FRAWLEY COMPANY WARMLY WELCOMED TO CORDRAY'S.

Fine Production of "The Sporting Duchess" Witnessed by a House That Packed the Theater.

Manager Cordray delighted the immense audience of "The Sporting Duchess" with a complete "The Sporting Duchess" will thrill until Wednesday night. Thursday, "Countess Gucl.".

RED HOT SERPENTS.

What a Reporter Thought He Saw in a Rolling Mill.

By a coincidence which is auspicious for the house in which they are playing for the first time, and pleasant to the house of the actors, the Frawley Company returns to Portland to celebrate the fifth anniversary of its organization. This fact, as Mr. Frawley remarked in his acknowledgments to one of the sturdiest houses Cordray ever had, last night, was gratifying. He had promised, on the basis of the happy encouragement received, a high standard of productions from his company, and it was unnecessary for him to say it was a pleasure to receive the welcome they had. The people were ready to give it. Had the wishes of a notably demonstrative audience been regarded, the performance would have been continued until the wee hours of morning. There was a great deal of audience wanted to do which it counted. It was kept busy looking on what followed next. In a rapidly moving scene of "The Sporting Duchess" there is little chance for a pause and readjustment of sympathies for the characters in the melodramatic story of mixed villainy, nobility, virtue and honesty. For a long and heavy melodrama, made by three story-compelling people, its main theme goes through an amazing series of scenes. The opening of hate and violence makes a hard running with the horses, and when they approach a network of unexplained things, the story like the horse-steeplechase in the end. It is a great play, and an involved story, and if one has any doubts about the villain's finish he is respectfully referred to the contrivance of "The Sporting Duchess." The play is among the best of the season. It is a play that is fresh and new, and it is an atmosphere about it that suggests the genuineness of the place from which it is taken—the sporting nobility and wealth of London, the province of a distill of comedy, and its heart-interest—the lone little girl in gray—is so strong that as a whole the average playgoer has something to chuckle over.

Frawley did well to give an index of what is to follow by last night's play. There was more money in Cordray's box office than ever before, representing a fine performance, at any price that the new people the popular manager exhibited received so hearty a greeting. One act served to introduce them all, and though the presentation was more of a display, there was no doubt of the house exhibiting. Good stage pictures, magnificent-looking women and men, and a complete production. It was a night of success for Frawley and his new players, Manager Cordray, who made a winning in the attraction, and, lastly, to the players themselves.

There is a jockey-like expression applicable to the uniformly pretty women of the Frawley Company—they carry their clothes well. Each in her way appears to go to the point of the play, and the scene of the paddock, where amid nervous feet-hoofs stage toilets must be preserved.

The freedom and ease with which Keith Walkman plays the title part, is every bit as striking in his captivating way as Mary Van Duren does Vivian Duvall, the woman with a past, and who adventures with the present, a lady who holds money in her hand. Van Duren smokes a cigarette and tosses down a fake brandy and soda surely proves a certain sort of devilry can be impersonated convincingly, and a lady who, in the last night will be remembered with a smile when we shall see her in a drawing-room comedy. Keith Walkman, tall, statuesque, has a model form, and a mild, rich voice, and a smile that, in the belief, goes most suitably with the part. Martin Barney carries the emotional role of Muriel, Countess of Dabourch. In a highly satisfactory manner, he is a fair, large blonde, style of beauty. As the about-to-be-divorced wife, she achieved success in a trying role.

Phoebe McAllister is a friend old and delightful. Her scene with Dick, the jockey, is effective, and she appeared completely at her ease. Her success seems assured.

After the ladies come a number of striking actors who crave particular attention. Major Mottin is portrayed as a first-class villain by Harrington Reynolds. So strong was it that he was heartily liked—something of a return to the old-time methods of inducing the actor of a thankless role. J. R. Armer's Captain Strathfield, A. M. S. fellow of many loves, and who cannot find it in his shallow heart to leave the heroine for the Duchess, has a fine comedy role, which eminently fits him. Frank Mathews as Rupert Litch makes a hit in his little scene in the infatuation of the gorgeous scene in Mottin's retinue.

Fernie Byrne as the innocent, upon whom the Earl, acquits himself splendidly. There is force in his lines which he delivers without a tremor. The scene with the Earl is a fine study in the actor's face. Harry Duffell as Earl's valet, Wallace Shaw, Clarence Montague and Little Alton Holmes are about the specialties whose conduct conforms to a smooth performance.

BUILDERS ARE ALL BUSY

LIVELIEST SEASON PORTLAND HAS SEEN FOR TEN YEARS.

Both Business Blocks and Residences Springing Up Like Aladdin's Palace—On the East Side.

Portland builders are busier now than they have been at this season for the past 10 years, according to a prominent contractor, who was speaking on the subject yesterday. They have more to do than even at this time last year, though over 50 modern buildings were erected in this city in 1899. To a casual observer there does not seem to be any unusual stir in the building line, but the work is widely scattered, and in the aggregate hundreds of mechanics are busy.

One day was lost on account of the rain, and as the season advances more men and teams will be put to work on new excavations.

The new buildings being erected for the Multnomah Club, on the corner of Yamhill street, are being pushed steadily to completion. The brick basements of the Clubhouse, and the handball court to the north are in position, while the framework of the latter building already looms up, suggesting the style and loftiness of the new structure.

The work of building the brick basement of the new Good Samaritan Hospital goes on steadily, but slowly. The concrete foundations for the brickwork have been laid in the trenches, and great care is being taken with regard to solidity. A large amount of building material is being deposited on the Twenty-third street side, and the work will be pushed more vigorously as the season advances.

Carpenters are now laying floor joists on the first set of steel pillars, on the new corner block, at Fifth and Stark streets. Bricklayers, ironworkers and carpenters can hereafter work in unison on this structure, which is to be finished by midsummer. The basement walls of the building suggest stout foundations for the support of great weight.

The new Brooke brick block is nearly ready for the roof timbers. The four-pane store fronting on Washington street will add more life to that portion of the City, which is already becoming a popular retail quarter of Portland.

Excavation proceeds steadily on the Brown lot, Sixth street, between Washington and Alder, and preparations are being made for laying extra strong foundations, as the owners expect to add more stories to the structure as business justifies. A truss roof will be built so that it can be raised out of the way when the brick walls are to be carried up, for a more lofty structure. All that is contemplated.

The Lawrence residence, being erected at 745 Flanders street, will be one of the prettiest buildings in the residence quarter of the West Side, when completed. Although begun but a few weeks ago, the house is already moved in. It consists of two stories, basement and attic, is of the Colonial style of architecture, and will cost between $400 and $500.

Among the buildings nearing completion on the West Side, are the Durkheim office flats, corner of Alder and Eleventh, and Mrs. J. H. Durkheim's new residence, southeast corner of Everett and Twenty-first. These structures will all be ready for occupancy by early summer.

Among the more recent building permits issued by the City Engineer are: F. H. Barker, $250 two-story dwelling, northeast corner of East Burnside and East Sixth.

O. K. Barker, $300 cottage, corner of Bowman and East Eighth.

J. L. Barker, $150 dwelling, Russell street, between Albina avenue and Bowditch.

Dr. J. K. Jacks, $280 two-story residence, East Madison, between East Nineteenth and East Twentieth.

E. Hargren, $300 cottage, East Twenty-third, between East Ankeny and East Ash.

C. S. Humman, $500 cottage, southwest corner East Twenty-first and East Ash.

F. W. Woodward, $100 addition, Yamhill, between Park and Second.

Sam Wadley, $100 cottage, southeast corner Twenty-fourth street and St. Helens road.

R. S. Zeller, $170 two-story dwelling, East Ankeny, between East Twentieth and East Twenty-first.

J. Woodbury, $250 two-story dwelling, East Ankeny, between East Twentieth and East Twenty-first.

Holiday Addition Buildings.

The following new dwellings have been erected in Holiday's Addition recently, whose aggregate cost is not less than $20,000:

F. R. Cook, Eleventh and Tillamook; Russell & Hyatt, two houses, Eleventh and Tillamook; G. P. Thompson, Fifteenth and Tillamook; Walter Cook, Eleventh and Tillamook; J. F. Gove, Fifteenth and Tillamook; H. O. O'Reilly, Seventeenth and Broadway; C. F. Ford, Eleventh and Broadway; L. E. Trasker, Ninth and Broadway; H. C. Buckley, two houses, Second and Halcyon, and First and Halcyon; William Redd, two houses, Pacific and Water; George McGowan, Eleventh and Hoyt.

F. McKenrue will erect a handsome residence on East Ninth and Welder.

C. W. Tracy will erect a large house to occupy half a block on East Seventh and Broadway. B. P. Scott will build on East Fifteenth and Tillamook streets. St. Bern will put up two houses on Grand avenue and Broadway. The aggregate cost of these dwellings will probably be above $15,000.

New Cannery Building.

Good progress was made the past week on the foundation for the proposed cannery building of the Oregon Packing Company, on East Yamhill street, between East Eighth and East Ninth. From all indications, the new building will be a fine one, and especially fitted for the business, which the managers have desired for some time. The site will be excavated to a depth of seven feet, which will give room for the boiler and other machinery required in the operation of the establishment. There will be several elevators running from the basement to the street level, and the building will be provided with ample modern facilities for canning fruit on a large scale. The intention is to push construction on the building and have it ready for the coming season.

House Still in Operation.

Contractor Spore of Spore & Robinson, stated yesterday that little progress had been made with the foundations for the two buildings for the Doernbecher factory. The steam shovel is still in operation, and the work of the tract and the amount of dirt are constantly being hauled away to Lower Albina. There is still much excavating to do at the end of the tract. It will be some time before the steam shovel is finished up. Nearly double the amount of dirt has been hauled out than was estimated would have to be removed. Mr. Spore said that until the excavating has been finished work on the buildings proper could not be commenced, and that the temporary switch passes, where the temporary switch passes. The permanent spurs will pass the warehouse and also the factory building, and these will be constructed shortly. Some work has been done on the foundations of the two buildings, but this has gone forward under difficulties, owing to the saturated condition of the ground.

Trackage Work Commenced.

At the Southern Pacific carshops excavating has gone forward as steadily as the weather permitted. The most important work will be the construction of a switch from a point on the main line at the north end of the ground. A fill is under construction across the lower grade of the car shops, from the place where the machine-shops will stand. The roadbed for this railway is under construction through to the connection with the main line. This spur will be completed before the vast amount of building material will be required, and it will be put through as soon as possible, so that the contractor may crowd construction when the weather will permit. The excavating for the foundation of the car shops will be commenced. Concrete will be used for this purpose. If good weather continues the switch will soon be completed and work on the building will proceed.

Miscellaneous Improvements.

A Selwood two-story building is to be erected on Union avenue, and what is called East Sixth street. Contractor Merchant has the building for construction, and work is soon to commence.

The foundation for the new cottage of the Barker, on East Eighth and Bowman streets, is nearing completion. The building is to be erected there, and others are projected.

Work is being pushed forward on the new creamery building near Pleasant Home on the Powell Valley road, and it will soon be in operation. The owner, Mr. Kern, has confidence that the enterprise will prove a success.

The Hill street car shop, which is to be enlarged by the addition of 25 feet to the rear end, thus making it 55 feet instead of 30 as at present.

Good Character Is Worth Something.

McKinville Reporter.

The writing which W. G. Magers was so busy upon, a few days before his execution, has been published, and instead of being a confession of the crime, as was expected, it was a hand-to-heaven ascription that he was innocent. He makes the point that "when a man with a previous conviction, and who has been in prison, cannot get justice, or really a fair trial, they will convict him on general principles, and while it did not do him good in his case, it emphasizes the value of a previous good character with no un-certain record. Good character and good conduct will retain their value as long as the world stands, notwithstanding the tendency to exalt the power of money and to dignify those who attain to positions of eminence through questionable methods. Let the young and aspiring youth remember this fact."

JOIN FOR IMPROVEMENT EAST SIDERS UNITE TO HELP ALONG THE EIGHTH WARD.

No Ordinary Street Repairs Will Be Satisfactory There—Belgian Blocks Talked Of.

Preliminary steps were taken toward the formation of an improvement association Saturday night at Four hall by citizens of the southeast, mainly of the Eighth Ward, for the purpose of encouraging the improvement and repairs of streets in that section.

The attendance was not large, but those present were determined to take action to set in motion improvement. Councilman Cameron was present, and greatly facilitated the effort. On motion it was decided to start a preliminary organization, and the improvement association was organized. The association was organized, and the improvement association was organized.

After further discussion, it was decided that at the next meeting a committee of citizens should be selected to take up the matter of the repairing of this street. This committee will ascertain what the sawmill company and the sawmill men, the railway company and the citizens there, and see if some plan can be evolved that will result in the repairs being brought about. The situation on Grand avenue south of East Clay street is different from that of almost any other street on the East Side. The property-owners have been taxed repeatedly, until they will do no more for the street. On the other hand it is admitted that the great sawmill is a highly important industry, has helped to build up that portion of the city, and is entitled to consideration. It was felt that a committee of well-informed and fair-minded citizens might bring about the repairs of the street by consulting all concerned. The same action was taken with regard to Milwaukee street. These committees will be named at the next meeting, which will be held at Four hall.

After the association has been permanently organized meetings will be held further south, but as Mr. Foss kindly donated the use of his hall, the association was thought best to meet there for the present.

THRILLING WAR DRAMA. "Red, White and Blue" Enthusiastically Received at Metropolitan.

The first presentation in this City of "Red, White and Blue," a stirring military drama, founded on incidents in Cuba during the Spanish-American War, was received with the wildest enthusiasm by a large audience at the Metropolitan Theater last night. The play itself, like all successful war dramas, abounds in thrilling climaxes and bloody scenes of a highly melodramatic character; yet there is woven into the plot a tender, love story, and there are plenty of humorous lines and funny situations that give full play to the comedy artists of the company. The play was ably staged, and it was presented with that vim and go that kept the audience in a flutter of expectation.

The Metropolitan Stock Company has been greatly strengthened since "O'Brien, the Contractor," held the boards, and besides the excellent cast, the company has added a number of new players. In all, about 30 people took part in the play.

Charles W. King, the leading man, appeared in the role of Phineas Weaver, a war correspondent, who could fight and make love as well as write. The part of Blackie Wilson was ably presented by Miss Laura Adams, a Scotch-Irish lass, who was cleverly interpreted by Max Seale, who will be remembered as having made his last appearance on the Portland stage in the ill-fated "Charcoal Lane." Important Political Gatherings. At a meeting of the leading members of the U. S. Grant Republican Club yesterday afternoon arrangements were completed for the proposed gathering at Gruner's hall next Friday night, when State Senator George C. Broward will deliver the address. It was decided to hold the meeting at the largest hall that has been held in the ward since the Presidential election.

On motion a large number of special invitations to prominent Republicans in the City and Clackamas County were ordered issued. T. C. Devlin was appointed a committee of one to issue the invitations. The committee on reception was named as follows: R. E. Sewall, M. G. Griffin, George Cameron, H. C. Smith and John Tomlinson. On motion, Mr. Devlin was instructed to send special invitations to the Eighth Ward, the Sellwood, Sunnyside, Multnomah, the Ninth Ward, Straight Republican Club, and such other clubs as he may think proper. The Southern Pacific Bank, a fine musical organization, was engaged to furnish music for that evening.

Political Notes. The committee on constitution and by-laws of the Multnomah-Union Republican Club, which met yesterday, and about completed its work, and its report will be submitted at the meeting next Thursday evening. The hall committee has been looking around for a hall for public for about seven years. A report to make at that time. Consolidation of the Clubs into one has proved a popular movement.

Two Deaths. Fred Jones died at his home at Sunny-side, the north side of the Base Line road Saturday afternoon, after an extended illness, of consumption. He was 39 years old, and leaves a wife, but no children. He had lived in his present home for one year, but had been a resident of Portland for about seven years. The funeral will take place today, and Burial's Cemetery will be the place of interment.

East Side Notes. There was a joint meeting of Summer Post and Summer Relief Corps at the Ross hall Saturday night. On that occasion the department commander, and Corps President were present and made addresses.

T. W. Cuthbert, who has been connected with the Southern Pacific carshops for the past three years, will leave for the west on the first of the month. Cuthbert has a host of friends at the shops and elsewhere, who will wish him a pleasant trip.

The Game of Bowls. Newcastle (Eng.) Chronicle. Although bowls is an ancient British game, it is still popular. It is played on a smooth, level piece of greenward, generally about 40 yards long surrounded by a trench about six inches deep. Edinburgh is believed to have the largest bowling greens. In that city there are numerous clubs, each with its own separate bowling green. There is a fine bowling green at Magdalen, near Sheffield. This
