

CITY NEWS IN BRIEF

Amusements Tonight.
MARQUAM GRAND—Jeffries-Sharkey Fight.
CORDRAY'S THEATRE (Washington street)—"The Dancing Girl."
METROPOLITAN THEATRE—"All Mixed."

DEATH OF ROBERT M. STOWELL.—Robert M. Stowell, who has been suffering from tuberculosis of the digestive organs for over a year, died at the residence of his father-in-law, W. T. Boddy, 1418 Seventh street, North, at 5 o'clock yesterday morning. After graduating from the High School he was employed for some time as a shipping clerk by M. Sells & Co. Something over a year ago he was seized by a disease which baffled the skill of the physicians, and finally he submitted to an operation, through which it was learned that his disease was an unusual form of tuberculosis, his lungs being perfectly sound, and only his digestive and absorptive organs being affected. He has been constantly failing since his illness began, but kept up his course and cheerfulness, even when it became evident that there was no hope of recovery. His changed condition gave warning of his approaching end, and his parents, who have been at his bedside for some time, and his mother came down and was with him when he died. He left a wife, to whom he was married not long before the beginning of his sickness.

SEIZING A COMPANION.—The payment of the judgment secured by Brauer against the city for pay withheld from firemen, has caused applications to be made for settlement of two other claims advanced by firemen against the city. The first is for $17,500, and the other for $20,000. The circumstances connected with these claims are not exactly similar nor so favorable for the firemen as those in the Brauer case, and it is said that the city has a good chance for winning in both cases. The city did win in one of these cases, but the Supreme Court sent it back to the lower court to be tried over again in some other way. The city manager could be pleased to arrive at a satisfactory compromise with the city, and just before election is a good time for making arrangements of this kind, and considerable pressure is being brought to bear to have such a compromise brought about. Some city officials are quite anxious to arrange for a compromise, but others oppose it, and it is uncertain whether a compromise can be induced to agree to any compromise.

BOOM IN THE RATTAN MARKET.—The receipt of a small quantity of rattan by the Street-Cleaning Department has enabled the street-sweeping machines to be put in order for a time, and produced a very gratifying change in the appearance of the paved streets. The steel wire ordered from the East for the machines, which when rattan could not be procured, has been sidetracked and lost sight of on the way. A Chinese firm in San Francisco, which imports rattan, is expecting a shipment before long, and it is expected that for this article from the large number of towns in the Union where street-sweeping machines are used. A few days ago they received a small shipment, and it is expected that among the numerous customers Portland receiving enough to last about a month. The general use of rattan for street-sweeping in this country has created a boom in the rattan market, and the Orient, and furnished employment for a large number of Asiatics.

SCARCITY OF CHINESE LABORERS.—Cannermen all along the Coast are having difficulty in securing Chinese laborers. Most of them here and on the Sound have the principal men, such as those who cut the tin and solder cans, secured, but find it difficult to get a sufficient number for other purposes. Eldred Bue, who has just returned from a visit to San Francisco, says the same condition of affairs prevails there. Chinese laborers are in demand at $15 per day. Alaska cannermen have only about 70 per cent of the number of Chinese they need, and they pay all an advance of $40, and some secure practically all their pay in advance. Many of the Chinese cannermen are now working at from $20 to $25 per week, 11 hours per day, and receive 15 cents per hour for extra time, so they never complain if they have to work overtime. In the more hours they have to work the better they are pleased.

FOR THOSE INTERESTED.—It is but proper to announce that the advertisements now appearing in the magazine entitled "The Northern Pacific Wonderland, 1900," were necessarily prepared from six to eight weeks ago, and when we thought the publication would be out at about that time. Unfortunately unforeseen difficulties have delayed the printers, and we will not be able to begin distribution of these books before April 1. All requests, accompanied by 5 cents in stamps, will be promptly attended to. A copy of Wonderland, 1900, mailed to each person asking for it as soon as possible. Requests for Wonderland 1900 should be sent to Charles S. Fee, general passenger agent, Northern Pacific Railway, St. Paul, Minn.

MILLMAN INJURED.—George Smith, an employee of the Eastern Lumber Company, was badly injured yesterday afternoon while working in the mill. He fell with two other men, he was engaged in turning a cant timber, when the carriage started and took him with it, throwing him among a lot of lumber. It was thought at first that he was seriously injured, but on a careful examination by Dr. Jeffers, the company physician, it was found that there were no bones broken, and that the injuries were not serious. He was then taken to his home in an ambulance, where he will have to remain for a week or so.

CLASS WORK AND BASKET-BALL.—At the regular class work, the Vancouver Athletic Club basketball team will play the Business Men's team, and an exciting game is expected. The first of a series of games between these teams the second to be played at Vancouver. The regular class work of the evening will not be put off, but will begin 15 minutes earlier, and the basketball games will be held at the same time. The friends and members of the association are cordially invited.

COMPLETED ITS ORGANIZATION.—The Republican Club of Portland met last night at room 307 Worcester block and completed its organization by the election of the following officers: President, Dr. S. E. Joseph; Vice-president, George L. Storey; Secretary, Charles E. Lockwood; Treasurer, W. A. Storey; executive committee, Dr. O. P. S. Plummer, F. A. Hancock and J. T. Grier. The executive committee then met and issued invitations to the Presidents of all the Republican clubs in Portland to meet with the club in the Worcester block next Monday evening.

CRAWFISH IN MARKET.—The crawfish season may be considered as fairly commenced, as over 100 dozen of these crustaceans were brought to market from some point on the Columbia yesterday. They are of medium size, but sell readily for 25 cents a dozen. At this price they will never become an article of common food, as the cost of the necessary wine and spices for cooking them will be absorbed by those who have well-filled pockets, and an appetite for crawfish and beer.

ELECTION PAY READY.—Judges and clerks of the late school election will receive their fees on calling at the School Clerk's office, in the City Hall, any time today. There are an even 100 of them, who are entitled to secure $2 each for their day's work.

BROWN'S IN TOWN.—but not in the trust. I am not a member of the Bicycle Repairers' Union, and my prices will not advance. Ed. F. Brown, 22 Sixth.

WRESTLING, SPARTAN, ATHLETIC, EXPO.—Saturday.

FINEST TURKISH BATHS in the Northwest, third floor Oregonian Building.

CANNON VS. McMillan, wrestling match, Saturday.

DIED FROM NATURAL CAUSE.—An inquest was held yesterday afternoon at Holman's undertaking parlors by the Coroner, Dr. Rand, over the body of Leo Knudde, the young Belgian who died suddenly, Monday, at the house of Mr. Vershaellen, 655 Hood street. Several witnesses described the circumstances surrounding his death and Dr. Hines testified that the death was due to organic heart disease. A verdict in accordance with these facts was rendered.

THREATENED HER BROTHER-IN-LAW.—Rose Oliver was arraigned in police court yesterday charged with drawing a "gun" and threatening to shoot her brother-in-law, Oscar Oliver. She was bound over to the grand jury. The alleged offense occurred at her own house.

LOST HER HUSBAND.—The Chief of Police has received an inquiry from Mrs. W. Skarke, of Keswick, California, who desires to know the whereabouts of her husband, a seaman on the revenue cutter Rush. When last seen he wore a sailor's uniform.

NICOLL, THE TAILOR. has just received a large variety of fine foreign and domestic fabrics for gentlemen's garments to order. The designs and colorings in new shirtwaists, even with it is beyond evidence that there was no hope of recovery. His changed condition gave warning of his approaching end, and his parents, who have been at his bedside for some time, and his mother came down and was with him when he died. He left a wife, to whom he was married not long before the beginning of his sickness.

ATHLETIC CARNIVAL, Expo., Saturday, 2c and 5c.

HOLBEIN PHOTOGRAPHS.

Now on Exhibition in the Portland Library.

A portion of the Holbein photographs owned by the Portland Art Association are the week on exhibition at the Library. The most important works of Holbein are noted in the following list, accompanied by notes which it is hoped will be helpful to all inclined to study the works of this great German master:

Portrait of Hans Holbein the Younger, born in Augsburg, 1465; died in England, 1533; his art career developed in Basel, and he retained his citizenship there, even after many years' residence in England and a court position under Henry VIII.

Portrait of Boniface Amerbach, a wealthy, cultivated and noble-minded young lawyer of Basel; Holbein's most intimate friend of his own age, and his appreciative patron. To Amerbach, Basel owes the foundation of its art museum and the greatest collection contained therein, namely, a priceless collection of Holbein's works. Holbein and Amerbach were both under 25 when this beautiful portrait was painted.

Erasmus, of Rotterdam, the greatest "humanist" of Europe at the period. This learned man was the friend and helper and delightful companion of our young painter. We have already heard of Erasmus as the friend, companion and eulogist of Durer.

Erasmus, or Frobenius, of Basel, a contemporary of Koburger of Nuremberg; the most scholarly printer of Europe. Erasmus of Rotterdam located himself in Basel because he wished Froben to publish his books. The young Holbein designed title pages and decorative alphabets for Froben, and was doubtless on intimate terms with him.

Portrait of Sir Thomas More, an intimate friend and correspondent of Erasmus. One of the earliest portraits of Erasmus was painted by Holbein, and Sir Thomas More with a letter, in which Erasmus eulogized the young artist. An association with Erasmus seems to have directed Holbein's attention to England, and as he could not support his family in Basel by brush and pencil combined, he started for England, armed with a letter of introduction from Erasmus to More.

Portrait of Erasmus, who has just returned from a visit to San Francisco, says the same condition of affairs prevails there. Chinese laborers are in demand at $15 per day. Alaska cannermen have only about 70 per cent of the number of Chinese they need, and they pay all an advance of $40, and some secure practically all their pay in advance. Many of the Chinese cannermen are now working at from $20 to $25 per week, 11 hours per day, and receive 15 cents per hour for extra time, so they never complain if they have to work overtime. In the more hours they have to work the better they are pleased.

REALISTIC PICTURES.
Jeffries-Sharkey Fight Fought Over at the Marquam.

One of the most interesting entertainments, both from a scientific and athletic standpoint, was given in the Jeffries-Sharkey fight pictures, at the Marquam Grand Theatre, last night. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the contest begins. The pictures are certainly a marvelous exposition of modern photography. All the movements of the principals in the ring are given very clearly, and there is no loss of the flickering that is so trying to the eyes. The only flaw that can be at all noticeable are, first, the absence of the critical point in the last round, and second, the practically the decisive period of the fight, when Jeffries' glove came off and Sharkey is very wobbly; and second, the slight waving motion of the pictures on the canvas. The pictures are the work of a nearly perfect camera. There was a large crowd present last night, and the interest in the physical encounter pictures was aroused from the first picture flashed on the canvas. The two preliminary pictures represented the modern gladiators entering the ring, accompanied by their retinue of followers. The introduction of Referee Simon, the character of the rules of the contest to the audience and other minor details. The second series shows the gladiators stripped of their armor, and the