BURGLAR'S PLANS FRUSTRATED.—A quantity of cheap jewelry was taken from the Northern Pacific Express Company's office yesterday by the police, at the request of the officers of Spokane, Wash. The stuff was stolen there January 9, by Frank Hastings. Hastings was arrested in Walla Walla a few days ago, and had on his person at the time express receipts, showing that he had shipped a lot of stuff to George Strong, of Portland. Of course, the name Strong was fictitious, as Hastings intended to come to this city and secure possession of the package, which, in addition to the jewelry, contained a fine kit of burglar tools. Some of the tools were of an ingenious device, showing the owner was an accomplished worker in his profession. By sending his outfit to Portland, it is presumed he intended to pay this city a professional visit soon, in which event there might have been another period of daring work in housebreaking. The police regard it fortunate that Hastings was apprehended in Walla Walla before he had carried into execution whatever Portland plans he had. At the time of his arrest he claimed the name of Fred Fisher.

THE CARDINAL FOR FEBRUARY.—The Cardinal, issued by the February class of 1900, of the Portland high school, is one of the most attractive numbers of that interesting periodical that has yet made its appearance. Typographically, it is a work of art, and its advertising pages are well filled. Among the well-written articles in the issue are: "History of the Class of February," by Rowena Cochran and Arthur Leach; "Patient Griselda," by Parthenia Dukehart; "The High School," by Winifred E. Chance; "A Telegraphic Adventure," by Elsie Lyons; "The Prize Contest," by Olive Statter; "From the Class of Naughty Naught," by Jean McKercher. The various departments are ably edited, and the number is handsomely illustrated.

SUBFOUNDATION COMPLETED.—The concrete subfoundation for the foundation walls and piers of the brick block to be erected at the corner of Fifth and Stark are about all in. George Langford, who has the contract for the masonry and brick work, has the rubble stone for the area walls and some of the stone for the heavy foundation walls on the south and west sides on the ground, and will begin the masonry work today. The stone for the foundation walls comes from the Butte quarry, and the rubble from the ballast dock. If fine weather continues, the foundation will soon be ready for the brick superstructure.

WOMEN SENT TO JAIL.—Four vagrant women were before the municipal court yesterday, and received sentences of 90 days each in the city jail. Their names were Sarah Stewart, Kate Bird, Lillie Loraine and Bessie Kirk. For quite a time past they have been prowling around the North End tough district, frequenting saloons at very late hours, and showing no visible means of support. The Loraine woman agreed to leave the city if permitted to go, which was consented to.

PUBLIC SCHOOL EXAMINATIONS.—Examinations began yesterday in the public schools, and will continue for one week. The term ends next Wednesday, on the evening of which day the high school will have their graduating exercises. The reception to the high school will be held Monday evening, in the school building, and on the following Friday the alumni association will have their dance at Parsons hall.

GERMAN EVANGELICAL CHURCH.—A successful revival is in progress at the First German Evangelical church, corner Tenth and Clay streets. Services are held every evening at 7:30 o'clock, and the attendance has been large. A number of people have professed conversion, and much interest is shown in the meetings. The public, especially Germans, are invited to attend these meetings.

CENSUS SUPERVISOR'S OFFICE.—George F. Telfer, census supervisor for the second district of Oregon, has appointed C. H. McIsaac his assistant. Headquarters have been established at room 308, Chamber of Commerce, where all applications for enumerators and any other business with the census bureau in this district will be attended to. Office hours are from 9 to 11 A. M.

MANILA NOTES.

Rents Are Very High, With Almost All Houses Occupied.

Manila Freedom, Dec. 30.

It is almost impossible to find a vacant house for rent. There are a few in the old city, but the more desirable localities, namely, Ermita, San Miguel, Paco and Ailix, are entirely occupied. Rents are very high. Almost four times greater than they were in the time of Spanish rule.

Owing to the enormous rise in the price of lumber, real estate men and property-owners are not disposed to build or improve their holdings. The Chinese only have made some improvements on Calle Rosario and in the immediate vicinity of their retail stores. With but few exceptions, however, their efforts have been confined to the erection of long rows of one-story stalls, poorly built and covered with galvanized roofing. Several two- and three-story buildings have been finished in the characteristic durable style in vogue before American occupation. Builders are discussing the wisdom of the government's plan to use American lumber in the new cascoe plant.

Those who have lived here for some time and thoroughly understand the situation, claim that the ants will make short work of the soft wood. The result of the experiment is anxiously awaited.

The greater part of the native building material comes from the islands of Negros and Mindoro. When the Southern ports are opened and the accumulated timber can be brought to the mills, there must be a general revival of building, which in turn will serve to lower rents. Just how long the present high rate will last depends on the progress of the government in crushing the insurrection in the South.

Market quotations, retail, Mexican silver, are, per pound, as follows: Potatoes, 3 cents; onions, 10 cents; tomatoes, 5 cents; beef, 80 cents; pork, 25 cents. Eggs, 25 cents per dozen; small chickens, 50 cents each; large, $1; bananas, 3 cents per dozen; cocoanuts, 5 cents each.

There were 35 deaths in Manila yesterday, convulsions leading the list with 10 victims.

The eyes of the natives gazed on the new carretela belonging to the British consul as it pulled up in front of the Hong Kong & Shanghai bank yesterday morning. The vehicle was pulled by two large horses dressed in white, which was trimmed with a large red braid, and on their left arms were the British coat of arms and bore the name of the British consul. The carriage is very light, and can be handled with ease by two men.

Lieutenant C. H. Sleeper, collector of internal revenue, is advertising to sell at auction all the Filipino postage, provisional postage, newspaper stamps, surcharged stamps and postal cards on hand in the Hacienda Publica of Manila, consisting of 20,000,000 stamps of various denominations and years of issue, and 1,000,000 postal cards.

THREE GREAT PLAYS.

"Magda," "Camille" and "Macbeth," by Nance O'Neil.

One of the theatrical events of the season is on the tapis at Cordray's theater. Seats began selling like a rush of landsettlers yesterday morning for the last performance of Nance O'Neil in this city for a long time. A heavy reserve list covers every performance of the engagement, and the tremendous success of the new Western star early in the season here bids fair to be repeated.

The tragedienne, with her superb company, including Clay Clement, is coming some distance out of their way to bid farewell to Portland, where their admirers are legion. The O'Neil company is going to Australia, and will sail in a few weeks hence. It was in response to an overwhelming demand for a farewell engagement that Manager John F. Cordray succeeded in bringing her here for four performances. Four of Nance O'Neil's greatest plays—the ones in which the entire country have accorded her well and honestly earned eminence—will be seen at the Washington-street playhouse the latter part of this week. Such has been the demand for "Magda" that Manager Cordray has felt constrained to offer it for the matinee attraction as well as on the opening night. Those who have bought tickets for "East Lynne" can have their money refunded if they do not care to see "Magda."

Commencing on Friday evening, Nance O'Neil will produce "Magda," and repeat it at the Saturday matinee; Saturday evening, Bernhardt's version of "Camille"; Sunday (last night), "Macbeth," with the original Kelly music used in the first production, and an augmented orchestra.

The last-named production will be likely to pack Cordray's to the point of breaking down. Special preparations are being made for the accompaniment of the finest scene settings.

Nance O'Neil has added several new members to her already ample support, and it is stronger than ever. Fortified as she is by the unvarying and steadily growing success of the past year, and the praises of the whole play-going public for the artistic worth and pleasure of her representations in the higher drama, she may, with confidence, seek for fresh worlds to conquer with her regal smile.

WILL NOT FIGHT THE CASE

Mrs. Struble to Defend Herself in the United States Court.

Sioux Falls Nautilus for February.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Jan. 6.—Elizabeth Lois Struble, who says she came here from Portland the latter part of last August, was arrested by the government authorities and bound over to the next federal grand jury on a charge of sending through the mails her monthly publication, named the Nautilus, which is alleged to contain obscene matter.

It is believed here by Mrs. Struble's friends, to some of whom the foregoing dispatch was shown, that there must be a big mistake somewhere. While it is barely possible that Mrs. Struble may have been guilty of a technical violation of the United States statutes relating to mails, her whole life here gives the lie to any suspicion that she did anything impure or unwomanly.

The above, from The Daily Oregonian, of Portland, gives it all in a nutshell. You will know now why, if you have failed to receive the January number, you will either have to go without or send a quarter for express charges. And your year's subscription will date thirteen months instead of twelve.

We receive exactly what we attract and ignorance of the law excuses no one. I am attending school at Professor Experience's Uni-versity. I expect to learn something. I generally do. And I don't expect to take the same lesson twice. Noah Webster is my old authority for the meaning of "obscene." I am soon to learn whether he and the federal authorities agree.

Am I going to fight the case? No. If I am indicted the prosecuting attorney will state his views; I will state mine; judge and jury do the rest. What if? I'll meet the ifs when I reach them. The result will be added experience, wisdom, self-reliance, power, success and a few thousand more subscribers to the Nautilus.

Yes, I shall enjoy hearing from you anent this affair, but my time is too much occupied to admit of other than telegraphic replies.

KING'S DAUGHTERS SANG.

Third-Street Mission Entertained by St. John's Church.

The King's Daughters of St. John's Presbyterian church gave the regular weekly concert last night at the Third-street mission. The house was crowded with an enthusiastic and apreciative lot of people. The programme consisted of a piano solo, by Miss Rasmussen; recitation, Miss Gertrude Grace; vocal duet, Misses Matthews and Spencer; baton swinging, Mr. Rebe; vocal solo, Miss Farmer; recitation, Mr. Shearer; instrumental duet, the Missas Lightly. Every number was encored; some of them two or three times.

The concert next Tuesday evening will probably be given nuder the auspices of the choir of the First Presbyterian church. Admission will be by tickets, but the tickets will be distributed free.

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

James-Kidder-Hanford Company.

In the costly and elaborate scenic revival of "The Winter's Tale," which Wagenhals and Kemper will present at the Marquam Grand next week, Louis James will be seen as Autolycus, Charles B. Hanford as King Leontes, and Kathryn Kidder in the dual character of Hermione and Perdita. The production of the play to be given in this city will be the most elaborate ever seen of the comedy, if not the most magnificent ever seen upon the local stage. Messrs. Wagenhals and Kemper have not only chosen stars for their combination, who are especially well adapted to this, their leading bill, but they have supplied a supporting company of exceptional strength and have staged the play with special scenery by Bradley & Corbett, costumes by Bermann, and draperies and properties by artists who understand the historical requirements as well as the aesthetic harmonies. Every bit of furnishing used in the play has been prepared especially for this production, and is carried by the management. The company numbers 37 people.

The order of the repertoire will be as follows: Wednesday and Friday nights and Saturday matinee, "The Winter's Tale"; Thursday night, "The School for Scandal," and Saturday night, "The Rivals." The seat and box sale will open Monday morning.

Clara Thropp.

Clara Thropp repeated her performance of "A Doll's House" at Cordray's last night to a very large audience. One of the very pleasant features of the show is her singing of Kipling's "On the Road to Mandalay," which she does in masterly style. The hearty applause throughout the play shows not only a keen appreciation of Miss Thropp's clever work, but also for the great playwright Ibsen.

Tonight Miss Thropp will appear in "Remedy for Divorce," and tomorrow night she will close her engagement here with a repetition of "A Doll's House."

GREETED OLD FAVORITES

BOSTONIANS' WARM WELCOME FROM PORTLAND.

First Production of "The Smugglers" at the Marquam—Some of the New Principals.

Portland had its customary welcome ready for the Bostonians last night, and so many of their friends as the Marquam could hold packed the theater. Each one of the old favorites on first entrance came in for distinct recognition from all parts of the house, the heartiest being reserved for that popular youngster, Harry Barnabee. More than ordinary interest centered in the stranger who has taken Jessie Bartlett Davis' place with the best light opera company in this country. Imagine the prettiest Japanese beauty ever pictured—we see them only thus—give her round eyes instead of almond shaped, a graceful, springy carriage in place of a mincing walk, add a little to her stature and you have Marcia van Dresser, the new contralto of the Bostonians. Of course, she must dress as a boy in at least one act, else the Bostonian tradition would be violated. It was a black suit, elaborately embroidered with gold. Still, Miss van Dresser was even more handsome in the garb of her own sex. Voice? As unlike in timbre Jessie Bartlett Davis' as two contraltos could be; yet clear, flexible, fresh and sympathetic. The one song, "His Freedom Give," which could show its charming quality, comes in the last act, near the close of the opera. It is the gem.

John Dunsmuir is the new basso; a man who can act as well as sing; rich, deep voice; fine stage presence. He had a big introduction in a martial song, "A Soldier's life Is One of Strife," given with much fire and strengthened by the splendid male chorus for which the Bostonians have ever been noted. Half a dozen recalls were Mr. Dunsmuir's first tribute from Portland. Another new principal is Frank Rushworth, a young tenor, whose voice was heard alone in a most fascinating madrigal to the seasons.

By the way, the opera was "The Smugglers," by Glack Minkowaki; libretto by Frederick Ranken. Plot not worth mentioning; dialogue, bright enough to keep folks laughing. The music of the first act is a little disappointing; cheerful enough in its way, but nothing there to catch hold of you quickly, nor that you'd care to remember, except Dunsmuir's great soldier song, and a simple, melodious bridal chorus. Barnabee, who, for all stage purposes, grows younger with increasing years, recites a capital song, "I'm a Noble Grandee, Ha! Ha!" He is precious wine.

Good numbers tramp on each other's heels in the second act. First comes MacDonald—the same, vigorous, athletic, good-natured baritone thr every one likes—with a rollicking smuggler's song. Parenthetically, it may be remarked that another tradition of the Bostonians is once more observed, namely, that the male principals must be pronounced manly physique. Then comes Helen Bertram—her voice is clearer and stronger, but not sweeter than last season—in "Love Is a Mixture," the refrain sung with a male chorus. It was delicious. To Barnabee falls a topical song, "Funny, Sunny Spain," the sprightliest music of this act, which has a finale, very close in power to grand opera.

In the third act, Barnabee, Frothingham and Fitzgerald have a most amusing trio, "Conundrums," which the audience demanded half a dozen times. The best is reserved for the last, Miss van Dresser's "His Freedom Give."

It is hardly necessary to say that orchestra, chorus, costume and scene were perfect. It was a genuine Bostonian performance. Tonight, "The Serenade."

SETTLERS ON OVERLAP LAND

O. & C. Railroad Company Promises to Deal Leniently With Them.

AIMS, Jan. 27.—(To the Editor.)—Many of the settlers on the overlap lands during the long-drawn-out litigation which has just been finally settled by the supreme court in favor of the O. & C. railroad, have not made their payments, for which they are not to blame, since the settlers, especially the poorer class, had no money to throw away, and it was not settled that the railroad company was sure of getting the land. Now, since the government has given said company the advantage, they seek to hold it by notifying all purchasers that compound interest on all payments will be demanded, which will so increase the amount that many settlers who have all they can do to live, make reasonable payments and improve their land, and thus swell the value of the remaining property of the company, will be compelled to abandon their homes. I know of some who now contemplate doing so, saying the land is not worth the sum demanded.

The company makes this demand under the pretext that fighting the government has cost them $40,000, and signify that they expect the purchaser, who has had no part in the matter, to pay the bill.

Is not this an outrage upon humanity? Is there no redress? These people have been wronged. Some one should be responsible; if not the company, then the government. Why not investigate this matter, and if a way be found by anyone to obtain relief, let him state it, giving mode of procedure. I should like to hear from others. If a way be found, let us unite and loosen the rocks that may fall on the offenders and grind them to a powder. Let those who hear, understand your helper. T. JOHANNSEN.

It is learned at the office of the Oregon & California railroad that it will be the policy of the company to deal leniently wherever leniency is needed. Shortly after the decision was made, the land department, upon the recommendation of Manager Koehler, reduced the interest rate on payments delinquent from 10 to 7 per cent. Interest will be charged only from the date the payments fell due, and will not be compounded. All the contracts bear 10 per cent interest.

On behalf of the company it is argued that the men who bought the land have had the use of it, and of the money, which should have been paid as agreed upon. Under the terms of the contract purchasers who are delinquent have forfeited their rights thereunder, but officers of the company assert that every settler shall be protected, so far as he merits protection. No harsh measures will be enforced; on the contrary, it is the desire of the company to be easy with their debtors.

Back taxes will not be burdened with costs nor interest. While the litigation was in progress the company made arrangements with the commissioners of Multnomah and Clackamas counties whereby it was agreed that no costs should be added to the taxes when the suit should reach a final decision. The company will now pay the taxes and collect from the purchasers as per contract, but with no additional expense.

About 228,000 acres in the "overlap" district have been taken up by settlers.
