as to its composition, while the price I paid Armour & Co. for it—12 cents a pound—shows on its face that it must be bogus."
