HOT SHOT AT BALLOU

The Boss Writes a Letter for Publication.

HIS STATEMENTS FLATLY DENIED

Opinions of Members of Good Citizens Movement Freely and Candidly Expressed.

A communication received yesterday from O. H. Ballou, late campaign manager of the late good citizenship movement, indicates that the writer and the ment who went into the movement believing it to be purely a moral agent by which certain reforms could be effected, are not entirely in accord. The statements made in the communication are emphatically denied by all the persons whose names are mentioned, and several men who were associated with Mr. Ballou during his connection with the cause of good citizenship have no hesitancy in asserting that his purpose was to throw the cause to the interests of a Mitchell legislative ticket and the candidacy of W. A. Storey for Mayor. Mr. Ballou's letter follows:

"Portland, April 19.—(To the Editor.)—I was somewhat surprised to read in this morning's Oregonian the statement made by Rev. Edgar P. Hill, D. D., relative to the religio-political situation. If Dr. Hill made such statements as are credited to him, they are absolutely false. The reason and sole and only cause for Dr. Hill's withdrawal from the Good Government Association, as given by himself, is as follows: A few days after the first meeting of the association, Dr. Hill called upon me in person and appeared to be greatly embarrassed, saying that he had slept only an hour or two the previous night, and that Mr. Corbett, Mr. Wallace McCamant and Mr. J. Thorburn Ross, who were all members of his church, were opposed to the movement so far as the primary election was concerned, and unless such movement was stopped it would break up his congregation. He therefore urgently insisted that any action taken at the primary election by the association would have to be discontinued. This question was afterwards discussed at a meeting of the association, and Dr. Hill's views of the matter were unanimously voted down. The association thereby determined to proceed to place an independent ticket in the field at the primary election, but unfortunately a disagreement arose between the members of the executive committee as to certain modes of procedure, and the members of that committee thereafter resigned.

"A new committee was appointed, consisting of five members of the association, which last committee remained inactive and did nothing whatever under the direction of Dr. Hill and the members of the Republican party who held him under control. Thus it will be seen the very object of the Republican party was accomplished through a person pretending to be for good government. Dr. Hill says he is satisfied with the ticket nominated by the Republican party, and all I can say is that the doctor is easily satisfied. Why is it that the doctor's appreciation of a 'good ticket' now and one month last past has so radically changed? Will the doctor point out where the weeding-out has been done? Is it not more reasonable to presume that the doctor's ideas of what is a 'good ticket' have been changed instead of the ticket? I am quite certain there has been a change, but just exactly where the change is I am unable to state or particularly point out, but I believe that the only logical conclusion is that the Republican members of Dr. Hill's church have persuaded the doctor to belie his conscience, and thereby created a Republican.

"In conclusion, I wish to state that to my vision Dr. Hill occupies the same position in the Good Government Association that a piece of driftwood on the bank of the river does to the past flood.

"O. H. BALLOU."

Dr. Hill's Plain Denial.

When Dr. Hill was shown this communication yesterday he emphatically denied the statement that he had been dissuaded from remaining active in the movement by the influence of Republican members of his congregation. He soon found, he said, that an effort was being made to unite the movement with the Mitchell cause, and that a deal had been set on foot with Mayor Storey.

"While I feel at perfect liberty as a citizen," said he, "to oppose any member of my congregation for any office I choose to, and, while as a pastor I am willing to espouse the cause of reform whenever the opportunity arises, I cannot as a pastor give countenance to any movement which is purely in the interests of any faction. I made this statement to Mr. Ballou, mentioning to him the fact that certain prominent members of my congregation were taking an active part in politics, and stating that it would not be becoming in me to unite with any political movement, unless that movement was conducted purely in the interests of reform, which I supposed this was when I entered it. This, I presume, is what he means when he refers to a conversation with me.

"I did not say that unless the movement was stopped it would break up my congregation; I said nothing about any action at the primaries; and I did not say I was satisfied with the Republican ticket.

"Shortly after Mr. Ballou became connected with the movement he informed me that 'things were coming our way' better than he expected. I asked him what he meant, and he said that the Mitchell people were going to unite with us. I said we did not want the Mitchell people, or the people of any other faction, and he replied that if they wanted to come in they could do no harm. I began to see how things were going, and, believing that we were in danger of being brought into disrepute, I decided to have nothing more to do with the matter.

"Shortly after that I received a telephone message from Dr. Wells, who asked me if Ballou had authority to treat with political parties as a representative of the Good Citizens League. I said that he had not, and the doctor told me that Ballou had been to him and suggested the appointment of a conference committee consisting of Democrats and members of the league. Reports of other attempted 'deals' came to my ears, and determined me all the more to remain outside the movement.

"I speak entirely without bitterness or feeling in the matter. I am, as I have stated, willing to unite with any movement that promise reform, but I am not willing to act with any political faction."

Never Tried to Dissuade Him.

H. W. Corbett, when shown the communication, said:

"The statement that I had anything to do with dissuading Dr. Hill from taking any part in this movement is utterly false. I have never had a conversation with Dr. Hill on any political subject."

Nothing in Ballou's Yarn.

The letter was shown to J. Thorburn Ross, who said:

"Any one who knows Dr. Hill knows that it would be impossible for any one to frighten him out of any thing he undertook. Once he was in a movement he believed to be right, opposition would only make him the more determined. I never had any conversation with Dr. Hill on that subject, and I certainly never intimated to him that what he did would be displeasing to me or any other Republican in the church. I had one or two conversations with Ballou. He was anxious for a conference between the league and the Republican Central Committee, and I told him I would try to arrange one, as the central committee wanted just what the league did—good men for office. The next time I saw him he told me that he had made arrangements with Storey, and after that I dropped the matter. I wanted nothing more to do with it. I know positively that Dr. Hill was not approached on the subject of his membership in the league by any member of the congregation, and I know that no other course than an attempt at bluffing him could make him more set in his determination."

Never Talked About It.

After reading the letter, Wallace MacCamant said:

"Having seen the communication signed by O. H. Ballou, I can say that if it was the desire of its author to insinuate that I had urged Dr. Hill to withdraw from the 'Good Government movement,' I desire to say that such is not the fact. I have never at any time referred to this movement in conference with Dr. Hill; nor have I at any time since the last general election in 1898 made any request on him with reference to political action. A few days before the Republican primaries I did confer with him on the subject of nominating a suitable Councilman from the Fourth Ward, in which both he and I reside. I suggested W. T. Branch for this office, and the suggestion met with his approval. This is the only subject which was discussed between us, and at the interview there was no reference whatever to any other office."

His Statements Utterly False.

H. W. Stone, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., who was one of the original movers in a plan to unite the citizens to nominate a ticket, in speaking of the matter, said:

"That communication is utterly false. Ballou tried to make deals with the Mitchell people, with Storey, in fact, I believe with every one who had any money. He nearly brought the movement into disrepute, and three distinct and several times we got him out of it, only to find him bobbing up again in some way each time. It was, I believe, his only purpose to use the league for his own personal interests, and when the members found this out, they were soon glad to be rid of him."

Wanted to Support Storey.

Mr. Stone's assistant, Oscar Cox, served for a time on a committee with Mr. Ballou, and had an opportunity to see the objects which the latter was playing for.

"He came to me one day," said Mr. Cox, yesterday, "and told me that he wanted the league to support Storey.

"'If that is what you are going to do,' said I, 'I will resign.' He said he thought that was for the best interests of all concerned, and, feeling that he either had been misinformed concerning Storey, or was in some kind of a deal with him, I withdrew from the committee, as did Mr. Davis, the other member. What other deals he may have made or was intending to make I cannot say, but I was satisfied that he was working for his own selfish interests, and I decided to have nothing more to do with him. He was finally forced to resign, but got back somehow or other, and we turned him down again. What he has to do with the matter now I do not know."

For City Offices Only.

The communication was shown to Mr. L. B. Cox, one of the members of the executive committee of the Good Government organization, and he was asked if he could throw any light upon the controversy outlined by the communication. He replied that he could not; that the movement had been presented to him in the first instance by Dr. Hill and Mr. Ballou, at which time there did not seem to be any line of action adopted by the Good Government organization. It was represented by these gentlemen that this organization intended to bring its influence to bear only upon the municipal offices and the office of District Attorney. Mr. Cox was requested to serve as a member of the executive committee, it having been represented to him that he had been chosen at some previous meeting as a member of this committee. He did not determine to act upon the committee for some time, nor until the movement had formulated more definite plans than had been at first outlined to him. The culmination of the matter and the basis upon which he agreed to serve upon the committee was that all the functions of the Good Government movement were to be merged in the executive committee of five persons, to-wit, William M. Ladd, E. C. Bronaugh, David Dalgleish, Oscar M. Cox and L. B. Cox. The action which the committee understood it was to take was to go alike to the controlling influences in all of the political parties and demand that good nominations should be made for the respective municipal offices and for the office of District Attorney. If all parties acceded to this demand and placed good men in the field as candidates, the members of the Good Government organization were to be free to vote their political preferences. If, on the other hand, one party made a good nomination in the judgment of the committee and other parties made obnoxious nominations, then the committee was to recommend to the members of the Good Government organization that they should support the candidate who had been approved by its committee and oppose the one who had been condemned by the committee. This was the sum and substance of the whole matter, as Mr. Cox agreed to take hold of it and serve upon the committee.

TWO NOMINEES DECLINE.

Democratic Ticket a Loser—Legislative Candidates Surprised.

Two of the nominees of the Democratic Convention whose labors were concluded Thursday night made haste to decline the honors which had sought them out. These were W. L. Brewster, nominated for City Attorney, and George F. Holman, who was selected to run as the Democratic candidate for Clerk of the Circuit Court. Beyond stating that they would not run, neither had any statement to make, but it is understood that they had assured the members of the convention that they would take the nominations under no circumstances, and the delegates, believing that no Democrat would really refuse anything when it was offered him, nominated them any way. The central committee, which has power to fill all vacancies on the ticket, was out late last night with a locomotive headlight looking for some one to run in their places, but at last accounts had been unsuccessful.

Nominations for most of the fusion Legislative ticket seemed to have been a surprise both to the nominees and to their friends. The Oregonian furnished more than one with the first notice of his greatness. Acceptance of the honor was not always, nor is yet, a matter of course. Among the Republican members, there was manifest a disposition to wait for the other Republican members to act before pledging individual acceptance. All day those interested argued that D. P. Thompson would and would not accept the nomination. One man would be met who would assert with certainty that Mr. Thompson would act, while the next moment a man would be met who had a statement direct that he would not. The statement by Mr. Thompson in The Oregonian convinced many that he had no purpose or desire to become a candidate, while others read between the lines a subtle indication of a purpose to become a candidate under proper influence.

Dr. A. C. Smith said that he had accepted the nomination, an admission that contrasted strongly with the numerous conditions imposed by others before making a statement either way. He said, being a Democrat, of course he had consented to enter the race.

Otto Schuman said he had never attended a political convention, and was not aware that his name was being considered as a candidate. When the list printed in The Oregonian came to his attention he was very much astonished, and was not ready yesterday to state where he stood in regard to the candidacy. His politics in National affairs had been of the Democratic persuasion.

J. J. Shipley said his nomination was a complete surprise, and he had not given the matter sufficient thought to determine whether he would accept or not. This decision rested largely on who and what the ticket was, which he would have to investigate further before reaching a final conclusion.

C. W. Nottingham said his honor came unsought. He claimed to be as ardent a Republican as there was in the State of Oregon, gold standard through and through, indorsing the McKinley Administration fully, which convictions would not be altered by the acceptance of the nomination. Mr. Nottingham has been one of the workers in the Good Government movement.

As for support of the hybrid ticket, the Democracy seemed, in some instances, at least, to be bracing to swallow the pill. Some of those who opposed fusion in the convention said their fight would extend no further. When the ticket was made out they would feel constrained to work for it. There are several who insist that they are Democrats, pure and simple, for principle rather than office, and that no amount of conjurations will affect their purpose to steer clear of these entanglements. George Hutchin, W. L. Gatens and C. K. Henry said they would stand by the ticket.

ONE MORE DAY OF SHOW

FINE DOGS WILL BE ON PARADE TODAY.

List of Awards Completed Yesterday —Special Children's Matinee This Afternoon.

But one more day of the Portland Kennel Club's bench show of this season remains for the people of Portland. This evening the fine collection of blooded dogs will be seen for the last time this year in exhibition here. Yesterday Judge Payne completed the awarding of medals and diplomas to the various classes, a work of much magnitude and difficulty, which was naturally attended by disappointment for some. This morning at 10:30 o'clock will begin the judging for the special prizes, around which attaches the greatest interest. These special prizes consist of silver cups, plates and such other medals as private individuals have seen fit to offer as encouragement to the breeding of fine dogs. While the awards of the past three days practically settle the possession of the private prizes, there yet remains considerable doubt on details, which will be decided by the judge today. This afternoon, beginning at 2 o'clock, there will be a matinee for children, when the trained dogs will perform. It is probable that the cups and other individual prizes will be delivered to the winners this evening, which will be an occasion of great interest. In this award the prize for the best decorated kennel will be included.

Two dogs became champions by their triumphs at the bench show closing today. These are Count Dick F., the English setter belonging to C. D. Stimson, of Seattle, and Count Mack, the Irish setter, exhibited by Tudor J. A. Tiedemann, of Portland. It will be of further interest to know that Mr. Tiedemann's dog is a Portland dog in nearly every sense, as we was brought here when a very young pup. He has won his championship title without a single defeat. The most interesting animal in the show is Countess Nobie, belonging to Judge Payne. She is merely here on exhibition, and is not in the competition in any manner. Countess Noble has all the honors the proudest dog could ask for. She has won 26 medals, silver and gold cups in bench shows, two field trials, and is the dam of three bench-show champions. One of her illustrious progeny, Queen of Counts, occupied the same kennel with her, and appeared in the championship class. This is but one or two of the blue bloods in the show.

To a person who is not particularly enamored with dogs, the bench show seems in point of noise much like a Populist convention. A grouty old chap who visited the show yesterday was escorted around by a friend and seemed impressed by several things. He wanted to know why so many of the dogs kept up such an incessant barking and why so many of their owners seemed inclined the same way. He was told that it was because there were not prizes enough to go around, which satisfied him. He was amused at seeing over a den of particularly snappy-looking fox terriers a card bearing the inscription, "Don't handle the dogs." He remarked that putting the card there seemed to him a work of supererrogation. He admired the great big fat St. Bernard dogs lolling in their pens, but was of opinion that if they were sent out in a snow storm on the Mount St. Gothard pass to rescue belated travelers, it would take all the monks at the Hospice of the great St. Bernard to get them back.

He looked at a monstrous brindled Great Dane dog for some time and quoted: "There sat auld Nick in shape of beast; a towsy tike, big, grim and large." A tiny Italian greyhound, a mere shadow, which a breath would blow away, attracted his attention, but not favorably. A wall-eyed, white-faced, brindled bulldog, of genuine French breed, he voted the ugliest beast in the room and could not understand why it had a blue ribbon, nor why there were no French poodles present. Pugs and Japanese spaniels be passed with a snort of contempt, but gazed long and earnestly at several rusty, frosty looking "yaller" dogs, which an attendant told him were Irish "terriers." He said he now knew why some of our most patriotic and eloquent citizens were given the same title. Finally, when he got among the Scotch collies, he began to smile approval, and when he saw the English setters and pointers, he was delighted, and launched out into a dissertation on the good qualities of the Anglo-Saxon race, which, he said, extended even to their dogs and made them superior to French, Italian and all other Continental dogs.

A pretty little loving cup of solid silver, offered by Captain W. J. Riley as a prize for the best pointer or setter exhibited at the dog show, was not accepted by the manager, on the ground that it brought two classes of dogs into competition. Captain Riley is perfectly willing that it should be made one of the special prizes to be awarded today, and an endeavor will be made to have this done. It seems a pity that any prize offered should be rejected when there are so many more dogs than prizes.

In the following awards, H. T. Payne was judge of all classes. The awards for first, second and third prizes were: First, silver medal; second, diploma; third, diploma. This applies all through the awards in the following list. The standing of the dog is given first, the dog's name second and the owner's name and residence third:
