Some Doubtful History.

MANILA, March 2.—(Special Correspondence.)—The trip to Manila across the Pacific is an old story now, but by way of Suez it is still full of interest and much sought after by the soldiers who sail for the far-off Philippines. Having been fortunate enough to make the much-desired passage, I take pleasure in relating what I know of it to the boys of the Second Oreson.

Oregon.

After sailing out past Liberty statue and Sandy Hook, the first land eighted was the coast of Portugal—10 days out of New York. Passing in through the Straits of Gibraltar, with the coast of Africa loom-ing up to starboard, and the harren hills of Spain rolling away to port, we enter the blue Mediterranean and drop anchor at the Rock of Gibraltar. This great "stone lion" is 1400 feet high and three miles long. It is connected to Spain by a narrow isthmus, which is neutral ground. The rock bristles with guns, but very few are visible from water. It is honey-combed with tunnels and galleries, but visitors are not permitted to see many of them. but visitors are not permitted to see many of them. England has 5000 soldiers here and claims to keep seven years' provisions stored away in the rocky rocesses. The Straits are 14 miles wide here, but every inch is under the guns of Gibraltar. Diinch is under the guns of Gibraltar. Di-rectly opposite is the Rock of Ceuta, on the coast of Africa. This rock and Gibral-tar were known to the ancients as the "Pillars of Hercules," and were long re-garded as the western boundary of the world. Sunny Spain stretches away bar-ren and mountainous. A number of towns are in sight which look white and clean, but we are told that they are quite the but we are told that they are quite the everse at close quarters. Sailing from here four days brings us to the Island of Malta, the historic island where Paul of Tarsus was shipwrecked. This island was also held 20 years by the virtuous Knights-Templar, who made it the stronghold of Christianity against the Turks. England keeps a strong gar-rison here, and the city is fortified with mon here, and the city is fortified with an old wall similar to that at Manila. The English soldiers pointed out to us the place where Paul was shipwrecked, and where the battles between the Turks and Christians were fought. At one place they fought a battle in the water, swimming with swords in their teeth. They said that on a clear day they can see the Island of Sicily, 60 miles away. There is a building here which was built by Na-poleon when he conquered the island, and any number of interesting sights for tour-ists. The native Maltese look like Italians. The Mediterranean is a peculiar body of water, in that it has no tide. Although it is midwinter, the weather is warm and pleasant, and the sky and sea blue. It is a pleasure to travel here, as we are continually passing islands and getting occa-sional glimpses of the coast of Africa. Three days from Malta bring us to Port Said, at the entrance of the Suez Canal. The country about here is low and flat, and not visible far out at sea. The first and not visible far out at sea. The first thing we see on coming up to the city is a large statue of De Lesseps. The town itself is a true image of Coney Island. It is a small place, but has a mixed popu-lation. We are now in the land of veiled women, flowing robes, camels and sone of the desert. One part of the city is called "Arab town," and here the Midway lourishes in all its Oriental splendor. The canal starts from here and run-brough a sandy desert to the Red Sea Ships must run very slowly to avoid wash-ing the banks, and though it is only 30 miles long, we were 24 hours going through. In places it is so narrow that we could have jumped ashore, while if two ships met, one of them must tie up to the bank. In some places it is walled, while in others

The finest sight we saw was a caravan camped in the moonlight. It was a pack-train bound from Arabia over into Egypt. The camels were lying down in a long line, and the white-robed Arabs were gathered about the fires smoking.

In one place the canal widens out into great expanse, known as Bitter Lake. Our Chaplain explained to us that the Red Sea once extended up to here, and that it was here the waters divided for the children of Israel and swallowed up Pharach's could see Mount Migdul, where the by could see Mount Migdul, where the Israelites camped in Egypt, while on the other side the barren desert stretched away toward the promised land of Cananan. Away in the distance loomed up Mount Sinal, where Moses received the Ten Commandments. The utter dryness of this country gives of this country gives a person the impres-sion that rain has never fallen here, and that if it would fall, it would be absorbed before it reached the ground. before it reached the ground.

Passing out at the City of Suez, we enter the Red Sea. This sea looks small on the map, but we were five days going through it-four of them out of sight of This is one of the hot pla the earth, and it is not uncommon for the pitch to melt out of the decks. When there is a breeze it is only a hot wind from the deserts of Arabia or Nubla, and ships usually keep the hose playing on deck. Just before passing through the Straits of Bab el Mandeb, we passed a group of Islands known as the "Twelve Aposties." There are just 12 of them, and all are of

We stopped for com at Aden, on the coast of Arabia, It is on a small island, near the coast, and belongs to England. Our ship was surrounded here, as in other ports, by boats loaded with fruit, curios, These Arabs are excitable people etc. These Arabs are excitable people, and as they coaled ship they ran about shouting and gestleulating with both hands high in the air. They were all hungry, but when a sailor gave one of them a plece of pork he hurled it to the deck with a Mohammedan curse. Like most tropical people, they admire red hair, and some of them had their hair plastered over with lime to bleach it.

tered over with lime to bleach it. On leaving here we saw the last of the desert that has been with us all the way from Egypt. The next land we sighted was the Island of Ceylon, where. Sir Thomas Lipton has his extensive tea plantations. The part we saw was moun-tainous and covered with forests of heavy timber. We passed within five miles of the beach, and when the breeze was off shore we could detect the odor of spices. The mountains and forests resemble the Cascade Mountains of Oregon. Our next stop was at Singapore. This is a large city, with clean, wide streets and good buildings. The Malays are finelooking people, with clear-cut features and eagle eyes. The women wear rings in their noses. We saw some of the Queen's native soldiers here, and fine men they are, tall, strong and blackbearded. Lucky for us that we have not such men to fight in the Philippines. The Eng-lish soldiers could not be good enough to us here. In fact, it was so all along the line. At Gibraltar they cheered us, at Malta their band played "The Star-Spangled Banner," and at Singapore they dragged us into the saloons. This sudden friendship is regarded with some suspicion by the wily American, as things were not always thus. Perhaps they have an extense.

There is no more "combat" here now, but things are still unsettled. Everything seems familiar—the Filipinos still scratch themselves, the lisards sing the same song and things are much as they were a year ago, GEORGE STEUNENBERG.

Lower Court Had Jurisdiction

Judge George yesterday dismissed the petitioh of Maggie Riley for a writ of habeas corpus, holding that the sentence pronounced by the Municipal Court of one year for larceny by ballee of $5 was according to law, and binding. Judge George held that larceny by ballee is only a species of larceny, and the statutes having conferred jurisdiction upon Justice's Courts of the crime of larceny in the lesser degree, where the penalty is imprisonment gree, where the penalty is imprisonment in the County Jail, or a fine, the sentence pronounced by Judge Hennessy is valid, and would be sustained. The court found the case was as one of petit larceny, so far as punishment is concerned. If the amount was more than $35 it would come amount was more than as it would come under the head of grand larceny in the degree of punishment, and the Municipal Court would then not have jurisdiction. This was the position assumed by Mr. Giltner, Deputy. Prosecuting Attorney, in his argument of the case, and Judge George, after examining the law, coincided with this view. ed with this view.

One More Try for Divorce.

Rachel Hill has once more sued her usband, Fred Hill, for a divorce, on the ground of cruel treatment, and she alleges that he continues to indulge in ardent spirits, notwithstanding his promises not to do so. Mrs. Hill avers that after their last experience in court, when Judge Cle-land refused to dissolve the matrimonial knot, she and the defendant made up, and lived together again. For a time, she states, all was well, but Hill soon forgot his piedges, and began to call her had We saw several gangs of camels at work carrying dirt away from the banks. Each camel would kneel to receive his load and then rise and go lumbering off with it, the picture of awkwardness and usefulness. CANTATA OF "ESTHER"

THE SUCCESSFUL REPETITION TAYLOR-STREET CHURCH.

A Large and Very Appreciative At dience Present-Work of Chorus and Principals.

The Taylor-Street Church was crowded to its utmost capacity last night for the second performance of "Queen Esther." Standing room was at a premium, and this, together with the appreciative attention accorded various scenes by the big audience, proved that the heart of the people was reached by the event. The production was characterized by smoothness and the complete absence of unpleasant hitches, such as usually accompany amateur performances. The curtain went ant hitches, such as usually accompany amateur performances. The curtain went up on time, and there were no long waits between scenes. When it is remembered that there are is numbers to the cantata, the significance of this fact will be recognized. The stage had been hung with choice Turkish and Persian rugs, which lent an air of Orientalism to the scenes; the costumes had been planned with special reference to that period of Jewish history to which the beautiful Biblical story belongs, and some of them were exceedingly sumptuous—the dress of the High Priest, Hegal, for example, which consisted of a rich red gown and cap, with vestments of light silk heavily cap, with vestments of light silk heavily embroidered in scarlet flowers. The work of the chorus was uniformly

The work of the chorus was uniformly good, for amateur work of this kind. The music of the cantata was well suited to their voices, since it is simple and melodious without being too severe a tax upon the powers of non-professional singers. To E. S. Miller, the conductor, and to Ralph Hoyt and J. F. Bamford, the accompaniets much of the credit of the per-Ralph Hoyt and J. F. of excellence.

Mra. 3. Pollett Clifton, of Oakland, Cal., took the role of Esther. Her voice is a clear, ringing soprano of considerable power and range, such as would naturally prove effective in a large church. Her part was taken without any faltering or lapse of memory, this being indeed an important feature of all the work that was done during the evening by principals was done during the evening by principals and chorus. Miss Eva West made a particularly attractive prophetess, the sim-plicity of her black robe being admirably fitted to show off the grace of her movements and the charm of her gestures.

Jesse Waddell gave great enjoyment by his sweet singing, his voice being one of much sweetness. Some of the most delightful musical numbers of the evening were the duets between Haman (P. I. Packard) and Zeresh, his wife (Mrs. F. H. Fleming). Their voices blended very agreeably, and the audience would doubt-less have been glad to encore these, and other numbers, if they had felt free to do so. Much of the heavy work of the can-tata fell upon E. D. Allen, as Ahasuerus, the King. The entire performance was an exceedingly pleasant and enjoyable one to the big audience.

The registration for the first year was 236; during the next ses-sion it was 234, and this year 331 people sion it was 24, and this year 331 people took advantage of the classes. Next year, the chairman raid, other new classes would be planned for. Already the Portland school covered a wider field in the way of different branches than any other association night school in the country, with the exception of that at Chicago.

Judge Fenton selected for his subject "The Self-Made Man." He spoke interestingly for half an hour, and told of great men in the past who had reached the full measure of earthly success without the advantages such as this and other night schools afforded. He said, in speaking of self-made men, one's thoughts natnight schools afforded. He said, in speaking of self-made men, one's thoughts naturally reverted to the practical or breadwinning side; but there are successes not forthern Pacific Opens New Station -New Double Train Service-Railroad Notes.

Portland jobbers will be interested to read the following relating to shipments going into Canada and back again into American territory:

November 9, 1826, the auditor of the Spokane Fails & Northern, A. M. Thomas, notified agents that he had been advised by the Collector of Customs that the customs regulations did not permit of shipments being made from a point in the United States through Canadian territory to another point in the United States through Canadian territory to another point in the United States, except in sealed cars. Auditor Thomas stated that, as his line had no rail connections with the Canadian Pacific, either at Nelson or Rossiand, it could not accept shipments for Republic and other United States points, when routed via Northport and the Canadian Pacific. The only available route then open was via Meyers Fails, able route then open was via Meyers Fails Marcus or Blassburg, and the several

RAIL AND WATER RATES.

Interstate Commerce Commission Hearing at San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 3.-A. C. Ru lofson, of Baker & Hamilton, hardware dealers, resumed the witness-stand today in the investigation being conducted by the Interstate Commerce Commission regarding the readjustment of rates between Pacific Coast points and the Middle West. Rulofson said that the firm to which he belonged was a party to no agreement re-stricting it to a certain territory. In the last five years freight rates between here and the East have decreased the selling territory of his firm. West-bound rates are lower than east-bound rates. There is are lower than east-bound rates. There is no pooling of business or profits in the hardware business, or any other business that Rulofson knows of among the jobbers in this territory. Prices on the Pacific Coast are made by adding carload prices to freight rates. Allowance is made for a fair profit. Jobbers endeavor to make the prices when the profit to the profit of the profit of the profit of the profit. maintain prices when fixed by the man-ufacturer. There was nothing in the methods prior to June, 1898, when the Milwaukee tariff was adopted, different from existing methods. The only effect of the tariff has been that instead of adding 60 tariff has been that instead of adding 60 cents to the Pittsburg price, the local jobbers now add 75 cents. Mr. Rulofson testified that an increase in the rates on Eastern railways would shut out the New England manufacturer, restricting the purchasing field to the Middle West.

G. W. Sterry, representing the Santa Fe, brought out by questions that the effect, so far as the Pacific Coast jobber is concerned, of the lowering of differ-is concerned, of the lowering of differlocal jobbers would be able to get all the goods they want from Illinois and the Middle West. Rulofson insisted, however, that while this might be the temporary effect, the removal of competition would be bad for the local jobbers. Mr. Rulof-son insisted that if Pacific Coast merson insisted that if Pacine Coast mer-chants were not protected they would re-sort to the sea routes. Commissionel Knapp then took the witness in hand. "Mr. Rulofson, if there were no ocean—" "There would be no Ban Francisco," interrupted the witness. "We would not be here. This hearing would not be in prog-ress. The ocean is a factor, and there is no getting around the proposition. With reference to overland transportation, we are at the rim of the wheel; but comercially, we are nearer New York than

"But if there were no ocean, the Eastern rates to San Francisco would be nigher, would they not?"
"That would be the logical contention

"That would be the logical contention of any man who is not a railroad man."
"Is the railroad under any obligation to give a cheaper rate to San Francisco than to Denver?"
"No obligation. The railroad can charge what it likes, We have the ocean."

"But what right has San Francisco to a cheaper rate?"
"The right of might. I would not com nel the railroads to give us rates, except as they find it to their own advantage.

A number of other witnesses follow Rulofson, testifying on the same general wife of Joseph Creech, a saloon-keepel on South Main street, lost her life this morning, while trying to protect her husband from the bullet of a would-be assassin. The murderer, wno is unknown, had had a trifling quarrel with Creech in the latter's saloon, about 5:30 this morning. The stranger drew a gun and snapped it at Creech. It falled to go off. The stranger ran out and Creech after him. Mrs. Creech, fearing for the safety of her husband, followed. Outside the of her husband, followed. Outside the stranger snapped his gun again at Creech, and it failed to discharge again. Mrs. Creech jumped between them just as the stranger aimed another at him. This time the gun went off, and the bullet struck the woman in the breast. She died in a few minutes. Creech started after the man, but was unable to catch up with him. Ed Allison was arrested later and taken to the city jail. After being locked up he managed to make his escape. He pried off some of the wall covering, got to the floor above, and made his exit over the roof of the jail, and the roofs of some adjoining buildings.

Oregon Mining Laws. BROWNSVILLE, Or., April 2.—(To the a statement in The Oregonian in regard to the time in which work must be done on a mining claim under the law. The point at issue between several mining men of this city is the time in which a person who makes a location shall do the work re-quired to sink a 10-foot shaft upon it, or run a 10-foot tunnel, etc. The clipping which I enclose, as you will note, states that the statute allows only 60 days within which this work must be done after mak-ing the location. It is contended that this is wrong, and that the statutes provide that the time shall be within a period of 96 days from the time of locating a claim. Will you please publish in your valuable paper the exact time, if a mistake has been made in the number 80 instead of 90, and thus set many mining men right on the subject? A copy of the law here says to days, instead of 60.

F. M. BROWN. Minety days is right. The mining laws of Oregon were changed at the special session of the legislature in 1898. Among the provisions of general interest are: Section 1. Any person, a citizen of the United States, or one who has declared his intention to become such, who discovers a vein or lode of mineral-bearing rock in place upon the mappropriated public domain of the United States, within this state, may locate a claim upon such year or lode so discovered by course upon such vein or lode so discovered, by post-ing thereon a notice of such discoverey and lo-cation, which said notice shall contain, etc. Sec. 2. Such locator shall file for record with the recorder of conveyances, if there be one, who shall be the custodian of mining records and miners' liens, otherwise with the clerk of the county wherein said claim is situate, a copy of the notice so posted by him upon the lode or claim, within 30 days after the date of

sec. 3. Before the expiration of 90 days fr Sec. 3. Before the expiration of 90 days from the date of posting the said notice of discovery upon his claim, as aforesaid, the locator mus-sink a discovery shaft upon the claim located to a depth of at least 10 feet from the lowes-part of the rim of such shaft at the surface or desper if necessary, to show by such work a lode or vein of mineral deposit in place. Set cut or cross-cut or tunnel which cuts the lode at a depth of 10 feet, or an open cut at leas-siv feet deen four feet wide, and 10 feet in six feet deep, four feet wide, and 10 feet in length along the lode from the point where the same may be in any manner discovered, is equivalent to such discovery shaft. Such work shall not be deemed a part of the assessment work required by the Revised Statutes of the United States.

GRAPE-NUTS CURE. Good Food Works Salvation

"When I began the use of Grape-Nuts food for breakfast, I was suffering with nervous and stomach troubles. I found that Grape-Nuts furnished a nourishing, satisfying meal, that the stomach took to beautifully. I feel so much more satisfied and well-fed after a meal of Grape-Nuts, and do not have that disagreeable gorged and tight feeling in the stomach which so often used to accompany my meals when was using other foods.

"This proves to me that Grape-Nuts food is a highly condensed and nourishing ood which satisfies the system as no other food does, and causes no indigestion. It is a Godsend to all sufferers of stomach
