As a result, all the business portion of the town, and, in fact, the greater part of the townsite, is protected by a clause in the early deeds to the property which prohibits forever the sale of intoxicating liquer on the premises. Whatever may be said on the general question of prohibition there can hardly be any question in the minds of well-disposed and thoughtful people as to the wisdom of throwing every possible safeguard against the evils of possible safeguard against the evils of intemperance and associated vices around young people away from home in courses of study. The common sentiment in re-gard to this is indicated by the legal en-actments established by our own and many other states looking toward the safeguarding of this class of young peo-ple $10,000

ple. The views of the founders of Forest Ine views of the founders of forest Grove in regard to this matter have pre-valled in the town up to the present time, and there is good ground for believing that they will continue to prevail. It is true that under cover of legitimate business there has been some illegal sale of liquor, as there has been law-breaking in other respects, and at times this has become so flagrant as to call for legal ac-tion against the offenders, but there has never been a time when any considerable number of the permanent residents and property-holders of the town would consent to change our present condition for that of the saloon town. There is here, as everywhere else, an element in favor of the open salon, but they have been constantly baffled in the effort to secure this object of their desire by the much larger number of business men and prop-etty-holders who are unalterably apposed erty-holders who are unalterably opposed to the saloon in Forest Grove.

This much needs to be said in answer to Inquiries which have been called forth by the reports of the "liquor agitation" here which have constituted so large a part of the items sent by the Forest Grove cor-respondent to The Oregonian for the past few months. These reports will be liber-ally discounted when it is understood that the writer of them is a pronounced advo-cate of the saloon and one of the most active agitators for the establishment of that business here. Under these circumstances, perhaps he should not be to judged if his writings on this have taken color from his perharahiy sonal opinion so as to greatly distort the sonal opinion so as to greatly distort the facts at times. Quite a number of those who oppose the saloon in this community are not pro-hibitionists in the general acceptance of the term, but, recognizing the fact that the interests of the town and college are increased by bulkes that the kind of inseparable, they believe that the kind of population which the introduction of the saloon would attract and the general low-ering of moral standards that would re-sult would work greatly to the injury of both, and so they continue to oppose the

In addition to this, it is generally recognized that Forest Grove is to be pre-emi-nently a residence town, a town of homes, as distinguished from a commercial or manufacturing town. The natural beauty of its site and surroundings, the fact that

NOTABLE ALASKAN TRIP.

Crossed Over to the Mackensle Country and Back to the Tanana.

WASHINGTON, April 16.-Banning Aus tin has written an account of an Alaskan trip made by a party under his leadership last year. The party left Dawson City, N. W. T., March 25, 1859, followed up the Klondike River a distance of 300 miles to its source, thence passed through the Rocky Mountains to the headwaters of the Peel River, and down this river to its junction with the Mackenzie, this last being a very difficult and dangerous one, through interminable canyons and rapids almost its entire length, a distance of fully 600 miles. The party was compelled to build three boats in making the trip, be-cause of the obstacles encountered. Upon their arrival at Fort McPherson, on the 4th of July, on the Mackenzie they found about 200 Indians trading at the Hudson's Bay Company's post, who would not be-lieve they had performed the feat until furnished a sketch of the route followed. which settled all doubts. The Indians then called them "much brave white men," and the entire tribe shook hands with them.

At this store they procured a few sup-plies, and retraced their steps up Peel River to Rat River, thence up Rat River to its source, and again passed over the Rocky Mountains to the headwaters of the north fork of the Porcupine, when they built another boat; thence down the Porcupine to Fort Tukon, on the Yukon who desire to establish a perpetual me-morial to Barbara Guggenheim, the late wife and mother of the donors.
