ALL KINDS OF CANINES

BIG DOG SHOW WILL OPEN IN CY-CLORAMA TODAY.

Aristocracy From All Over the Northwest Will Be on Exhibition-Making Hall Ready.

Portland's first dog show will launch its bark in the Cyclorama building, on North Third street, today. An array of canine aristocracy, with lineage extending back to the dogs who came over with Noan, will be the stars of the occasion, and will without doubt be glad to receive the admiration of as many of the public as can be crowded into the building. These will be no ordinary dogs, of the "both mongrel puppy, whelp and hound, and curs of low degree," order. They will be the finest lady and gentieman dogs in the land, and their object in being there is to show that each individual dog is finer and longer on coints than any other dog.

Long, low dachshunds, which are 10 minutes passing a given point; big, burly mastiffs, with smutty muzzles and teeth like a circular saw; brindled buildogs, looking as if they were only sorry there are so few dogs unlicked in the world; shaggy St. Bernard's, with benevolent countengnces and inordinate capacity for food; dinky little toy dogs, shrewd, business-like pointers, and calm and sedate setters; curly spaniels, with churlish dispositions; meagre greyhounds: lean and hungry fox-hounds, and yapping foxterriers will all be there, each housed in a bran splinter new cage, plentifully supplied with saw-dust, and of ample size to allow the animai enclosed therein to get up and shake himself when he desires to call attention to his superiority. dog show yesterday found that the battle no opportunity to induge such luxuries on of Gettysburg was still being energetically pay-day as their tastes demanded. Mr. waged around the walls, but in the midst Reichweine established in the Alhambra aged around the walls, but in the midst of war's alarms was a scene of remarkable peace and tranquility. On the right of Pickett's division was a large pen, bulit of new lumber, and luxuriously carpeted with sawdust. Upon this sawdust reposed the early arrivals at the show, patiently awaiting the completion of their pens, and putting in their time in blissful sum-Not a whimper, not a bark, not a howl was heard. Now and then one of the glumberers would slowly open his eyes, wink dreamily at his fellows, test the probable chances of getting up a little mill with a deg across the way, by a tug at his chain, and relapse into heavy sciousness.

All around them was the clatter of hammers, the siam bang of lumber pitched on the floor, and the heavy tread of carpenters, who were busy completing the apartments to be occupied by the canine nobility when on parade today. Tiers of cages run nearly around the walls, and other tiers extend across the hall. The big pen on the right of Pickett's division which was occupied by the early-comers yesterday, will be used during the show as a judging pen. There, at 1 o'clock this afternoon, the judges will lead forth the rival animals, scrutinize them critically, and begin to decide which are the prizewinners. The larger dogs will be muzzled, o that in the event they resent being de-ided against the judges will run no risk of harm.

On the north side of the hall a stage has been erected, which will be occupied part of the day by a troupe of highly cul-tured canine thespians, who will entertain the other dogs, and incidentally the spectators, by a high-class vaudeville p rform-ance. These dogs were on hand, inclosed in boxes, and surveying their surroundings with the weary, blase expression of the veteran actor. They seemed to be making the most of their rest, but at the same wore the this-is-a-h-of-a-place air which is never absent from the countenance of a player when he is off the stage. About 130 dogs will be entered in the how. They will come from all over the Northwest, and some of them from San Francisco, and they will represent the cream of canine society. No dog will be accepted who cannot show that he is of family, and has merits of his own into the bargain. Scrubs, either in breeding or disposition, will not be tolerated. The show will be open every day this

DROWNED IN THE RIVER.

Body of a Man Discovered With No Marks of Identification.

An unknown body was picked up in the river at the foot of Lovejoy street yesterday morning by a laborer ram d John Kel-leher. Examination satisfied Dr. Rand, Coroner, that the body had been in the river from one to two months. The only evidence tending to identity were two letters found in the pockets. One was written to Henry Costello, at Milwaukie, Or., and dated at Valley Falls, R. L. October Another was addressed to James Hall, 2 Manchester Road, Boatshop, Cub-bitt Town, London, England. On the up-per left-hand corner of this envelope was apparently the name of the writer in the following inscription: "If not called for within 10 days, return to S. Miller, Hupbard, Or." The letter began, "My dear cousin," and terminated with "Your lov-ing cousin, Mamie."

What connection the deceased had with of these names was not revealed at inquest held in the afternoon. As far as heard from, there was no one in Milwaukle who knew a man answering the description or to either of the names. The tops, which had been much worn, light jeans trousers, light-colored coat and vest, striped cotton shirt. He has been in the water so long that it is impossible to say anything about his features. Because of the Milwaukie address it was thought that he lived in that vicinity, and had drowned himself in the river opposite that city. The post-mortem examination convinces the physicians that death was due to drowning, rather than violence, as it was impossible to trace the marks of any blows. After Mr. Miller, of Hubbard, is heard from, perhaps some clew to the case will be had.

"DAD" REICHWEINE DEAD.

He Catered at Manila to the Boys of the Second Oregon.

News was received in Portland yester-News was received in Portland yester-day of the death in New York City of George Reichweine, Sr. Mr. Reichweine returned only a few weeks ago from Ma-nila, where he had been ever since the first expedition to the islands under General Anderson. For a long time he was chief pastry cook in the Hotel Portland, where his services made him one of the best-known bakers of the city. Although an old man and a scarred veteran of the Civil War, he arranged to accompany the Second Oregon to the Philippines, and cooked for some of the headquarters' messes until Manila surrendered. With keen business insight he then acquired an interest in the Albambra, the largest and most popular cafe of Manila, which proved a profitable business venture. a profitable business venture.

There was not a man of the Eighth Army Corps who did not know "Dad" Reichweine, and especially was this true of the members of the Second Oregon. When the American soldiers entered Manila they found customs and conditions entirely foreign to what they had known at home. Cooking was Spanish, cafes were conducted on a semi-Spanish and o his superiority.

A reporter who visited the scene of the scent army mess, there was an American lunch counter, or restaurant, where some of the familiar dishes of America could be procured. His busines was enormous for a considerable period. The Alhambra was overrun with custom, and greater facilities were repeatedly inred to accommodate the soldiers. Mr. Reichweine reaped his harvest, remaining at work with the tenacity of a man in towards restoring his depleted fortune of former years. After a year and a half he had saved what seemed sufficient to keep himself and family yet dependent on his labor in ease for the rest of his life, and came home. The family, consisting of his wife, three daughters and two sons, had been living at Montavilla. One of the sons, George W. P., Jr., enlisted as a private in Company F, Second Oregon, and was with his father in Luzon, returning to America only a short time after his father. Mr. Reichweine, Sr., made ar-rangements to move his family to New York City, where they formerly lived, and had gone there to secure a residence. The total amount aggregates about $100. A Third-street saloon is included among those complaining that Herren's paper has no value.

Herren seemed well-to-do while sofourning in Portland, and to all intents and purposes was here on legal business. His bill at the Imperial amounted to $50, which he said he would pay by check on his in Moscow. The check was accepted and sent to Moscow through the regular business channels, but returned promptly dis honored. The same experience was had by the St. Charles, although the amount was somewhat less. J. H. Moore's saloon, on Third street, sustained comparatively light loss through a confidence in Herren's

Last Friday the police were notified of the dishonored checks, and Chief Mc-Laughlan began a search for the man who had given them. He was confident Herren had not left the city at that time, and instituted a careful guard of the de-pots and wharves of outgoing trains end steamers. In some manner Herren passed through the lines, and was caught yester day in Tacoma by the police there. #### WILL BE BURIED

RODY OF JAMES HARRINGTON IS COMING HOME.

He Was One of the Heroes of the Fill. pino War, and the Pride of the Second Oregon.

James Harrington, the man of the Sec-ond Oregon Volunteers who won the high-est praise from his superiors bestowed during the Luzon campaign, is to have final resting-place in Oregon soil. Harrington was killed at Tabon bridge, near San Isidro, and was buried in the San Isidro cemetery, his grave being made obscure as possible that the Filipinos would not descrate it. While Chaplain Gilbert carefully prepared a plan of the plot and transmitted it to headquarters, it was not supposed that Harrington's body would ever be raised from the grave where his comrades laid him. Yesterday General Summers received a telegram stating that Harrington's body was at the Presidio, and would be shipped north this week. Harrington was a private in Company G, and was reputed one of the most eccentric members of the regiment. He was a miner by occupation, inured to hardship and danger, and possessed the instincts of a scout. In the earliest fight-ing he began manifesting these qualities. and soon was engaged in ionely excursions that seemed merely a temptation of fate. When General Lawton organized the band of scouts that did such spiendid work dur-ing the San Isidro campaign, and was seeking for a commander, but two names were considered, and these were W. H. South Dakota Regiment, and James Har-ringion, of the Oregons. Young was cho-sen, but the command was practically diyided with the Oregon man when fighting commenced. At San Miguel, where 18 scouts drove over 300 Filipinos from their trenches in a protracted engagement that will ever shine as an example of darling and courage. Young was wounded in the knee with a brass-couted Remington bullet, while he and Harrington were lead-ing the scouts over the bridge into the city. The brave leader was seen by the Filipinos to fall, and he thought they were roing to make an effort to either capture him or finish his life, when Harrington calmly assured him that the blacks would have to kill both if they charged back Harrington, by his coolness and skill, steadily pressed on across the bridge, drove four or five Filipino sharpshooters from a splendid position in the steeple of an old stone church, took the position himsalf and added materially to the discomfiture of the fleeing enemy. He was instantly killed a day or two later while at the head of a movement almost equally dangerous, which resulted in a few scouts charging a bridge driving the overpowering a part of the trenches by which the remainder could be enfilleded. When General Lawton heard of the deaths of Harrington and Young, who died of blood poisoning about the some moment Harrington was killed, he said he had lost the equal of a regiment of soldlers. In the General's dispatches to headquarters he said they were the two bravest men he had ever met. Arrangements for Har-rington's funeral at San Isidro were very pulet, General Lawton did not hear of the interment until after the soldier had been laid in the ground. Then he complained that he had not been notified, as he was preparing to attend, with his full staff, as a special mark of distinction for the brave, unassuming soldier whom he ing force of the enemy from fine trenches on the other side, extinguishing the fire set to the wooden structure, and captur-admired so much.

News that Harrington's body will be returned for burial will be gladly received by the members of the Second Oregon. All regard the achievements of this plain, simple man, whose life was sacrificed, as far above anything else done on the islnads, with the exception of Young's work. Both were very remarkable men.

The body will probably be here before Saturday. If it does come by that date, the funeral ceremony will be held next Sunday. The burial will be in the military plot at Riverview cemetery. Harrington had no friends or relatives in the West. He had a sister somewhere in the East, of whom he rarely spoke. He said one day that, after the war was over he would likely go back to her and down, as he was getting too old to continue his world ramblings over mountains

"CYCLONE" DAVIS TALKED.

opulist Repeated Speech Two Years Ago.

James H. Davis, of Texas, the Populist 'cyclone" whose biennial ministrations to the disgruntled and discontented elements on the Pacific Coast have become matters of political history, spoke for two hours last night in the Assembly Hall of the Chamber of Commerce to about 300 people. Mr. Davis' speech was almost a repetition of those he made in Oregon in May, 1896, and 1898, and consisted mainly in arraignment of class against class. Some of his appeals to class prejudice, were clothed in a certain rude eloquence, for which the Populistic speelbinder is famous, and the cierical and sonorous manner of his diction added to this made the lengthy speech rather entertaining.

About one-third of the audience was composed of women, most of whom, no doubt, were present to hear a brief talk which was given on women's suffrage by Miss Morrow, of Chicago, but who also remained and listened attentively to the "Cyclone's" heart-to-heart talk with Popu-lists, and who smiled and applauded when his Laura Jean Libbey sentences fell un-

COMMITTEE SECRETARY.

W. S. Duniway Appointed for Oregon Republicans.

Willis S. Duniway was yesterday ap-pointed secretary of the Republican State Central Committee by Chairman Steel. Mr. Duniway has for a number of years taken an active interest in politics, and has a wide acquaintance among the Re-publicans of the state. He was private secretary in the executive office during Governor Lord's term, and has done much upon the stump in recent political campaigns. For assistant secretary of the committee, Chairman Steel appointed Major J. P. Kennedy. At the present time, Major Kennedy is the secretary of the State League of Republican Clubs and the nominee for Clerk of the Circuit Court for Multnomah County. He has recently done excellent work in the league in the way of promoting the registration of voters.

Chairman Steel is confident that the selections he has made will give satisfaction to the Republicans of Oregon. Both men are hardworking members of the party, and have stood firmly against all efforts it the organization to the endorse ment of free silver.

Graham Glass, who has been secretary of the State Central Committee for the past two years, will give his attention largely to the local campaign in Multnomah County, being a member of the City and County Central Committee.

A special committee was appointed to take into consideration the Loud bill in Congress. Tais is a measure looking in Congress. This is a measure looking to the adoption of a 1-cent rate of postage in lieu of the present 2-cent rate. Regarding the present deficit in the receipts of the Postoffice Department, it seems that that is due to the great quantity of matter carried free, which is denominated as fourth class. This being so, the reduction to a 1-cent rate would not further decrease receipts. Indeed, it is believed that the amount of mail matter

Whitney L. Boise appeared on behalf of the Doernbecher Furniture Company and Mrs. Hawthorne, and asked that the six-inch main in East Irving street and the four-inch main in the Hawthorne addition be extended to the site of the Doernbeche factory. Water was needed there for sup-plying the boilers and for fire protection and the revenue would be about $30 per month. Mrs. Hawthorne is also going to build 20 cottages in Hawthorne adoi.ion lerived. The application was referred to the operating committee and engineer for investigation, with power to act, if they deemed it best to extend the mains. R. Scott, County Commissioner of Clack amas County, appeared before the committee and requested that the Commission ers' engineer be allowed to consult with the committee's engineer in regard to formulating a pian for protecting the bank of the Sandy River where it has been worn away by the current, endangering the county bridge. Mr. Ladd stated that several members of the committee and the engineer had been out to look at the bank, and the engineer was preparing a plan for preventing further damage. Mr Scott was informed that the Commissioners' engineer was at liberty to consult with the committee's engineer and examine his plan at any time.
