DON'T LIKE THE COMBINE

YON YONSON TALKS ABOUT THE FISHING INDUSTRY.

He is Not Altogether Pleased With His Investment, and Expresses His Opinion Freely.

Yon Yonson, the only member of the great company combine, or Columbia River Fishermen's Association, who has ever shown any inclination to be communicative in regard to the workings of that concern, was in the city yesterday. He stated that on Saturday he had received a handsomely engraved check, signed by the treasurer of the combine, for his share in the accumulations of the concern, apportioned to his hand-saved savings invested therein. In other words, he had received the dividend "ordered" at the meeting of the stockholders. Mr. Yonson had been made very happy by receiving even this small return on his investment, and had come to Portland, as he said, to have a good time. He had, however, been disappointed and disgusted on finding that the Portland banks would not cash his check, but would only take it for collection. This had interfered with his having the good time intended, and he was duty sober, but badly muddled, and, like most unphilosophical fishermen, inclined to kick and growl. The fact that he had not been able to get his check cashed tended to confirm certain doubts and fears which had found lodgment in his brain, as well as in the minds of others of his class who know nothing of the intricacies of the game of great corporations, nor the methods of the brainy men who manipulate them.

Mr. Yonson had never clearly understood the business transacted at the annual meeting of the stockholders, and he was, therefore, and there were some things connected with it which he has not yet got through his head. He said he could not understand why Mr. Elmore only made such a brief statement to the meeting. It all, and his copies had been furnished the stockholders. Mr. Yonson says he has no ill feeling toward Mr. Elmore, because, when he used to fish for him he always found him to be a fair and liberal man, and he knows that Mr. Elmore accepted the office of vice-president without salary, and hasn't had his remuneration increased yet, so, of course, he has no selfish or envious feelings toward Mr. Elmore. However, he is inclined to fear from what he remembers of the report submitted to the stockholders, that the funds of the combine are not being handled to the best advantage, and he has an idea that the dividends are not being paid in some other great corporation—being borrowed or paid out of the capital stock.

He says he has no intention or desire to do wrong to or interfere with any one in this matter, but is willing to submit his views to the judgment of any one better versed in such matters. He then proceeded to figure out the problem, as follows: The capital stock of the combine is $2,000,000, of which, as he understands, $1,700,000 has been issued, and $300,000 remains as treasury stock. To the best of Mr. Yonson's memory, the available assets of the $2,000,000, as stated at the stockholders' meeting, consist of the following items: Cash in hand, about $20,000; salmon in the canneries, about $100,000; the sum of $150,000 advanced to fishermen (broad cast upon the waters which may return after a while); $50,000 invested in traps, and, as he figures, the worth of the combine is $250,000. He says he has no objection to Mr. Yonson's method of figuring out the problem, but he is very much afraid that some one has spilled a bucket of water on the books, and spoiled the engraving on the face of his stock, because, as he says, with only $250,000 available, he can't see how any corporation can pay $300,000 in dividends, or borrowing, or anything of the kind, where the necessary capital for the next year's business is to be raised.

Mr. Yonson says that if some Astoria grain merchant, or commission-gatherer, or other person who is in the habit of clearing these matters in his mind, he will be under everlasting obligations to him. Mr. Yonson's gloomy views of the situation may probably be attributed largely to the fact that he has not having been able to cash his check for dividend, and if he gets the money today, and gets started in on having a good time he is planning for, he may see matters in a more cheerful light.

SHOT HIS FRIEND. HAD MONEY TO BURN.

Nealand Hittcock Jacobson for a Foot-pad and Fined. John Jacobson, the blacksmith who was shot by Victor Nealand at the latter's residence yesterday morning, is lying at his home, 455 East Eighth street. The bullet, a 4-caliber, struck him in the breast near the right shoulder, and passed through the upper portion of the right lung. It can be removed or not is a question yet to be solved, as the city physician says he will have to place the wounded man in the hospital, where the X-rays can be used in determining the position of the ball. Nealand was arrested yesterday and lodged in jail, charged with assault with a dangerous weapon. His friends explain that the shooting was the result of a mistake. Both men had been to a neighboring saloon until between 1 and 2 in the morning, when Nealand had his home, on the corner of East Second and East Mill streets. Nealand did not know that

SOLDIER'S LAST BIVOUAC

SECOND OREGON HERO INTERRED AT LONE FIR CEMETERY.

Woodstock, Ivanhoe and Tremont Organize for the Purpose of Obtaining Metropolitan Advantages. The funeral of Joseph I. Berry, member of company M, Second Oregon, who was killed in the night attack on Maricao, Philippine islands, took place yesterday afternoon from the Hassalo-street Congregational church. Holiday addition, and all the honors his friends and comrades could bestow were freely given. At the church there was a profuse display of the national colors, and a large picture of the dead soldier. The cortege proceeded from the house to the church, escorted by the firing squad and pallbearers, the latter being Sergeant Willis Platts, Sergeant Fred M. Comstock, Corporal Fred Bowen, Corporal Mack Simpson, Corporal Henry Johnson, Private H. Holland and the bugler, Roy Dobie.

Following also came a long line of ex-officers and General Summers. At the church the middle pews were reserved for the family and comrades of the dead soldier. A large number were unable to gain admission, and many remained standing.

The services were opened by singing by the choir, followed by Scripture reading and prayer, by Rev. R. W. Farquhar, the pastor. After the eloquent prayer, Chaplain W. S. Gilbert, read a very touching address on the text, "Well done," which he said was the finest tribute that could be paid to any man. In the course of his remarks, Mr. Gilbert said that the right of others and the rights of the dead soldier, he said, was the finest tribute that could be paid to any man. ALBINA MILITARY COMPANY.

The proposed Albina military company is considered a certainty. Captain H. C. Wilson and others who have been pushing the matter say that the roll now contains over 55 names of the Second Oregon, who are members of the Albina company, and that the company will be organized and remain in Albina, and receive official recognition. This has been all that has been lacking to make the Woodstock Improvement Association a reality. When the proper time comes the company will be mustered in. The erection of the armory by ex-Mayor Hill depends on the organization of the company, and when that is an accomplished fact, he states that plans will be prepared and the work proceeded with. In a general way, plans have been discussed with the members of the company, and they have been giving their ideas as to the arrangements. Mr. Hill says he desires the armory hall fixed to suit the boys.

SEEKING CITY ADVANTAGES.

Woodstock, Ivanhoe, Tremont Form Improvement Association. At a meeting of the citizens of Woodstock, Ivanhoe, Tremont and of the district southeast of the city, in the public hall at Woodstock, Saturday night, the Woodstock Improvement Association was formed. It was the outgrowth of agitation that had been going on for some time to get Bull Run water, better car service, better roads and lake steps leading to amenity. When the proper time comes the company will be mustered in. The erection of the armory by ex-Mayor Hill depends on the organization of the company, and when that is an accomplished fact, he states that plans will be prepared and the work proceeded with. ONLY TWO CANDIDATES

RACE FOR SCHOOL DIRECTOR STARTS QUIETLY.

D. P. Thompson and J. P. Finley Will Probably Be Put Up—Denials of Men Mentioned.

But two candidates have thus far been entered in the race for school director, although the election is to take place March 12—a little less than a month hence. These are D. P. Thompson, who has served as school director before, and J. P. Finley, who has made a campaign for the office, but failed of election. The name of P. J. Holmes has been mentioned, but Mr. Holmes, when seen yesterday, stated emphatically that he was not a candidate, as does also J. A. Strowbridge, chairman of the present board, who has been urged by his friends to endeavor to secure a re-election.

SIXTH STREET ASSESSMENT

Reason Why All of It Has Not Yet Been Paid.

A taxpayer writes to The Oregonian to inquire whether the delinquent assessments for the improvement of Sixth street have yet been collected, and if not, why they have not been paid, and the reason why they have not been paid is about as follows: When the street was improved a number of the property-owners contended that their assessments on the ground of want of jurisdiction; that is, they held that, owing to an error in the proceedings connected with the improvement, the city had not acquired jurisdiction over the street. The error in the proceedings, it may be stated, was merely a technical one, caused by the owners of a piece of the property on the street signing the name of a company or corporation, incorrectly. The signature was made in good faith, and the signer promptly paid the assessment on the property, making no attempt to profit by the accidental error. Others, however, saw a chance, through this error, of shirking the payment of their assessments, and throwing the cost of improving the street in front of their property on their fellow-citizens. They therefore contested payment.

ELECTION FOR LIEUTENANT

Will Be Held in Company E, O. S. G., This Week. This week an election will be held for lieutenant in company E, first battalion, Third regiment, O. S. G. The order for the election states that only one person is to be selected, but the recent organization of the cavalry troop in Sumner under the command of Captain Muir takes that officer from company E. As Captain Muir will probably be transferred from one branch of the service to the other, it will be unnecessary for him to resign from the captaincy of company E until he is ready to assume active charge at Sumner. This is probably the reason why only a lieutenant is being selected now.
