BEARS THE SICNATURE

LAKEVIEW, Or., March 21.—George Small came to Lakeview today from Silver Lake, and brought with him a claw and a tooth af the famous grizzly bear killed near Silver Lake a few days ago. Mr. Small was one of the hunters, and gives an interesting account of the hunt. There were six in the party of hunters. five men and a boy 12 years old. The bear, which had been committing depre-dations on stock in that community for vert, who lives at the Deschutes, 100 miles away, and has a state reputation as a hunter, was sent for. He arrived last week with his dogs, and the bear's trail was soon located about eight miles from Silver Lake. After following it about six miles, the dogs "treed" the monster in a cave in a mountain on the headwaters of Silver Creek. The trail that led to the bear's den was along the shelves of a cliff beneath the rimrocks, and there was but one way of getting to it. The hunters followed on, climbing along the project-ing rocks, and reached the mouth of the They found a small entrance to the dark cavern, and the dogs refused to enter. They tried to smoke the grizzly out, but he refused to come

Then Jeff Howard, an old resident of this county, and a hunter and trapper this county, and a hunter and trapper, suggested a plan more daring than that of Israel Putnam, and proceeded to carry it out. By peering into the cave for a long time, he discovered that there were two apartments, and he could tell from the growls of the bear that he was in the larger one. He also discovered that the walls that separated the two caves were of shell rock, and that there were crevices and openings between them. He crevices and openings between them. He had the other five hunters climb upon the projecting clims above, so as to be out of danger, and where they could cover the entrance of the cave with their guns, and he took a large pole and entered the cave. Groping in the darkness, he discovered the entrance that led into the smaller cave and entered this one and got in the rear of the grizzly. He then began to prod the monster, and soon made it so uncomfort able for him that, with a feroclous howl the animal made for the open air. The minute he reached the cliffs, Billy Ball, the Indian, shot him through the neck from above, and a few more well-directed shots completed the work.

He proved to be a monster plantigrade genus bear, and a conservative estimate placed his weight at 1200 pounds. Some thought he would weigh considerably more. His skin, which was prime, weighed 60 pounds, and was eight feet in length. He carried four inches of fat on the back. One of his clawa-the middle one measured 5½ inches in length and one inch in width.

It also lies in Lake and Harney Counties. The surveying party's head-quarters will be at least two months in making the survey.

W. K. Barry, a rancher of North War-ner, in this county, set fire to some tules on a tract of land Saturday, to prepare it for the plow, and the fire got beyond control and burned over more than 3000 acres of ground and destroyed the home of a rancher named Ramsby. The neigh-bors did not get the fire under control until Tuesday.

The Hardy Goat Becoming Popular in the Long Tom Country.

MONROE, Or., April 1.—It is quite evi-dent from the present actions of many ranchers in this section that the acreage of grain in the future will not be so of grain in the future will not be so heavy as it has been in the past. Beverai men who have heretofore been farming on rather an extensive scale are now seeding down their fields to grass and turning their ready money into other channels, the most popular of which seems to be the goat business. Of course, cattle and sheep receive some attention from those who are giving up farming, but the goat seems to hold out inducements to them which no other domestice animal can duplicate. The back fields, the wooded swamm which no other domestice animal can duplicate. The back fields, the wooded swamp and brushy sidehill, which have never been sources of much revenue, now support small flocks of these hardy animals, and the mountain ranges even are now being turned to good account.

Among the owners of the larger flocks here are George A. Houck owner of the "Lone Pine stock farm," L. H. Hawley and E. B. McEiroy, While these people are using mountainous grazing lands for their goats, numerous small farmers own fewer numbers each, and nover before have so many of these animals been win-tered in this locality.

Not the Best Method.

Pittsburg Dispatch.
Out in Oregon they have taken a novel means to keep out the plague. A fee of 5 cents has been offered for every dead rat delivered to the Chief of Police of Astoria, the idea being that if the infection ever reaches there it will not be spread by rats. This reason is not altogether sound. The Oregon rats are not infected. They are not dangerous unless they should come into contact with rats from some infected ship. But suppose the Oregonians succeed in annihilating all their rates and that then an infected vessel should visit their shores. Would not a ratiless town or territory offer extra inducements for every infected rodent to desert that ship for the rat forage that would abound in such a community? Then if a scalp premium should be offered again the office of the Chief of Police would simply become a pesthouse, and the premium would be an invitation to every idle resident to seek invitation to every idle resident to seek contact with the contagion. There are better ways of fitting the plague than by exterminating the rate in advance.

WHO SHALL PROSECUTE?

CANDIDATES FOR DISTRICT ATTOR-NEY IN THIRD DISTRICT.

Scers-Other Countles' Claims,

SALEM, Or., April 1.—Since the Re-publican County Convention settled all questions regarding county candidates, the questions regarding county candidates, the Republican politicians have turned their attention to the matter of selecting a can-didate for the office of Prosecuting At-torney for the Third Judicial District. This district is composed of Marion, Linn, Polk, Yamhili and Tiliamook Counties, and the convention for the selection of a Repub-lican candidate will be heid in connection with the state convention at Portland with the state convention at Portland, April 12. The district is entitled to 62
delegates, apportioned among the counties as follows: Marion. 22; Linn, 14;
Polk. 9; Yamhill, 12; Tillamook, 5.
Aspirants for the nomination are quite plentiful, each county having at least one candidate. Before the primaries, Linn County had two aspirants—J. N. Duncan and A. M. Cannon—both of Albany. By the outcome of a contest in the primaries. Cannon failed to get the support of the Linn County delegation, and dropped out of the race. It is now undertsood that J. N. Duncan and N. M. Newport, both of Albany, will divide the Linn delegation. and will each get support in Marion. Both are men of considerable experience in practice of law, and have a wide acquaintance in Linn, Marion and Polk, Marion has only one Republican candidate for the place, John H. McNary, of Salem. McNary has served four years as Deputy District Attorney under the present prosecutor, and has a wide acquaintance over the district. If he shall fail to have the support of all of Marion's 22 delegates, it will be because this county already has both Circuit Judges. The other counties contend that Marion should not ask for the District Attorneyship also.

J. N. Hart, of Dallas, is Polk County's candidate. Hart is just closing his second term as County School Superintendent.
He is at the disadvantage of having had little experience in legal practice, but the Polk County delegation will urge his nomination on the score that their county has not been accorded a state officer for 16 years, and has not had a Circuit Judge or years, and has not had a Circuit Judge or District Attorney for 21 years.

Yamhill's favorite is R. L. Conner, of McMinnville. Lack of experience will be urged against him, though his ability is unquestioned. He is considered one of the best vote-getters among the aspirants, It will be urged in his favor that Yamhill County has at present no state officer.

Tillamook's five delegates will go to the convention to support T. B. Handley for District Attorney. They will be hampered by the fact that Handley resides in an isolated part of the district, and also by his lack of a wide acquaintance. Locally, also, he failed to win at the primaries.

The Linn County candidates will be handicapped by an argument similar to that urged against the nomination of a Marion County Attorney. Linn County is the home of the present Attorney-General and also of Supreme Judge Wolverton, whose renomination is sought by the Linn County delegation.

POPULISTS HAD NO "SLATES."

Lists-Primary Judges Got There. OREGON CITY, April 1.—It was asserted by several populiate before the primaries were held yesterday that there would be no slated tickets for delegates to the county convention, as the Republi-cans had. It is true that no printed tick-ets were in evidence, but in Oregon City precinct No. 2 several copies of written tickets lay on the table. In one precinct the names of 10 candidates were posted on the wall, and the voter selected seven delegates to be voted for from this list. In this precinct the three judges were elected delegates, and in two other city precincts two of the judges at each polling place were also elected delegates. The objection was raised that at the Republican primaries printed tickets were used, but nevertheless the opposition also had printed tickets, and the voter could take his choice—Brownell or anti-Brownell.
